Doughton, Harrison Ask Treasury to Map Tax Cuts

Congress' Finance Chiefs Wrest Lead From Roosevelt In 'Appeasement'

Wresting the lead from the Administration in a concerted effort to restore business confidence, Democratic chairmen of two powerful Congressional committees yesterday called on the Treasury for tax-easing recommendations.

Demands for "more than lip service" in revival of industry and renewed bids for drastic cuts in Government spending followed from other influential members of the Congressional economy bloc.

A letter asking definite recommendations for business tax modifications after March 15 was sent to Treasury Secretary Morgenthau by Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means group.

Wood to Advise Hopkins

A business appeasement move in full swing, carried far beyond the opening overtures of the President and key men in his Administration, will await the President when he returns to Washington today.

As the drive gathered impetus, Gen. R. E. Wood, of Chicago, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., was appointed by Commerce Secretary Hopkins as official adviser on business relations. Wood will serve on a temporary basis, without title or administrative duties.

Other developments:

The Monopoly Committee heard the suggestion from Jerome Frank, SEC member, that the Federal Trade Commission make advance decisions on legality of certain business practices. William T. Kelley, chief counsel of the agency, replied that Congress shouldn't "give such power to any commission."

Debt Fight Forecast

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, warned that if the Administration attempts to raise the legal debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $50,000,000,000 "I predict this will become one of the major battles of the session." Byrd praised Harrison's "timely warning of the inevitable disasters to follow continuance of the reckless effort to spend ourselves into prosperity on borrowed money"

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, expressed "gratification" at Administration assurances to business but said it will "take more than lip-service to revive our industrial system." Van Nuys declared withdrawal of the nomination of Thomas R. Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive, to the Interstate Commerce Commission "will do more to start private capital to work than all the post-prandial oratory of this effervescent age."

The Joint Letter

The joint tax letter by Harrison and Doughton followed the Mississippi Senator's declaration Thursday for "radical" cuts in expenditures, removal of tax deterrents to business and abandonment of another $5,000,000,000 increase in the legal debt limit.

The two Senate and House Committee chairmen pledged their cooperation toward helping business, through removal of burdensome tax law provisions. They voiced belief that both their committees were in hearty sympathy with the President's recently announced views concerning business and Government co-operation.

And they particularly approved the recent statements by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Commerce Secretary Hopkins expressing a desire to aid business through elimination of tax law deterrents.

"As chairmen of the respective committees having to deal with the subject of taxation in the Congress, and believing that we express the Ghosts of old sailing vessels that more than a century ago carried the flag of the United States to the seven seas were envisaged at Anacostia Naval Air Station yesterday afternoon in christening a 40-ton silver-toned ship that will inaugurate this country's race for air supremacy of the Atlantic.

Water from the seas the old ships had sailed bathed the sides of the ship as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt broke the bottle that contained it in christening the leviathan of the Pan-American Airways, the Yankee Clipper.

Soviet Accepts Steinhardt As U. S. Envoy

Washington Takes It For Granted He Will Get the Appointment

By the United Press.

Moscow, March 3. — Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador to Peru, who may be named to the vacant ambassadorial post in Moscow, has been approved by the Soviet government, it was learned tonight.

Steinhardt, a nephew of Samuel Untermyer and a director of several international corporations, has served two ambassadorial terms under President Roosevelt, first as Minister to Sweden from 1933 to 1937, and at Lima as Ambassador since 1937.

The United States has had no Ambassador in Moscow since January 7, 1938, when Ambassador Joseph E. Davies was transferred to Brussels.

State Department officials last night would make no comment on reports that Soviet Russia had approved selection of Steinhardt to be Ambassador to Russia, but it was

Runaway Driver Grilled in Death Of Caldwell Boy

A runaway driver, captured after his car caromed off a parked auto in 2600 block of Nichols street southeast, was being investigated by the homicide squad last night in connection with the hit-run killing of Millard F. Caldwell, 12, son of the Florida Representative, February 3.

The motorist was arrested by cruiser car police who saw the crash. Police said they found an extra set of plates under the driver's seat, and that the fenders, front bumper and headlights were dented and a handle missing from one of the doors.

Smuggling At Occoquan Ousts 2 Guards

4 Others Suspended, Reprimanded for Fraternizing

Climaxing a three months' investigation of smuggling activities at the Occoquan Workhouse, penal officials yesterday dismissed two guards, suspended four others and severely reprimanded a fifth.

Ray L. Huff, superintendent of the District of Columbia penal institutions, revealed the guards involved had not only "fraternized with inmates" but in one case "brought in whisky, knowing it was in violation of the rules."

Discharged officers are George L. Wheeler and Clyde Servis. Officer Ernest J. Muller was reprimanded for "conduct unbecoming an officer in that he fraternized with inmates."

Suspended Officers

Suspended officers are Roy C. Mentzer, ten days; John R. Gasque, ten days; Voyle E. James, five days, and Gary H. Cassidy, five days.

Supt. Huff said Officer Wheeler admitted he "brought candy on the Reservation at the instigation of" a prisoner, and also that he had "a prisoner type letters for him."

He said Officer Servis admitted he "brought whisky for his own consumption to his room in the quarters at a time before Christmas."

Inmate Got No Liquor

"This is the only whisky that shows in any way in the investigation," he said.

He said that although one of the officers was accosted by an inmate to bring in some whisky, this was not accomplished.

"Further investigation developed that an officer did bring in candy which was given an inmate," Huff reported.

Street pointed out it is very easy to cache dope in candy and "a pistol in a box of candy."

Huff said an empty pint whisky bottle found in a room adjacent to the inmates' sleeping quarters "did not come from any institution source."

Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, to whom the report was submitted, said he was informed by Huff that "empty whisky bottles are sometimes used to bring milk to the cat and in some instances to raise flowers."

Sage of Hungrytown Wants Drinkers Licensed

Berlin, Md., March 3 (AP).—A one-man movement for a "drinker's bill" which would require liquor imbibers to purchase a $2 consumer's license has been started in Worcester County.

The sponsor is Bill Timmons, farmer known to Worcester Countians as the sage of Hungrytown, a small village in West Berlin district. The license would have to be displayed every time a person brought a drink of beer or liquor.

Pope's First Broadcast Is Peace Plea

Follows Predecessor's Course; Coronation Set for March 12; Election Unanimous

By William Hillman
International News Writer.

Vatican City, March 3.—Pope Pius XII, in an eloquent appeal for peace which embodied a special prayer for the guidance of the world's leaders, tonight made it clear he would follow a firm course along the path set by his predecessor.

The new Pontiff established precedent in so speedily setting forth his program, which inferentially also will conform to Pope Pius XI's unremitting fight for the freedom of individual conscience.

Pius spoke after announcing he had chosen Sunday, March 12, as the date of his coronation as the 262d supreme Pontiff on the throne of St. Peter.

In a strong, clear voice, less than 24 hours after his selection as Pope, he broadcast over the radio to all the world his blessings to the hierarchy, the clergy, the laity, and to those outside the church then added, his words inspired by the memory of his mentor, Pius XI:

"We wish to add an augury and an invitation to peace."

"Unarmed But Faithful"

The 63-year-old Pope, using for the first time the pontifical "we," recognized the work facing him will be difficult.

"There is before us a vision of the immense ills which travail the world and to whose succor the Blessed God has sent us unarmed but faithful," he said.

With that thought in mind, the gentle pastor of 350,000,000 Roman Catholics asked for the establishment and preservation of peace, the aid of all the world rulers, democratic, dictatorial, and monarchical, saying:

"We raise to Christ a special prayer for all those to whom falls the high honor and grave weight of guiding peoples along the ways to prosperity and progress."

Tedeschini May Get Post

The first clew to the Pope's attitude towards repression of Catholic activities in totalitarian states came in a brief but significant blessing of the work of the Catholic Action organization, which Pius XI often called "the apple of our eye."

Charges by the Fascist regime that the Catholic Action in Italy was engaged in political activities frequently brought the Vatican and the Italian government into open dispute. When, finally, Blackshirts raided Catholic action branches and tried to ban the organization, the Pope flatly accused Premier Mussolini of violating the Vatican Rome concordat.

To carry on his former diplomatic post as papal secretary of state, it now appears likely the Pope may appoint Federico Cardinal Tedeschini, who was undersecretary of state during the World War.

Anderson School Ban Is Rescinded

School Board Reverses Ruling To Permit Concert Easter Sunday

By Howard F. Wentworth.
Post Staff Writer.

After a heated session, the Board of Education yesterday rescinded its earlier action and voted to permit Marian Anderson, noted colored contralto, to sing in the Central High School Auditorium Easter Sunday.

With two dissenting votes, the board agreed to suspend rules governing Washington's dual (white and colored) school system and the use of school buildings for profit-making enterprises in order to grant permission for the concert.

It was strongly pointed out, however, that in reversing its first decision, the board was in "no way opening the door for the beginning of a new policy."

Not to Be a Precedent

On the basis that the problem of providing Marian Anderson with a place for her concert had reached "emergency" proportions, the board agreed to grant her the use of Central High School providing:

"That positive and definite assurance and agreement will be given that the concession will not be taken as a precedent and that the Board of Education will not in the future again be asked to depart from the principle of a dual system of schools and school facilities."

Yesterday's action was predicated upon a report submitted by the committee on community use of buildings, headed by C. Melvin Sharpe, newly appointed member of the board. After agreeing several days ago to reconsider the Anderson ban, it was to this committee the board turned for recommendations.

Although the Sharpe report—which was adopted by a majority vote—stressed the danger to future policies of the board should Miss Anderson be permitted to sing at Central, it at the same time cited the existing "emergency" and recommended that a concession be made

Governed by Congress

"The committee believes," stated the report, "that a concession now, as proof of good will to Marian Anderson and the colored people of the District, will serve to remove this question from public discussion. We believe, further, that if there are in this question now before us implications that the granting of this request may in the future be construed as a step toward interchangeable use of white and colored schools, then it should be denied. The board is now operating under the law of Congress creating the dual system and only Congress can change it."

Incidents of bitter debate marked the meeting. After Sharpe submitted his report, the committee on community use of buildings adjourned and the board went into immediate session to decide the question.

When the question of future re-

Half Billion for Army Voted; Roosevelt Asks 2 Indies Naval Bases

President, Landing From Fleet, Says War Game Proved Need At Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands; Arrives Here This Morning

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, S. C., March 3.—President Roosevelt returned from his two-week voyage in Southern waters today with a declaration the history-making fleet maneuvers had been highly satisfactory and had proved among other things the necessity for establishing naval bases at San Juan, P. R., and St. Thomas, V. I.

The tanned Chief Executive talked jovially with reporters aboard the cruiser Houston for an hour before leaving the ship late in the day to entrain for Washington. He is due tomorrow morning to address a joint memorial session of Congress.

He said many lessons had been gained in this year's war games, but it could not be said which side won. No such decision is ever made in the annual maneuvers, he added, because too many theoretical phases may present an entirely different picture in actual conflict.

He said he was satisfied with the operation of both attacking and defending fleets.

Incidentally, he told of plans to send several historic naval vessels to Washington to be anchored beside a new Navy Department Building along the Potomac.

Describes War Games

Replying to a question about the war games, in which the Houston participated as a unit of the defending fleet, he said he was satisfied they disclosed no deficiencies that would warrant altering the present naval building program.

One of the difficulties in the way of deciding a "victor," he said, was the fact that ships marked by the umpire as "destroyed" in early operations were restored to duty for the final main "battle." Another was the fact that theoretical "land areas" and "islands" were marked out at sea.

Besides the lesson taught with respect to needs for new naval bases, he said the games answered new fueling questions, such as the number of fueling ships needed for a defense of the kind tried out in "fleet problem 20."

He added the games were important because they took place in an entirely new area, with more units than ever before used. He pointed out previous maneuvers around the West Indies had taken place in the Caribbean under what he called an inner defense plan, whereas the current maneuvers were far outside this region.

Avoids Being "Sunk"

While past games had taken in the Panama Canal defenses and the area all the way from Key West to Venezuela, the maneuvers just concluded covered a 2,000-mile zone out in the Atlantic north and east of the West Indies.

The President explained that on the days he sent no message to the press at Miami the Houston was about to get a message from the contending fleets and it had to move several hundred miles to a "land area" to keep from getting "sunk" itself.

He said it was very difficult to describe the maneuvers so laymen would not get a false impression. To understand them, he said, the public must eliminate from its mind any idea of the "attack" as coming from a particular nation; also actual geographical considerations must be eliminated.

Receives Visitors

The easiest way to put it, he added, was to assume a stretch of land roughly 2,000 miles long with certain "islands" and imaginary contours. An attacking fleet is located 1,500 miles away with any number of objectives, such as landing an army, establishing bases or weakening the scouting and air forces with the ultimate hope of destroying the main body of the defending fleet.

The Houston, her forward stack and gun turret still wearing the bright yellow paint that distinguished her as a unit of the defending fleet, put into Charleston shortly before 1 p. m., two hours ahead of schedule.

The President, dressed in a gray business suit and light brown hat,

House Passes Bill in 14 Minutes; Clark Calls Stories of Nazi Air Strength 'Fable,' 'Bluff,' Forcing Plane Measure Delay

By Robert C. Albright.

The $499,857,936 War Department appropriation bill, providing first funds to tool industry for the new air defense program, yesterday received the speediest House approval on record for military appropriations.

Unamended, the largest single peacetime Army outlay was passed by a voice vote after only 14 minutes of consideration.

Chairman Snyder, of the sub-committee handling the measure, called it "a firm expression of America's attitude toward dictatorships which attempt to disturb this Nation's peace."

"It was the best answer the American people could have given of their attitude toward national defense and being prepared if any foreign foe should choose to violate our shores," said the exuberant chairman.

In addition to regular War Department supplies, the bill provides for immediate construction of 565 planes as the first increment on the new aircraft authorization being debated in the Senate. In addition, another 219 planes would be constructed in the fiscal year.

Across the Capitol, Army expansion bill provision for an authorized Army air strength of 6,000 planes was warmly defended and opposed. A speech by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, for the 5,500 plane limitation previously imposed by the House, brought replies from Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, and Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a member of the group.

Calls Nazi Strength "Bluff"

Senator Clark, who proposed an amendment to the Senate bill to hold the Army air force to 5,500 planes, called the 500 additional authorization "simply a gratuitous attempt on the part of the Army and the supporters of tremendous armament to take an additional bite." Clark called reports of a vast German air fleet part "fable" and part "bluff."

He was attacked on both statements by Sheppard and Lee. Sheppard said that the proposed 6,000 plane limitation allowed for "not a single dollar" more than the $300,000,000 proposed by the President for the Army air corps in his national defense message, and the increase was necessary to provide "an average" of 5,500 planes.

"After the entire amount proposed here is spent, it will provide a front line fighting force of only 2,000 planes," Sheppard said. "That is a very modest and conservative force."

Denies "War Lord" Charge

Lee said the committee was informed by experts that Germany has "atleast" 9,000 planes, while some placed the German air force at 18,000.

"This provides only enough planes for America to repel attack," said Lee. "It is not enough to fight a major war, but only the leanest possible preparation for defense. We need only to look at Ethiopia to know that weakness invites war."

Lee charged an "attempt is being made here to call us 'war lords' when we ask only enough planes to repel bombs and death from the skies."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, joined Clark in a Senate attack on the President's foreign policy. Nye, concluding a speech begun a day earlier, argued that the President has the power to precipitate war through his conduct of foreign policy. Nye declared building up of "our military machine

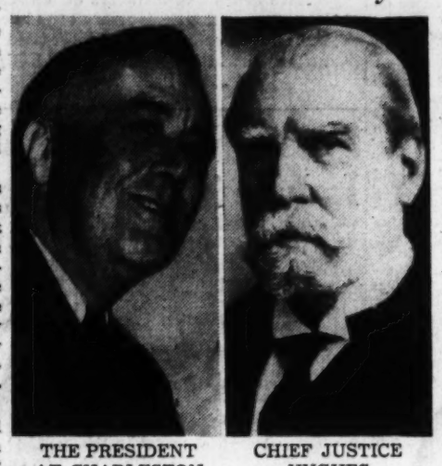
Representative Government To Celebrate Its Birthday



THE PRESIDENT AT CHARLESTON | CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES

Roosevelt, Hughes To Join Congress In Sesquicentennial

President Roosevelt, Chief Justice Hughes and the presiding officers of the Senate and House will lead a galaxy of the highest officials of the Government in the House at noon today in a unique and colorful ceremony commemorating the 150th anniversary of the first session of the Congress of the United States.

The heads of each of the three branches of the Government—legislative, executive and judicial—will speak from the rostrum of the House for the first time in history.

Their audience will include members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, Senate, House, Diplomatic Corps, the highest ranking officers of the armed forces—headed by Gen. Pershing — Commissioners of the District of Columbia and special guests.

Never before, according to Capitol historians, has the Congress formally celebrated its own birthday. Its 50th, 100th and 125th anniversaries have gone by with hardly a ripple, but its sesquicentennial bids fair to linger long in memory. Representative Sol Bloom is director of arrangements.

Because of the limited size of the hall of the House of Representatives, where the 90-minute ceremony will be held, the audience

Disabled Sealer, 132 Aboard, Towed Safely to Harbor

St. Johns, Newfoundland, March 3 (U.P.).—Capt. John Badcock and his crew of 131, all who refused to abandon the sealer Ranger, tonight won their struggle to save their disabled craft as well as themselves.

The Ranger, kept afloat two days by the bailing of her crew, reached harbor safely. The British freighter Newfoundland and the S. S. Imogene, sharing honors for the rescue, hauled the Ranger into the haven at Trepassey.

Even there the captain and his crew refused to leave the Ranger. Although many of her fittings were jettisoned in the fight to keep her above the lashing waves, they chose her sparse accomodations to get some badly needed rest

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt headed the list of distinguished honor guests and some 400 others last night as the Women's National Press Club forecast in satire "Our Town" of Washington during the forthcoming visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain.

Lady Lindsay, American-born wife of the British Ambassador to the United States, dean of the diplomatic ladies, and women leaders in politics, arts, science, sports, journalism, and Washington official, residential, and diplomatic society, were among the guests.

Mrs. Roosevelt, only wife of a President to be a member of the club, concluded the program with an off-the-record speech. She was introduced by Hope Ridings Miller, president of the club and society editor of The Washington Post.

After the dinner, the footlights were turned up on a bare stage. An interlocutor strolled across the stage, explained to the guests:

"Our show tonight is called 'Our Town.' We swiped the idea from last year's Pulitzer Prize play by Thornton Wilder, the play that didn't have any scenery. We thought that no scenery idea was a wow; helps us balance our budget."

The Symphony Emergency

To the Editor of The Post:

THE PEOPLE OF WASHINGTON FACE A CULTURAL CRISIS. GREAT DANGER CONFRONTS THE NATIONAL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

We lack $19,485 of the estimated amount necessary to carry on next season. This amount must be raised by March 15, because that is the final date on which the contract that has been arranged with the musicians can be signed. Until the required amount is pledged this contract cannot be signed.

In order that this grave situation may be fully discussed, an emergency meeting will be held Tuesday evening, March 7, at 8 o'clock at the United States Chamber of Commerce, corner of H and Connecticut avenue northwest.

I appeal to all members, workers and friends of the National Symphony Orchestra to attend this meeting.

Your help and co-operation in calling this emergency to the attention of your readers will be deeply appreciated.

Sincerely,
DR. WILLIAM McCLELLAN, President,
National Symphony Orchestra Association.

Oil Companies Agree on Deal With Mexico

Willing to Give Up Title to Properties For Long Leases

By Walter Fitzmaurice.

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

The British and American oil companies have agreed to renounce all title to their expropriated Mexican properties in return for a long term operating lease, it was learned yesterday.

The final "take it or leave it" offer has been taken to Mexico City by Donald R. Richberg, counsel for the Standard group of companies, who has been seeking interviews with President Cardenas, Finance Minister Suarez and other Mexican officials.

An authoritative source disclosed the proposition embodies concessions substantially greater than those set forth in a previous plan. This latter would have given the companies a lien on the properties until they had reimbursed themselves by domestic and off-shore sales, then split the ownership and management equally between them and the government.

Leases 30 to 50 Years

The Richberg proposal would give the companies a lease running from 30 to 50 years. At its expiration, the properties would go to the government, free and unencumbered. The government would then have the option of operation by itself or any lessee it chose on its own terms.

Royalties, taxes and wages to be paid during the life of the lease would be incorporated in a contract. This, in turn, would become part of a Mexican-American commercial treaty, in effect making the United States Government a party to and guarantor of the contract's fulfillment.

The profits of the leasehold operations aside, the companies' only reimbursement for expropriation would be the payment by the government of an arbitrated sum in compensation for machinery depreciation and depletion of reserves occurring in the interval from expropriation to the initiation of the lease.

Voids Calvo Clauses

Incorporation of the contract into a treaty would void the so-called Calvo clauses, under which foreign companies in Mexico renounce the right to invoke the diplomatic intervention of their governments in disputes with Mexico.

State Department quarters reportedly were irritated at the "cold-shouldering" Richberg encountered on arrival in Mexico City. Cardenas, at whose invitation he made the journey, was said in dispatches to have gone fishing at Guadalajara.

Secretary Hull pointedly told his press conference the department hoped Richberg would be accorded the courtesy and consideration befitting his mission.

Richberg, it was understood, was authorized to inform Cardenas that President Roosevelt disapproves Mexico's expropriation of American properties, when it lacks the means to give prompt, just and adequate payment. Before leaving, Richberg conferred at length with Mr. Roosevelt.

Dutch Windmills More Efficient, Society Told

Streamlined windmills, three times as efficient as their predecessors, now are working so well for Holland that their number has been cut from 7,500 to 2,400, Mrs. Virginia Pierce Delgado told the National Geographic Society last night in Constitution Hall. She is honorary secretary of the Netherlands-America Foundation.

"The windmills are so important," she said, "that if they stopped pumping for 24 hours, large areas of the Netherlands would be under water . . . New design has practically tripled their power."

Not only do the Dutch maintain a worldwide trade in bulbs and plants, Mrs. Delgado said, but they have developed a market for cut flowers throughout Europe, even selling blossoms to Spain at the height of the revolution. Russia alone, she said, is not a customer for flowers.

President Asks Industrial Pay Rises in South

Family Income Boost Would Aid Whole Country, He Says

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, S. C., March 3.—President Roosevelt came out again today for higher industrial wages in the South, asserting increased purchasing power for Southern people must be brought about if progress is to be made toward solving the Nation's "economic problem No. 1."

Questioned by Charleston reporters during an interview aboard the cruiser Houston, the Chief Executive said he had seen no change yet (he emphasized the word "yet") in this problem.

He said he hoped there was going to be a change for the better, and he was going to do all he could to help bring this about.

Cash Income Too Low

There was no one cure-all, he said, such as reforming freight rates to eliminate differentials against the South. The real fact is, he added, that remuneration for all classes of workers has got to be increased.

He pointed out that industrial wheels do not move so long as the average Southern family receives only $200 or $300 cash income annually. With such income, he said the average family cannot buy the necessities of life, and it also reacts harmfully on the purchasing power of the local merchant and professional man.

The Southern population as a whole was so far below the rest of the Nation economically, he said, that there was very little inducement for a manufacturer to set up a factory in the South to make things used by Southern people.

Wouldn't Change WPA Pay

Even an increase of 50 per cent in the family income, he added, would mean more things produced for Southern consumption, and more purchases from the North with consequent increased buying power there for Southern raw materials such as cotton, fruits and vegetables.

In reply to a question he said he was not advocating elimination of wage differentials between the North and South on WPA labor because that was only a small part of the South's economic structure. He agreed with a local reporter's observation that WPA wages in the South, however, were higher than those on the farm.

Morgenthau Denies Plane Sale Financing

Says Stabilization Fund Never Has Been Used But to Bolster Dollar

By International News Service.

The Government's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund is being used to stabilize the dollar, "nothing else," Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told the House Coinage Committee yesterday.

He flatly denied the Administration has used the fund either to finance foreign purchases of armaments in this country or to "rig" the stock market for Federal bonds. Purchase of American-made planes by France and Great Britain is being arranged by establishing banking credits in New York, he said.

U. S. Bond Holding Small

Morgenthau, who for three days has been dividing his time between the Senate Banking and Currency Committee and the House Committee on Coinage, volunteered the information that the Federal stabilization fund now owns $15,000,000 in United States Treasury issues and at one time had holdings of $31,000,000.

Purchase of the Government bonds was "to give us a little income," Morgenthau said. "Later we found we didn't need that much income, and we have reduced our holdings to $15,000,000. We have never used the fund to 'rig' the market on Government bonds and I would not favor it," the Secretary declared.

Upholds Johnson Act

Asked by Representative Andersen (Republican), of Minnesota, if the fund has been used to help any country buy armaments in this country, Morgenthau replied:

"I can answer under oath that the answer is 'no.' And as long as I am Secretary it won't be. I can further say that I am in full sympathy with the Johnson act and as long I have been Secretary, it has never been violated in any respect."

The Johnson act prohibits loans, private or governmental, to any nation which is in default on its war debts.

He denied the fund has ever been used to support the stock market through purchase of common or preferred stocks, which he said the Treasury could not legally do, and declared he had "carefully and scrupulously" avoided using the fund to aid any nation to stabilize its currency.

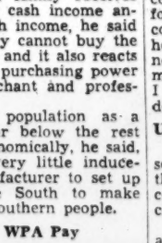
Barkley Hails President on Sixth Anniversary Of Inauguration as Conqueror of Depression

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic Senate leader, yesterday noted the sixth anniversary today of President Roosevelt's inauguration by saying the President pulled the United States out of the depression and built a firm foundation for future prosperity.



BARKLEY

"We have come through this period vigorous and unafraid, untroubled by the menacing problems that confront less fortunate nations," Barkley said in a prepared statement, which continued:

"Substituting confidence for caution and courage for timidity, Mr. Roosevelt rode out the storm by brilliant and decisive leadership.

"He conquered the depression and restored economic progress. The Nation has given its wholehearted endorsement to these splendid reforms, and no political party will ever dare propose their repeal."

Representative Houston (Democrat), of Kansas, introduced a bill calling for establishment of and Army "West Point of the Air" in Sedgewick County, Kans., which would be on a par with West Point and Annapolis.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, evoked ripples of laughter in the Senate, when he professed his inability to decide whether Lindbergh merits the thanks of France and England or of Germany for his revelations of German air power.

"Lindbergh flew over the German airplane factories and went back to England and scared Chamberlain into the Munich conference," Clark said.

"Then, the colonel was decorated by the German government. Nobody in this country can tell whether he should be thanked for carrying the facts to Great Britain or helping Germany carry out a bluff."

Representative Fay (Democrat), New York, urged the House World War Veterans Committee today to provide more adequate compensation for veterans who have suffered amputations as a result of war injuries.

Fay, who lost a leg in the Argonne, said a large number of the men who were maimed in the war faced a discouraging future.

The Congressman disclosed that he received $69 monthly compensation and said he knew of cases where "men with flat feet received more compensation than I did."

Committee Chairman Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, suggested legislation declaring all veterans with amputations to be totally and permanently disabled, which would increase their compensation $25 a month.

Rayburn Sees Early Vote on Reorganization

House Limits Debate on Bill To Eight Hours

Majority Leader Rayburn predicted that the reorganization bill will be brought to a vote Tuesday or Wednesday, following House action yesterday in unanimously agreeing to limit debate on the measure to 8 hours.

The bill, which gives President Roosevelt power to reorganize executive agencies unless both Houses object, is almost certain to pass the House in its present form, despite Republican assaults.

In a minority report filed yesterday, the three Republican members of the special committee that favorably reported the bill denounced some of its provisions, commenting: "Every delegation of legislative authority to the present President of the United States has resulted in disaster . . . This bill is a device to allow the Executive to obtain legislation by indirection rather than by the usual and proper method of legislating."

G. O. P. Opposes Haste

Signed by Representatives Taber, Clifford and Dirksen, the report reflected Republican anger at insistence of the Democratic majority on reporting the bill without hearings and after only one meeting of the special committee.

Many allegedly unclear items in the bill, the Republicans said, "could have been perfected had the committee not exercised such undue and unseemly haste to get this measure to the floor for consideration."

Republican opposition is expected to center about the argument that "the effect of the committee bill is that measures of reorganization which could not secure the approval of both Houses of Congress on their own merits will become effective unless they are condemned by a concurrent resolution of both Houses of Congress." The Republicans will demand that the President's reorganization proposals be made ineffective unless both Houses specifically approve.

However, the Democrats contend in their majority report, also filed yesterday, that the power given the President "does not constitute an invalid delegation of legislative power," adding that "numerous examples of such delegation have been upheld by the Supreme Court."

The other major point of Republican attack probably will be that the bill would permit the President "to create two large propaganda departments in charge of public works and welfare by moving units of the Government around into two departments, which the Congress itself would not stand for one minute if they were put forward on their own merits."

But the majority report points out that "this bill has as its objective solely the reduction of agencies in the executive branch of the Government and creates absolutely no new agencies." In fact, many Democrats feel that the present bill is but an innocuous shadow of its former self—inasmuch as the reorganization bill which passed the House in August, 1937, specifically created a Department of Welfare, and was altogether "far more drastic than the measure which is now presented."

Second Firm Fined Under Wage Law

Boston, Mar. 3 (U.P.).—A Lawrence shoe firm and its treasurer were fined a total of $2,000 in U. S. District Court today after pleading guilty of violation of the Federal wage-hour law.

The defendants, the Gerber Shoe Co. and Nathan Gerber, treasurer and general manager, were indicted in the second criminal action under the law.

They were charged with failure to pay the 25-cent minimum wage, falsification of records and failure to keep true records.

The Brown Contract Stitching, Inc., also of Lawrence, was fined $1,500 in the first criminal indictment.

Senate Naval Group at Odds on Stuart Promotion

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee began an inquiry yesterday into the legality of the nomination of Capt. Harry A. Stuart, director of naval petroleum reserves, to be a rear admiral.

President Roosevelt nominated Stuart, whose home is in Roanoke, Va., for advancement, although he was not on the Navy's eligible selection list.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said "some differences of opinion" developed, but expressed belief a majority of the committee was "favorably disposed" to approve the nomination.

Meeting to Begin Drive Here for City University

A campaign for a District tax-supported municipal university will commence with an organization meeting of the Washington Youth Council Monday at the Y. W. C. A., it was disclosed at a report meeting last night at 1701 Eleventh street northwest.

Civic leaders will be asked for advice on means of raising funds for the proposed university, whose construction is supported by 11,000 local youth of the American Student Union, it was asserted.

In urging construction of the university, the report pointed out that 10 States with less population and tax revenue than the District have tax-supported universities which either free or have nominal tuition rates.

C. I. O. to Hear Report On Griffenhagen Plan

Frank O. Everett, of the staff of Griffenhagen government experts, will explain proposed District reorganization at a meeting of the Industrial Union Council of the Congress of Industrial Organizations at 1:30 p. m. today at Wesley Hall, Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Miss Perkins Sets Tuesday For Labor Talk

AFL and CIO Called Tentatively to Meet That Day on Peace

By International News Service.

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday set next Tuesday as the tentative date for the initial meeting of the peace committees of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organization.

The three-man committees were appointed following President Roosevelt's letters to John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chief, and William Green, A. F. of L. president, in which he asked for fresh efforts to end labor's civil war.

In announcing the first meeting of the rival labor groups, Miss Perkins expressed the hope that Daniel J. Tobin, head of the Teamsters Union, who declined a place on the A. F. of L. committee, would be persuaded to serve.

Green Names Rickert

Green, after Tobin's withdrawal, appointed Thomas Rickert, an A. F. of L. vice president, to serve on the peace committee. If Tobin reconsiders his decision not to serve, he will enter the negotiations as a fourth member of the Federation's committee. The A. F. of L. committee will be composed of Matthew Woll and Harry Bates, vice presidents, Rickert and Tobin, if he agrees to serve.

The C. I. O. committee will be led by Lewis, with Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman as his co-negotiators.

Roosevelt Must Approve

In fixing the date of the first meeting of the committees, Secretary Perkins said it was subject to President Roosevelt's approval. The President was expected to offer his blessings to the negotiators at their first session, she said.

While the date for the start of the meeting was being set, a new discordant note was struck on Capitol Hill which threatened to cast a shadow over the peace parley.

A new bill for amendment of the national labor relations act, changing the name of the NLRB to the Federal Labor Board, was offered to Congress by the A. F. of L.

Provides Five Members

The bill, introduced in the House by Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, provided, in effect, that the NLRB be reconstituted under the new name and that it shall be composed of five members instead of three. The C. I. O. militantly opposes any amendment to the Wagner labor act.

Introduction of the bill was accompanied by a bristling statement from Green, who called for prompt enactment of the measure to "safeguard the act from being entirely destroyed by the present board."

He charged the NLRB has done "its utmost to wreck the law and pervert its principles," and declared the A. F. of L. amendments would not be to the advantage of the A. F. of L. alone, but "will benefit all legitimate labor organizations, honest employers and the public alike."

Irish Set 2 Dances, Housewarming St. Patrick's Day

Washington's Irish War Veterans will hold a triple celebration of St. Patrick's Day this year, it was decided last night by District of Columbia Post, No. 17, Irish War Veterans, at a special meeting at the post's clubhouse, 1132 Eighteenth street northwest.

Ten Irish members of Congress will speak at a wreath-laying ceremony at the monument to Commodore Barry in Franklin Square. From there the party will go to Arlington, where another wreath will be laid on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

That night a joint dinner will be held by the Irish War Veterans and Government Printing Office Post, No. 1, United Veterans of American Wars, at the New Colonial Hotel.

An all-day housewarming will be held at the post headquarters March 18, ending with a big dance that night.

Gibboney to Head Memorial Body

Election of Stuart G. Gibboney, New York lawyer, to succeed the late Representative Boylan as chairman of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commisison was announced yesterday. The commission also elected Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, and Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, to fill vacancies.

Crouch Unable to Give Scheduled Piano Recital

John Crouch will be unable to give his scheduled piano rictal this evening at the Washington College of Music because of illness. His place will be taken by Thelma Olson, of New York, also a pupil of Edwin Hughes. Her program consists of a Scarlatti sonata, the Bach "Sicilliano," Chopin's B minor sonata, Saint-Saens' caprice on themes from Gluck's "Alceste," and Debussy's suite, "Pour le Piano."

Interior Department Reaches 90th Birthday

The Interior Department was 90 years old yesterday, but there was no celebration, for Secretary Ickes said the department "looks forward and not backward."

Created in the Polk Administration, the department started with six employes. It now has 45,000.

Brownrigg Working Overtime To Master First Federal Job

Has Great Hopes For President's Personnel Council

WILLIAM BROWNRIGG

William Brownrigg, recently appointed director of personnel for the Department of Justice, has arrived in Washington and is working overtime on the job for which he was called by Attorney General Murphy on February 20.

When interviewed last night, after most other offices of the Department had been dark for hours, Brownrigg told of his interest in the first Federal assignment he has had, although he has headed civil service and personnel departments of Michigan and California.

He refused, however, to predict any effects of his coming upon the personnel of the Justice Department. Since his arrival Wednesday, he said, he has been learning the set-up of the department, and its ramifications through the United States.

"I am tremendously interested in the recent developments in personnel administration," he said, "and particularly in the activities of the council of personnel administration created by the President.

"I am very hopeful," he continued, "that that council will be able to make a real contribution toward improved public personnel administration. And I am glad to have a small part in it."

The council to which Brownrigg referred is composed of the personnel directors of the various Government departments, on which he is the most recently appointed member.

Brownrigg's selection, Attorney General Murphy explained at the time of his appointment, was on the basis of his having won competitive examinations taken by 6,000 personnel men throughout the United States.

His immediate previous experience in Michigan under Gov. Murphy was as director of a State civil service system that involved 12,000 job classifications, and in California of one in which 15,000 job classifications were included.

New York Bank Reduces Rate On FHA Money

Bowery Savings Cuts Interest From 5 To 4¼ Per Cent

By the Associated Press.

A reduction in mortgage lending rates by the Bowery Savings Bank of New York stirred interest in housing and banking circles here yesterday.

The Bowery bank reduced its rate on mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration from 5 to 4¼ per cent.

Housing experts said the cut, if followed widely by other banks, might be an important factor in stimulating housing construction, which they regard as an important factor in national business recovery.

Think Cut May Stay Local

Some banking officials, however, said they thought the cut was due to local competition with the mortgage lending operations of insurance companies and might not be followed elsewhere.

One of the leading private industry experts on housing, who was here to attend a meeting of the commerce department's business advisory council, said the reduction had vast potentialities, but declined to be quoted until he had studied the matter further.

Federal Housing Administration officials indicated they would encourage other lenders to reduce rates, but would take no direct action. They said the present FHA law merely fixes five per cent as the maximum interest rate on insured mortgages.

Some authorities said the large amount of idle money in the banks might be a factor in causing them to cut lending rates in their search for investments. The Federal Reserve Board estimates the banks have $3,380,000,000 of lendable money.

Available Here at 4½%

In Washington 4½ per cent mortgage money has been available for more than a year and during the past six months building operations have been conducted in a number of instances with money obtained at 4 per cent, it was said in banking circles last night. However, these are not FHA insured mortgages.

$29,200,000 Paid In January as Jobless Benefits

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board reported yesterday benefits totaling nearly $29,200,000 were paid to unemployed under State compensation laws during January.

Benefits first became payable in 18 States that month, the board said, leaving Illinois and Montana, whose plans become effective next July, the only States not yet paying unemployment compensation.

Payments by States for December and January included: Maryland $563,481 and $626,024; Virginia $343,873 and $377,362; West Virginia $330,939 and $340,494.

Miami to Dedicate Plaque to Honor Mayor Cermak

Miami, Fla., March 3 (I.N.S.).—A bronze plaque in memory of the late Anton J. Cermak, mayor of Chicago, victim of an assassin's bullet intended for President Roosevelt, will be unveiled Monday at Bay Front Park in Miami, where the shot was fired.

Many Chicagoans, including Mayor Edward J. Kelly, will attend the ceremony. A dedicatory address will be delivered by Judge Otto Kerner of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The plaque bears the words of Mayor Cermak to Mr. Roosevelt immediately after the bullet struck: "I'm glad it was me instead of you."

Norris Fears Heavy Losses On Cotton

Blocks Smith Bill and Warns Its Terms Must Apply to All Products

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said yesterday that a heavy loss to the Government on its cotton loans appeared "to be the only way out of a very bad situation."

The veteran Nebraskan, earlier in the day, had forced the Senate Agriculture Committee to delay a vote on a bill dealing with the cotton surplus situation sponsored by Chairman Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina.

Norris, in an interview, said he probably would support the Smith bill when the committee votes on it next Thursday, but added that Southern Senators would have to make the same benefits available to corn, wheat and other farmers to obtain Congressional approval.

Norris "Frankly Disturbed"

The Government now has more than $500,000,000 invested in loan cotton and the Smith bill would permit release of some of this after July, 1940, at a loss to the Government, and grant growers an additional benefit payment this year if they kept cotton out of loans.

"We are producing cotton faster than we can consume it," Norris said. "We've got on hand more than 11,000,000 bales in Government loans. That is such a large amount that everybody in the trade is afraid to buy much cotton."

Norris said he was "frankly disturbed" by a feature of the Smith bill which would permit growers to reclaim loan cotton at 3 cents a pound in exchange for an equivalent reduction in their new crop cotton this year. This would mean a Government loss of about $35 a bale.

No Release This Year

"We certainly will have to do the same thing for the wheat and corn growers, if we start this on cotton," he said.

Chairman Smith and Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, predicted the Agriculture Committee would approve the Smith bill next Thursday and send it on to the Senate, although Bankhead said this was conditioned on not releasing any of the loan stocks this season.

The Alabama Senator argued that any loan stocks released would force present market prices lower and compete with this year's new crop.

Wallace Shift Blamed

Witnesses have estimated that the Smith bill would require from $150,000,000 to more than $300,000,000 in Federal funds for the additional benefit payments and losses on loan stocks.

At the House hearings Representative Massingale (Democrat), Oklahoma, said that the policy of Secretary Wallace had shifted from trying to raise prices of cotton, particularly, to trying to protect the Treasury's loans.

"This policy is responsible for the emergence of Brazil as a major cotton exporter," Massingale said. "We have lost our foreign markets for cotton. Mills of the world prefer American cotton but they can't get it because we can't compete in the world markets."

Army Fliers Facing Tests For Fitness

Activities of Older Officers in Service To Be Restricted

An examination of the records of Army flying officers now is going on at the War Department under new regulations designed to stop or restrict the piloting of planes by many older officers of the Air Corps.

The results of the recent semi-annual physical examinations are being reviewed in connection with new rules fixing revised flying standards and effecting a reclassification of all fliers. Veteran pilots found below par physically will be either banned from piloting altogether or prohibited from flying in certain types of planes under certain conditions.

Senior flying officers, who, due to advancing years fail to meet the new physical requirements, however, will not be grounded, it was indicated. Designated as "command pilots," they will be continued on flying duty in command of the large multi-pilot planes, with younger officers at the controls.

General's Death a Factor

The new regulations are the direct result of the death last year of Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover at the controls of his plane on a cross-country flight. His death brought agitation for restriction in the flying of top officers of the Air Corps. The veterans of the corps, it was contended, are too valuable to national defense to permit them to risk their lives by regular pilot duties. War Department officials were said to be contemplating grounding all Air Corps generals and flying officers over 50 years.

Ranking air officers, desiring to actively lead their commands, resisted the move. After some discussion, a board was named to study the problem. The new regulations are the result of that group's confidential recommendations.

New Setup Outlined

New classifications are set up for all flying officers of the Air Corps, with officers grouped as combat pilots, senior pilots, pilots, combat observers and technical observers. Command pilots will include all Air Corps officers with 20 years' service in the corps and 2,000 flying hours, or with 15 years' experience and 3,000 hours in the air. Senior pilots will be officers with 10 years' service and 1,800 hours of flying, while qualified aviators with less experience will be classified as pilots.

Technical and combat observers will act as navigators, gunners or intelligence officers. They may be either nonpilots or aviators temporarily restricted because of their physical or professional condition.

In addition, three classifications are to be made according to physical fitness. In Class 1 will be grouped senior pilots, pilots and combat observers. They will have to meet the new physical requirements. Class 2 will include officers of Class 1 who have certain defects, but whose training and experience compensate for their lower physical standard. Command pilots and technical observers are placed in Class 3, for which there are still lower health qualifications.

Will Aid Some Officers

Practically all Air Corps officers of the grade of major and above qualify by experience for command pilot rating. If the present review of their January examination finds them fully up to the standards of Class 1, they will not be limited in their flying. If their physical status is impaired they will be notified of the degree of restriction placed upon them.

The degree of restriction, it is said, will be applied with regard to types of planes, night and instrument flying, weather conditions and solo flights.

Heretofore, it was said, veteran pilots with physical defects have had to be either grounded or have their defects waived. The new arrangement will aid both groups. The former can continue longer in active service though no longer actually piloting, while failing eyesight or physical stamina no longer need endanger the lives of the Air Corps' ranking officers.

Woman Found Beaten to Death; Companion Held

Michigan City, Ind., Mar. 3 (AP).—Police today found the body of Dorothy Boener, 30, in a bed at the home of Frank Freyer, 50, 3½ miles east of the city. Miss Boener had been beaten to death, police said.

Freyer was being held here on an open charge after police found blood on the man's clothes. The officers said Freyer called them to his home.

They said Freyer told them he and the woman, who had been living with him for two years, came home last night intoxicated and that she fell and struck her head on a safe in the kitchen.

700 Auto Workers Rally With Martin

Detroit, March 3 (U.P.).—Seven hundred delegates from United Automobile Workers Union locals braved threats of expulsion from the Congress of Industrial Organizations tonight to answer Homer Martin's call for a convention to hasten a final showdown in the union's family feud.

Martin, one of two rival presidents of the U. A. W., predicted that when the convention opens tomorrow "it will be clear to everybody" that victory in the union strife would be with his faction.

The U. A. W.-C. I. O. has called a convention of its followers to be held in Cleveland March 27.

Bodies of 12 Arabs Found by Troops

Jerusalem, March 3 (AP).—The bodies of 12 Arabs believed killed by terrorists were found in a cave by troops seaching Arab villages near Tul Karm today.

Two Arabs were killed attempting to break a military cordon during searches of the Samaria and Jerusalem districts and a Jew was shot near the Jerusalem military headquarters.

Equalized Rate Bloc May Balk All Rail Relief

South-West Group Told That I.C.C. Must Work on Adjustments

Irked by reports that Congress will take no action this session to relieve railroads in the South and West from alleged discriminatory freight rates, Southern and Western advocates yesterday hinted a determined campaign to block all railroad relief unless their problem is recognized by Congress.

The case of the "freight rate bloc" had virtually collapsed in Senate and House Interstate Commerce Committees as some Southern members predicted Congress will sidestep the issue. The Southern and Western advocates contend that the present rate structure favors the great industrial region north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi rivers, and seek a Congressional mandate to the Interstate Commerce Commission to study the situation.

Chairman Clarence F. Lea (Democrat), of California, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, predicted that any move to equalize sectional freight rates this year will come from the Interstate Commerce Commission rather than Congress.

Concluding hearings sponsored by Southern Congressmen who charged their section has been the victim of an inequitable rate structure, Lea said his group will report no bills for action.

Lea indicated that the hearings accomplished their purpose—that of publicizing what may be discriminatory rates—and pointed out that the ICC henceforth must take up the task of adjustment, if that is necessary.

Girl Reports Man Tried to Attack Her After Dance

Maryland authorities last night were investigating the report of Miss Stella Spiewak, 20, of 2445 Fifteenth street northeast, that a young man attempted criminally to attack her early yesterday in the vicinity of Largo, Md.

Highly nervous and suffering from bruises to her feet received in fleeing, Miss Spiewak was recuperating in Casualty Hospital.

Miss Spiewak said she attended a dance at the Elks Club, 900 block of H street northwest, Thursday night, and took a ride with a man known only as "Leon." He attempted to attack her near Largo, she told police. She ran to a nearby house and Roger Wood, of Largo, brought her to the hospital.

The woman described her assailant as 26, 6 feet tall, weighing 180 pounds. He was operating a car bearing Oklahoma license plates, she said.

Market Owner Found Shot Dead In Silver Spring

A Silver Spring (Md.) market owner, Joseph Kushner, 54, died yesterday in Washington Sanitarium of a gunshot wound in the head.

His daughter, Helen, and an employe, Joseph Massina, were entering the North Washington Market, 8215 Georgia avenue, at 7 yesterday morning when they heard a shot. They rushed to the rear of the store, and found Kushner on the floor with a bullet through his right temple and a gun at his side.

His family said the dead man had left for his store that morning in excellent spirits. Justice of the Peace J. D. Briggs, acting coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Drama Editors To Judge Play Contest Finals

Four Groups Compete Tonight in Roosevelt High Auditorium

Washington dramatic editors will be judges in the Community Center Department's thirteenth annual one-act play tournament, in which four amateur dramatic groups will compete as finalists tonight at Roosevelt High School auditorium. The department said a movie talent scout will be in the audience.

The four finalists are the Interior Department Recreation Association Drama Group who will offer "Submerged"; Eckington Players in "Lucrezia Borgia's Little Party"; George Washington University's Cue and Curtain Club, presenting "In Heaven and Earth," and Troupers of East Washington Community Center in "Trifles." They were chosen by Mrs. Adelaide Hibbard, Mrs. Aurora Poston and Comdr. E. Ray McKenzie, from 15 starters in the tournament.

Civic Orchestra to Play

The Washington Civic Orchestra, under direction of Dr. Kurt Hetzel, will provide music.

The cast for "Submerged" includes Ralf Nicholson, Gordon Feeley, M. de Sollar, Kenfield Bailey, Joe Bly and William Zuchert, jr.

For the Eckington Players are Jack Donnelly, Mary Sanders, Josephine Schillaci, Mary Schillaci, Rhodes K. Scherer, Raymond Wannall, Fred Horton, John Pluchino, Gretchen Greer and Betty Hanes.

The George Washington cast will be Charles Corker, Ann Peterson, James Faurot, Leonard Wilson, Elaine Berry, James Helm, Ray Reiser, Bob Linehan and Bertha Schmidt.

Winner Wednesday

In "Trifles" are I. Zaff Rogers, Gus Wildt, Ted Freter, Elinor Evans and Carolyn Rogers. Mrs. Carolyn Rogers won the Maud Howell Smith award for the best individual performance in the tournament last year.

The winner of this year's award will be announced Wednesday at 8 p. m. over Station WRC. The 1939 tournament executives are F. G. Lyman, chairman; Mrs. E. K. Peeples, Mrs. Maud Howell Smith, Denis Connell, advisors, and Mrs. Mabel Clark, executive secretary.

1940 Census Will Go Into Economics

Employment Will Be Studied, Along With Income, Birth Rate

Migration, the declining birth rate, what constitutes unemployment, and similar questions will feature the streamlined 1940 census, participants in the conference called by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins agreed yesterday.

Approximately 150 Government officials, business leaders and population experts spent the day at the Commerce Department debating what questions to ask the public next year.

So far as they were able to reach a conclusion, it was that the questions asked in 1930 would have to be drastically revised to give an accurate picture of what has happened to the population during 10 years of depression and partial recovery.

Questions Held to 27

William L. Austin, director of the Department's Census Bureau, said there would be "a lot of new questions owing to the new social problems which have arisen in the last decade as well as the vast changes which have occurred." An effort will be made, however, to hold the number of questions down to 27. This was approximately the number in the 1930 census.

Particular stress, Austin said, will be placed on the extent to which the population has migrated from one State to another, or has moved around within a certain city. An effort also will be made to find out the trailer population. The degree of migration in recent years is associated with the depression.

Other questions will relate to the declining birth rate, as compared to the death rate. Some experts estimate that by 1960 the birth rate will be down to the death rate.

Queries on Employment

Several questions will be asked, Austin said, regarding unemployment. Census takers will try to find out whether so-called "unemployed" workers are merely housewives who would like to have a job, other part-time workers, or regular breadwinners.

If Congress does not provide for a special housing census, the census will include questions on home-ownership, renters, type and value of the house, and the like. Figures likely will be obtained on the number of war veterans, and whether they were wounded.

Particular attention will be paid to income of workers and occupation classification.

As a result of conferences today and tomorrow, a schedule of questions will be worked out. Then a few counties will be selected for tests of how the public reacts to the questions. Afterward, a final conference will select the questions.

Similar conferences will be held in the next two weeks to prepare for the manufactures and business censuses.

Amnesia Victim Reported Cured By Hypnosis

Hagerstown, Md., March 3.—City Health Officer Dr. W. Ross Cameron revealed in his monthly report to the mayor and city council that hypnotism was used to good advantage by the health department in February in the treatment of an amnesia case. Dr. Cameron said the patient's complete loss of memory had been treated and corrected by hypnosis. He declined to reveal the name of the patient or hypnotist.

Griffin, Who Promoted Pan-Americanism 50 Years, Would Rather Talk of His Golf

"It's just a question of following through," declared William V. Griffin, dean of Pan American Union personnel, who this year completes half a century's work for inter-American good will — speaking of his golf game.

GRIFFIN

Although Griffin, a genial, gray-haired man of 64, likes to talk about golf rather than his life work, it has played only a secondary part in a career that began when James G. Blaine, then Secretary of State, appointed him a page to the first Pan-American Conference in 1889.

"Delegates from 19 Latin-American countries—Cuba and Panama were not yet independent—assembled in October, 1889, in the old Wallach house, Pennsylvania avenue and Jackson place, where the Carnegie Library now stands," Griffin recalled.

"I no sooner had my first look at the statesmen—John B. Henderson, Cornelius Bliss and Andrew Carnegie were among the United States representatives—than the conference adjourned for a tour of the country."

Dom Pedro Overthrown

"It worked out well for democracy, though," Griffin said. "When they reassembled in November, Don Pedro, Emperor of Brazil, had been overthrown and the countries represented there were now republics. It was in this way that the 'International Union of American Republics' was formed."

Griffin went on from being page at the conference to a messenger's job with the union, whose formation in 1890 was its principal achievement.

Besides a trip in 1912 as representative of the union to the inauguration of the Madeira-Mamora railway which connects Bolivia with the Amazon River system, the dedication of the Pan American Union building in 1910, stands out most vividly in his memory.

Recalls Strong Men

Griffin recalls the surging crowds at the planting of the "peace tree" in the patio of the union by President Taft, as Andrew Carnegie, main contributor to the union building; Senator Elihu Root, Secretary of State Philander Knox, and James Cardinal Gibbons looked on.

Griffin counts as a distinction the fact that he is the only employe of the Union whom the otherwise voluble Central American macaw will cackle "hello" to on arrival in the morning.

AFL and CIO Ask More U. S. School Funds

N. C. University Head Says Aid Is Less Than For Farms and Roads

By the Associated Press.

The A. F. L. and C. I. O., usually at odds, joined forces today in support of a program for greatly expanding Federal aid to education.

Mathew Woll, vice president of the A. F. L., urged the Senate Committee on Education to report favorably a bill which would authorize more than $800,000,000 of additional Federal funds for grants to States during the next six years.

Earlier, John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head, had urged similar action.

Irwin Kuenzli, secretary of the National Teachers Union, said the proposed expenditures would tend to reduce the Nation's crime bill.

School Funds Held Lagging

Nearly a score of spokesmen for national teacher, educational and library groups urged passage of the bill.

Frank P. Graham, president of North Carolina University, contended that Federal support for education had not kept pace with Federal expenditures for roads, defense, highways, health, agriculture and social security.

Remarking that only 45,000,000 citizens voted in 1938 while 35,000,000 did not, Maude E. Aiton, of Washington, speaking for the National Education Association, said this showed need for expanded education to develop civic responsibility.

"We have about 18,000,000 adults who cannot read a newspaper or write a simple letter," she said, adding that the bill would meet the menace of "subversive groups."

Protestant Group Opposes

Bessie Locke, executive secretary of the National Kindergarten Association, urged an amendment providing that 1 per cent of the total of other grants, about $4,000,000, be added for kindergarten education.

Pacelli's Rise Foretold Even In Boyhood

New Pontiff Won Vatican Promotions From Each Pope

By Ralph Forte.

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

Vatican City, March 3.—The rise of Eugenio Pacelli to the Papacy was foretold even in his boyhood, not alone by his proud father, but in the respect he won from his teachers and the admiration of his classmates.

Intimates of Pacelli's household spoke today of his exceptional promise as a student in the Roman Seminary of Saint Appolinarius and later in the world-famed Gregorian Religious University.

It was this marked bent which led influential prelates and Pacelli's parents to dissaude him from becoming a Jesuit—a career on which he had set his heart and which might well have prevented his elevation to the Papacy, since by tradition members of religious orders are not considered "Papabili." Instead, Pacelli was marked for a career in Vatican diplomacy. His cardinal patrons, Serafino and Vannutelli, followed his ordination with a painstaking grooming.

Learned Routine

In the capacity of an ordinary clerk he set to work to learn the routine of the Holy Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, a department which corresponds roughly to th eforeign ministry of a lay government.

At that time the shrewd Mgr. Pietro Gasparri was secretary of the congregation and already making a name for himself which later was justified in the culminating triumph of his diplomatic career, when as papal secretary of state and predecessor of Pacelli he negotiated with Mussolini the famous Lateran accord which ended 59 years of strife between the Catholic Church and the Italian state.

Gasparri saw in Pacelli an able lieutenant who could climb with him. Under his guidance the young priest rose steadily in influence and position until he became one of the most important members of the congregation.

He soon was made a member of the high commission dealing with extraordinary church affairs. After several years of this training, Pacelli was entrusted with his first major task—the work of completing and scientifically reorganizing the canon law.

Made Personal Prelate

His excellent work in this field was considered by high Vatican officials as an essential prelude to the drawing up of a new Vatican canon law code, which was published in 1917.

During the last years of Pope Leo XII, Gasparri was given the red hat and made undersecretary of state, while Pacelli, in turn, was promoted to the post of undersecretary of extraordinary affairs. He was then only 26 years old.

After the death of Leo XII the new Pope, Pius X, asked Pacelli to continue in that post and in 1905 made him his personal prelate.

As undersecretary Pacelli devoted all his spare time to a concentrated study of history and political geography. He asked and received the permission of Pius X to resume teaching and secured the important appointment to the chair of canon law in the Pontifical Academy of Noble Ecclesiastics.

He managed to fulfill the duties of both the secretarial and professorial posts until 1914 and despite the very hard labor required by both of them he also found time to collaborate with Gasparri in writing a number of books and treatises. One of these was a juridical work entitled "The Personality and Territoriality of Laws, With Special Attention to Canon Law," published in 1912 and considered an outstanding authority on church law.

In 1910 Pacelli made his first trip in an official capacity—the forerunner of the voyaging to nearly all parts of the world which he was called upon to do as Papal legate under Pius XI. He was appointed a member of the Pontificial Mission headed by Cardinal Granito Pignatelli, now dean of the Sacred College, which represented the Vatican at the coronation of George V and Queen Mary in Westminster Abbey.

Made Archbishop

Soon after Benedict XV became Pope in 1914 he made Pacelli secretary general of the holy congregation of extraordinary ecclesiastical affairs, a post exceeded in importance only by the secretaryship of state in the diplomatic branch of the Catholic hierarchy.

It is a testimonial to Pacelli's outstanding brilliance that from the very first moment they entered the Vatican each succeeding Pope placed the highest confidence in him as rapidly as expedience allowed. Each of the four Popes under whom he served—Leo XII, Pius X, Benedict XV and Pius XI—was quick to recognize his talents and use them for the glory and power of the church.

Pope Benedict in his turn was so gratified with Pacelli's exceptional work as secretary-general that to reward him the Pontiff elevated him to the archbishopric of Sardi in 1917, personally consecrating him in a solemn ceremony at the Sistine chapel, which was attended by members of the diplomatic corps and the Roman "black" aristocracy of the pontificial court.

Two months later Benedict appointed Pacelli as papal nuncio of Bavaria and there the church diplomat really began the extraordinary career in international affairs which now is so well known.

Roosevelt Cables His Good Wishes To New Pope

Charleston, S. C., March 3 (AP).—President Roosevelt cabled felicitations today to the new Pope at the Vatican.

POPE PIUS XII
is shown on the throne in Sistine Chapel as he was robed yesterday. A cardinal is kneeling before the pontiff

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, March 3.—Following is the text of the address broadcast to the world today by Pope Pius XII.

(The English translation was made from an official Italian translation of the original Latin.)

As most profound emotion fills our spirit and we feel ourself as though overwhelmed before the tremendous responsibility to which Divine Providence, in its inscrutable designs, has called us, we feel it necessary to make known our thoughts immediately to all. Thus these paternal words.

First of all, with particular affection, we give our paternal embrace to the very beloved cardinals of the Sacred College whose piety, virtue and eminent gifts of mind we know by long association; then we salute with special benevolence our venerable brothers of the episcopate; at the same time we bless the priests and nuns, those who work to spread the kingdom of Christ through missions or who collaborate with the apostolic hierarchy under the guidance of bishops in the file of Catholic Action, and, finally, all our sons throughout the world, especially those who suffered poverty and pain.

"An Appeal for Peace"

May very special graces of heaven descend copiously in each and every one of these.

But in this solemn moment our thoughts run also to all those who are outside the church, to those who will be pleased to know that the Pope raises for them to the highest and greatest God, prayers and wishes for every good.

To this paternal message we wish to add hope and appeal for peace.

We mean that peace which our predecessor of pious memory recommended to men with so much insistance and invoked with such ardent prayers and for which he offered his life to God; that peace, sublime gift of Heaven, which is desired by all honest souls and which is the fruit of charity and Justice. We invite everybody to peace of conscience, tranquil in the friendship of God; to peace of families, united and harmonized by holy love of Christ and, finally, to peace among nations through mutual, brotherly assistance, friendly collaboration and cordial understandings for the superior interests of the great human family under the watchfulness and protection of Divine Providence.

In these troublesome and difficult hours while so many difficulties seem to impede attainment of that peace which is the most profound inspiration of hearts, we raise to the Lord a special prayer for all those who are entrusted with the high honor and the grave burden of guiding peoples on the road to prosperity and progress.

Here then, O beloved cardinals, here venerable brothers, here beloved sons, is the first wish which rises from the paternal beat which God has inspired in our heart. Before us we have the spectacle of immense evils which scourge the world and for which blessed God sends us as succor, unarmed but believing. You sons, you brothers, would not desire—we are fully confident of it—to render our hope vain. After the grace of God it is on your good will that our soul depends so much.

May the Lord Christ, of whose fullness we all have received, deign to make fruitful this hope of ours and extend it as messenger of holy consolation to the entire earth and may the benediction which we impart in his name give virtue to it.

was mentioned for that office, may be sent back to Paris as Papal Nuncio to France.

In spite of indications the Pope will not modify the Vatican's attitude toward totalitarian ideologies, Premier Mussolini today telegraphed him:

"I beg you to accept the revent homage of the Fascist government, as well as that of myself."

Keenly cognizant of the difficult days facing a rapidly rearming world, the new Pope sat on the papal throne in the Sistine chapel of the Vatican, after receiving the third and final oath of obedience from the 61 cardinals, and sent forth his moving appeal over the air waves.

Pius' first full day as Pope was a busy one. He himself gave orders to begin extensive decoration work on St. Peter's basilica for the coronation March 12.

Brilliant beyond description, the ceremony this time may be extended to revive the traditional procession around Rome. Pius VII is the first Pontiff elected since the papal "captivity" which began in 1870.

As his first official act of the day, after he said his first mass as Pope, Pius received the solemn act of obeisance from the college of cardinals.

Cardinals Kiss His Ring

In the magnificent setting of the Sistine Chapel, the 61 red-robed cardinals knelt individually and with bowed heads kissed the famous "fisherman's ring" placed on the Pope's finger yesterday upon his election.

The cardinals were obviously overjoyed at Pacelli's election, and for each one the Pope had some short personal message of thanks and good wishes.

The reverent and moving ceremony ended with the singing of the "Te Deum" by the Pontifical Choir.

Later, after his speech, the Pope devoted some time to addressing personal replies to the messages of congratulation from the King and Queen of Italy, while an undersecretary answered Mussolini's telegram on behalf of the Pope.

Yet the Pontiff found time for the favorite recreation of the late Pope, and during the afternoon he took a 40-minute ride in the Vatican Gardens in the American-made automobile, with an armchair installed in place of the rear seat, which Pius XI used.

The message from King Victor Emannuel said:

"The Queen and myself are very happy to send your Holiness our warmest congratulations and all good wishes for your everlasting prosperity."

Press Uses Conciliatory Tone

Considerable significance was seen in the message from Il Duce and the attitude of the controlled Fascist press, which indicated Italy is anxious to re-establish friendly relations with the Vatican.

Whereas the Fascist press after the death of Pius XI said there was virtually no chance of Cardinal Pacelli's election, a conciliatory tone was adopted today.

Typical was the praise given the new Pope by the newspaper Messagero, which said:

"The world bows in reverence before this luminous figure, who rises to supreme power. His election, through its rapidity, seems a sign of Divine inspiration.

"The unanimity of the vote is an augury of the concord which the Vatican diffuses to a world anxious for peace with justice."

The phrase "peace with justice" is employed frequently by Mussolini, and in this case apparently refers to Italy's recent colonial demands leveled at France.

"Truly Is Most Worthy"

Popolo Di Roma said: "The mandate entrusted to the Sacred College could not have been more worthily or rapidly carried out. Pius XII truly is most worthy for his Christian piety, culture, and profound experience in ecclesiastical and political affairs."

Save for his own vote, the official Vatican news service made known, Cardinal Pacelli was chosen unanimously.

On the first ballot Pacelli received 35 of the 62 votes, and 40 on the second.

Then came the luncheon interval, with the prospective Pope showing increasing signs of strain and nervousness. He paced up and down in a courtyard for more than an hour reciting his breviary.

When the cardinals reassembled for the third ballot, Pacelli received 61 and was elected. His own vote went to Cardinal Granito Pignatelli Di Belmonte, dean of the Sacred College.

Walpole Calls Pius XII Best Possible Choice

Pontiff Traveled Much And Has No Enemies, British Novelist Says

By Hugh Walpole.

(World Famous Novelist.)

Vatican City, March 3.—This is "the day after the day, and it is natural there should be everywhere a sense of peace and waiting before the coronation March 12.

Nevertheless the great fact remains that there is once again a Pope in the world, and a Pope whom everyone is recognizing as the best possible choice that could have been made.

That every unanimity has its especial and peculiar interest.

Had a cardinal been elected who represented very strongly one special party in politics, or had a choice been made of a man who would clearly do his utmost to stay outside of poltics altogether, the world would now undoubtedly be waiting with grave apprehension.

I doubt if anyone up to this last fortnight has realized quite strongly enough how much the power and personality of the Vatican means to the world.

"Peace" Echoes and Re-Echoes

For one reason alone—and there are many others—we see now how deeply important this election has been. For perhaps there has never been a time in the world's history when men, whatever their creed, wished more to have someone to whom they might look up to, someone who was not working for his own ends, nor even for his country's.

Already, in today's speech within 24 hours after his election, Pope Pius XII has stated exactly the note that he intends to strike.

The word "peace" echoes and re-echoes throughout the passionate sequence of his sentences. It is as though he said to the world:

"I am come in this moment into this place, and without any interval I will let you know what is going to be the basis of the whole of my ministry.

"My own people, and all people who are scattered the world over, need peace more desperately than in any man's memory.

"If I can help to bring it about, it is peace that they shall have, but not peace on simply any terms.

"They are my children and I am their father, and I will guard them from harm with the utmost of my power, and I will stand for all the things that belong to them."

Has Made No Enemies

Everyone who heard that speech today knew what its implications were.

Pius XII is a man who has been over much of the world, and who has made no enemies anywhere. He kept his friendships not through weakness, but through trust and the knowledge of man's nature, and still more so because he has always known the terms on which he stands with other men.

I think that this new element of energy and strength will be felt at once throughout the world. Pius XI was a great man, courageous and unflinching, but he was over 80 yeras of age, and during the last years of his life he suffered from illness.

The world now has a Pope of 63, a man of strength and wisdom.

There is fresh and increasing strength thrown behind all the forces, wherever they may be, on the side of the peace of the world.

Congress Will Mark the 150th Anniversary Of Representative Government Today

GLADYS SWARTHOUT,
operatic star of stage and screen, took a copy of the "Star-Spangled Banner" from her valise when she unpacked at Mayflower Hotel yesterday. She will sing the National Anthem for Congress today at its 150th anniversary celebration will consist almost exclusively of persons in official life and their families. Over 600 engraved invitations have been issued to distinguished individuals who may sit in the well of the House, while the galleries will be so crowded that reservations have been made even for seats on the stairs.

Vice President Garner will preside over the ceremony but, true to an unbroken rule he has established for himself, he will deliver no address. Representing the legislative arm of the Government, Speaker Bankhead of the House and Senator Key Pittman, president pro tempore of the Senate, will speak. They will be introduced, respectively, by Representative Bloom and Representative Rayburn, majority leader of the House.

Senator Alben Barkley, majority leader of the Senate, will present the Chief Justice, whose address will be followed by that of President Roosevelt. The President will be introduced by the Vice President.

The proceedings are to be opened with the shattering of a precedent, when Miss Gladys Swarthout will sing "America," the first woman ever to sing at a ceremony in the House of Representatives. John Charles Thomas will also give a solo, and, at the conclusion of the program, both will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

A concurrent resolution setting the date for today's celebration and inviting the President to speak will be read by Representative Bloom. The Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House, is to deliver a prayer, while the benediction will be offered by the Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, chaplain of the Senate. The United States Marine Band Orchestra, under direction of Capt. Taylor Branson, will be stationed in the Speaker's lobby.

Although no inkling has been afforded of the content of President Roosevelt's speech, it was generally expected in Congress yesterday that he might answer critics of the Administration's foreign policy. It was also felt that the President might have something to say on the "business appeasement" drive that has been recently promoted by some of his Cabinet officers.

Although the ceremony today marks the occasion, exactly 150 years ago, when 36 gentlemen in knee breeches met together in New York to open the new Congress, it does not commemorate the first business session of the legislative body, for although March 4, 1789, was the date prescribed by the old Congress for the commencement of the new Government under the Constitution, so wretched were the roads that a quorum was not obtained in both houses until April 6, when the electoral votes were counted and it was discovered that Washington had been elected.

ready for the service of foreigners" may be the first step leading to war.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, who took the floor Wednesday to criticize Nye's recent statements, challenged him again yesterday. He declared Nye's conclusions that the United States might actually start war in Europe by its actions was arrived at in "the mysterious realm of speculation and conjecture."

The Army expansion bill, authorizing the 6,000 Army plane ceiling, is an entirely different measure from the regular War Department bill passed yesterday by the House, although some of the latter provisions anticipate the new authorization.

The regular supply measure, sped to the Senate, was the third step in the President's preparedness program to receive House approval. Only one other major defense item awaits House approval, the Navy appropriation bill, on which hearings have not been started.

Providing funds to run the War Department for a year, for a total of 784 new planes, for adding to modern Army equipment, including anti-aircraft guns and semiautomatic rifles, and for strengthening seacoast defenses, the bill passed by the House appropriates:

For the Air Corps, $94,737,281; for ordnance service and supplies, $46,840,620; for Army salaries, $170,000,000; for seacoast defenses, $7,250,000; for organized reserves, $12,802,557; for the National Guard, $44,803,305; for citizens' military training, $7,109,742, and for the Quartermaster Corps, $87,992,408.

U. S. Attaches Criticized

Although a full day of debate preceded yesterday's reading of the bill, only a few speeches were addressed to the measure and approval followed immediately after it was called up for amendments.

Shortly before passage, Representative Collins (Democrat), Mississippi, criticized American naval and military attaches at foreign capitals for being "asleep at the job."

Reading from the House report on last year's Navy appropriation bill, which stated this nation greatly excelled any other power in the world in naval aviation, Collins asked:

"In God's name what have these attaches been doing if in the space of less than 12 months, unbeknown to them, a complete reversal of the picture has taken place."

Doubts German Strength

Collins said if reports on German aviation advances are true, the Military Affairs Committee "may very well call these officers before it and demand an accounting."

The Mississippi representative expressed doubt of the accuracy of reports on German plane strength, and said he thought it "unfortunate to advocate an air force second to none when no nation is within 3,000 miles of our shores."

Representative Engel (Republican), Michigan, confined his speech to a criticism of Army housing costs and charged the Army spends two or three times as much as a private citizen to construct homes for Army officers.

Under WPA conduct of a $65,000,000 Army housing program, Engel said quarters for a noncommissioned officer and family were costing an average of $12,380 and the average cost of officers' homes was $17,300, minus cost of land and financing expenses.

In the Senate the attack of Clark and Nye on Administration foreign policy and increased Army plane authorizations forced over a vote on the $358,000,000 Army expansion bill until next week.

"I should like to record my view that the only purpose for which our national defense should be adequate, the only purpose for which we are justified in making authorizations or appropriations, is adequate defense of the United States itself," Clark told the Senate.

"I do not believe it is either necessary or justifiable for the Congress of the United States to be appropriating huge sums of money for the purpose of brandishing our fists in the faces of other nations, or thumbing our noses at any other power in the world."

British Reveal 1916 Letters on Arab Freedom

Publication Fails To Break Impasse On Palestine Status

By Frank R. Kelley

Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 3.—The British government today lifted the mantle of secrecy in which it had left for 23 years its wartime promises of independence for the Arabs in return for the support of the Arabs against the Turkish empire and Germany.

Arabs claims to independence in Palestine are based on ten letters which passed in 1915-16 between Sir Henry McMahon, then British high commissioner in Egypt, and Hussein Sherif, of Mecca.

Released as White Paper

Arab insistence that the letters be published became so great that they were finally released as a white paper.

They threw little new light on the bitter dispute as to whether McMahon included Palestine is his bargain with the Arabs, but they revealed the late "Lawrence of Arabia," long pictured as a romantic hero of the desert, as a clever British paymaster and instigator among the Arabs.

Publication of the McMahon letters did nothing to rescue the Palestine conferences from an iminent breakup over the proposal to make Palestine an Arab state. Some of the Jewish delegates are sailing for home, among them Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York. He will leave on the Queen Mary tomorrow.

To See MacDonald

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Jewish agency, will remain in London to negotiate with Malcolm MacDonald, colonial secretary, in the hope of discovering a way out of the impasse.

The McMahon correspondence sharpens the difference between the British and Arab delegations to the conference. The correspondence began with a letter from Hussein, dated July 14, 1915.

Saying that "the whole of the Arab nation have decided to accomplish their freedom," he asked Britain to consider the possibility of acknowledging the independence of the Arab countries bounded on the north by Mersina and Adana, on the east by Persia, on the south by the Indian Ocean, with the exception of Aden, and one the west by the Red and Mediterranean seas.

Loyalist Stand Embarrasses, Britain, France

England to Send Peterson to Burgos As Ambassador

By the Associated Press.

London, March 3.—The Madrid government, now deprived of the recognition of Britain and France, is embarrassing these two countries by apparently stiffening its resistance to the nationalists and thwarting the two democracies' attempts to bring an early end to the Spanish civil war.

Britain is replacing her commercial agent to Burgos, Sir Robert M. Hodgson, with an ambassador, and King George today approved appointment of Sir Maurice Peterson, who has served in Madrid and Washington, to the post.

The republicans were stubbornly holding onto their capital today, and also to the one-fourth of the country still in their hands, whereas British and French leaders expressed belief, as they extended formal recognition to the nationalists last Monday, that the war must end soon with Madrid's defeat.

Britain and France are anxious to have the war end and to penetrate into the new Spain's economic life, in which Italy and Germany, as older friends of the nationalists, already are entrenched.

Although Gen. Franco's military headquarters was silent concerning troop operations, officers indicated if an unconditional surrender were not forthcoming soon the nationalists would swing into another big offensive.

Britain, which imported considerable quantities of sherry, olive oil and other products from nationalist Spain in the last year, is expected to send a trade mission to Burgos soon and Juan March, 60-year-old Spanish multi-millionaire who helped finance the nationalists' revolt, has set up an office in London to carry on trade with Britain.

France, one of Spain's best customers before the war, took steps to break down economic barriers with nationalist Spain by restoring train and telephone facilities. She also is preparing to restore to the nationalists the remnants of the republican government's gold reserve which are held in French banks.

the airship, capable of carrying 74 passengers, was hailed as the flagship of a transoceanic merchant marine that is expected to keep the United States in the forefront of aerial transportation.

Before a party of more than 30 distinguished guests was taken aloft for an hour's cruise, Postmaster General Farley and R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department, emphasized the importance of the ship as representing American private enterprise, pitted against government-controlled aircraft of other countries.

"Private American enterprises must meet the competition of government-controlled and operated air lines of other nations," said Moore, who was former chairman of the first committee on civil aviation appointed by President Roosevelt in 1935.

"That one of our own companies is today in a technical position to begin such a service ahead of any other nation is characteristic evidence of the vigor of American initiative."

Postmaster Farley described the ship as "a tribute to the splendid record of pioneering achieved by the Pan American Airways and a pledge to the future of America's aerial leadership on the trade routes of the world."

Approximately 4,500 persons on the field itself and nearly 9,000 others who crowded the vicinity saw the christening.

Gasps of delight came as the plane rose smoothly aloft after the christening.

While tea was served, and the guests wandered about the ship examining the luxurious appointments, the silver mammoth followed the river for 2 miles or more and circled back over the Capital.

Mrs. Roosevelt had to leave the field before the Clipper rose on her flight after being named. Postmaster Farley also found it impossible to go aboard for the trip. Among those on the flight were R. Walton Moore, Stephen Gibbons, John W. Hanes, Richard C. Patterson, jr., Maj. Gen. and Mrs. H. M. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mr and Mrs. Oswald Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton M. Hester, Senator and Mrs. Josiah W. Bailey, Mrs. Hugh A. Wallace and daughter, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Dr. and Mrs. George W. Lewis, Representative and Mrs. Louis Ludlow, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Taylor.

On the platform during the ceremonies besides Mrs. Roosevelt were Counselor Moore, of the State Department; Postmaster General Farley, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, Chairman Noble, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Rear Admiral George T. Pettenggill, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard; Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Capt. John H. Towers, assistant chief of the Bureau of Naval Aeronautics. Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan American Airways, presided.

The airship will remain at the Anacostia Field through Sunday, and is scheduled to make another tour over the city that day.

An application for a license to send the clipper on its way across the Atlantic is pending with the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Loss Heavy as Rain Deluges Hawaiian City

Hilo, Hawaii, March 3 (AP).—Rain totaling 19.20 inches in 24 hours caused thousands of dollars damage in Hilo today, in the worst storm the city ever experienced.

Stores and main streets were flooded, but there were no casualties.

Here From India

BHICOO BATLIVALA

Gandhi Vitality Low as 'Death' Fast Begins

Mahatma Seeks Reforms From Ruler of Rajkot

By the Associated Press.

Rajkot, India, March 3.—Mohandas K. Kandhi began today his fifth hunger strike, determined to continue "unto death" unless the native ruler of Rajkot state meets his demands for administrative reforms.

The frail, 69-year-old spiritual leader withdrew from the outside world at noon and spent the rest of the day on a rustic cot in his bare 14x16-foot room.

Only closest associates could see the bespectacled little holy man. Among them was his 75-year-old sister.

Gandhi demanded the native ruler of Rajkot, Thakore Saheb Shri Dharmendrasinhji, give the people of the tiny western India state "a voice in the government." Rajkot is about 300 miles northwest of Bombay.

Spectators watched as Gandhi—who disdains the title "mahatma," or "saint"—prepared for his fast with a meal of whole wheat bread, tomatoes, cooked vegetables, oranges and a cup of hot goat's milk just before noon.

He had spent the morning following his usual routine of massages, ablutions and attending to his mail.

Ninety minutes after the fast began Gandhi received a letter from the Thakore. It refused to meet his demands.

Gandhi tossed it aside with the remark, "Merely adding fuel to the flames."

Physicians said Gandhi's vitality was very low. But the Nationalist leader declared he willingly would give his life "which has no insurance value" to get the Rajkot ruler to carry out reforms Gandhi declares he promised to make.

"He who urged me to undertake this fast will give me strength to go through with it," Gandhi said. "if it is His will I should still live for a while on this earth to carry on my self-chosen mission to humanity.

"No fast, however prolonged, can dissolve the body."

While Gandhi prayed for the success of his mission, new disturbances in India caused two deaths. Troops were sent to Lucknow, 700 miles from Rajkot, after Hindus and Moslems had clashed there. Troops also were ordered to stand by at Armistar, where one person was killed and 16 injured yesterday.

If Ghandi Dies Revolt Is Near, Lecturer Says

Miss Batlivala Says Indians Are Reaching Limit of Endurance

If Ghandi is allowed to continue his fast to death, as he says he will if his demands are not met, even Indian patience may be tried beyond the point of adherence to the principle of non-violence he preaches, according to Miss Bhicoo Batlivala, Indian nationalist, patriot, educator and barrister, who is here this week-end as the guest of Mrs. Richard Hogue, 125 Third street northeast.

Miss Batlivala, wearing a native sari of purple edged with a band of gold embroidery, and her hair in the latest "up" style, told of India's efforts to achieve freedom from British rule.

"Our resistance does not mean cowardice," she said. "It requires, as Ghandi teaches, that there be no falsehood, no ill will, no hatred of those who oppress us. It is not against the English people, but against the system that we are striving.

"Devoting Lives to the Cause"

"In India the 'haves' are fighting the battle of the 'have nots.' They are giving their wealth, devoting their lives to the cause and going to prison. The masses are so grateful, they will move at the lifting of a finger. There is hope and optimism in India. The issues are clear, and propaganda from Italy, Japan, Germany, falls on deaf ears."

Tremendous moral victories have been won in the past year, she said. The sincerity of the Indian leaders is indicated by the fact that the ministries, as soon as the Congress was formed, "taxed their own salaries from $20,000 to approximately $2,500.

There are 60 women in the Congress and 1 cabinet member, she said, but this is not surprising, as there has always been sex equality in India, according to Miss Batlivala.

40% of Taxes for Administration

Had English rule been a blessing, there would have been no revolt against it, she says. The Indian people have been forced to pay a duty on their own Indian-made cloth. Forty per cent of the taxpayers' money has gone for "administration," which means to pay government salaries and expenses.

Thousands die of starvation in a year, she says, not because there is not food in India, but because the cost is far beyond what the masses can pay and the raw materials are exported.

Miss Batlivala was educated in England and was called to the English bar at the age of 21—which cannot have been many years ago, judging from her youth and beauty. After practicing two years in England she returned to India to serve as personal assistant to the minister of education in the state of Baroda. She is now devoting her time to lecturing in various countries to acquaint them with India's situation.

Rep. Starnes Urges Deportation for Alien Saboteurs

Charlottesville, Va., Mar. 3.—Representative Starnes, of Alabama, in an Americanism Week address here tonight, declared he favored legislation which would provide for immediate deportation of all aliens found guilty of espionage or sabotage.

He also declared he favored deportation of all elements who advocate any form of government contrary to representative constitutional democracy and withdrawal of Federal or State aid to any educational institution which has among its faculty any member who advocates any form of government contrary to our own.

Promotion of American ideals and principles of government could be brought about, he said, by adult education by means of public forums, radio and press.

He demanded more stress upon the teaching of character and citizenship upon youth of land, which he said should begin first at the family fireside.

Kuhn Apologizes In Court to Jew He Called Liar

New York, March 3 (U.P.)—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the pro-Nazi German-American Bund, today made public apology to a Jewish lawyer he had called a liar.

The apology came in the court of Magistrate Brill, before whom Joseph Goldstein, the lawyer, charged Kuhn with criminal libel in a Bund publication describing Goldstein as "a law swindler and a dirty, filthy Jew."

Goldstein shouted that Kuhn's reluctance to tell the court where he lived was because the Bund leader is yellow, and Kuhn responded that Goldstein was a "liar."

Goldstein won his point, and Kuhn asked that as result of publication of his home address, he be given police protection for his family.

Ambassador Armour Praised in Chile For 'Great Courage, Lavish Giving' After Quake

Highest honor of the Chilean Red Cross Society was awarded before his death to Admiral Cary T. Grayson for his distinguished service as chairman of the League of Red Cross Societies. Award was formally given yesterday to his widow, by the Chilean Charge d'Affaires, Senor Don Sergio Hunneeus, at Red Cross headquarters here. Observing the presentation were Red Cross Chairman Norman Davis (left) and William Grayson (right), son of the admiral Gratitude of the Chilean people for United States aid during the recent earthquake disaster in that country came yesterday in two unuual forms.

While the thanks of the Chilean Air Force were being expressed to United States Army fliers who took medicines and supplies to the sufferers, the State Department received a copy of a front-page article in El Impartial, published at Santiago, containing striking praise for United States Ambassador Norman Armour and his activities, "which will always compel Chileans to cement the friendship of our respective countries."

Manifestation of results from the "Good Neighbor" policy were seen by observers in the two developments.

The article regarding Armour said in part:

"A rare type of diplomat is Mr. Norman Armour, Ambassador of the United States in our country. We say rare, not because he fails to represent in the widest sense of the term what constitutes an official of his category, but because of what he is able to be while remaining within his own sphere. . . .

"In the midst of our misfortune, the Ambassador of the United States exhibited great courage and a strong will of which he gave lavishly at the time of the affliction which, in unhappy hours, fell upon governors and governed. . . .

"Chile knows how to evaluate all this and attributes it to the very wise policy which that government is developing toward the young countries of our hemisphere.

"Mr. Norman Armour abandons conveniences and forgets his vacations. He goes on a trip to the zone of the catastrophe and thoroughly examines the whole magnitude of the distaster. He stimulates the assistance of his country and administers it personally with affectionate and kindly gestures, not curtailing the sacrifices entailed by this task. He makes a flight by plane, crossing seas and continents to reach Washington and inform the President of the event. His radio talk will not be forgotten within the imperishable memory of all Chileans. The Ambassador has won true popularity. It is a further triumph for his able contribution to the friendship of our respective countries which will always compel Chileans to cement it. Here are the links which form the old chain binding our sincere attachment to the United States."

The thanks of the Chilean air force was expressed in a letter from the commander in chief, Commodore of the Air Armando Castro L., to the American military attache at Santiago, Lieut. Col. Ralph H. Wooten:

"I have deplored, as have my comrades in aviation not to have been able to honor in suitable form these ambassadors of the air from the noble nation of the United States, which, by great sacrifice and complete understanding of human relations and in a true spirit of consolation for a stricken country, it has sent to us that aid for the victims of the recent catastrophe."

Capt. Cogswell Named To Command Houston

The cruiser Houston, from whose bridge President Roosevelt witnessed the recent naval maneuvers, will have a new commanding officer, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Capt. Francis Cogswell, now naval attache at Paris, will relieve Capt. George N. Barker in May, it was said. Capt. Barker will go to duty at the Boston Navy Yard.

Winchester, Va., March 3.—The taxable value of Winchester real estate is expected to show an increase this year of approximately $97,000, it was learned today.

Filipino Given Up to 2½ Years In Numbers Case

Justice Proctor termed the numbers game a "contemptible swindle," that makes "suckers" out of the poorest and most ignorant portion of the community, yesterday in sentencing Venancio Q. Liberato, Filipino, 24, to serve from six months to two and a half years on five counts of numbers violations.

Liberato, indicted with Juan R. Quijano, attorney, who was cleared by a District Court jury February 11, asked probation, pointing out he was only an employe of the ring.

Lincoln Temple To Mark Birthday

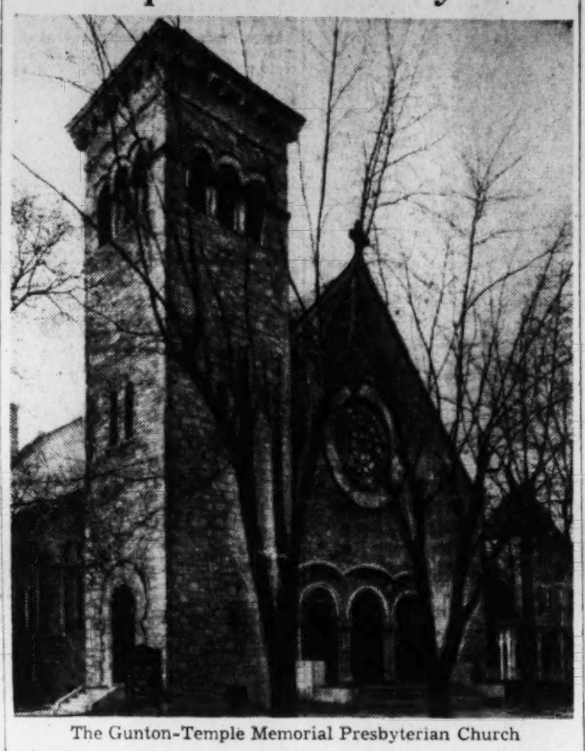
Tomorrow morning, the beginning the fifty-eighth anniversary services at Lincoln Congregational Temple, Dr. R. W. Brooks will preach a special anniversary sermon, using as a theme, "The Church Christ Built." The vested chorus choir, with Miss Otis Holley as guest soloist, will render selected music.

In the evening a union service by the Presbyterian churches will be held. The Rev. R. A. Fairley, pastor, Tabor Presbyterian Church, will preach.

Wednesday evening union service will be held by the Congregational churches of the District. Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, new minister at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will speak.

Church of the Week

Gunton-Temple Reorganizes And Expands Musical System



The Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church

Young People's Chorus, Children's Choir And Quartette Projected as Congregation Caters to Activities of Its Youth

Introduction of a reorganized and enlarged music program at Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church is "good news" for the congregation, especially the young people.

Announced by the session of the church, situated at Sixteenth and Newton streets northwest, the new program includes a young peoples' chorus of 30 voices; a choir of 25 children representing the Junior and Intermediate Sunday School departments and a quartette choir.

Mr. Braskamp (pastor)

Named to supervise the new setup is Mrs. Mildred Moore, who also will serve as soprano soloist in the quartette choir, which will include Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Clayton, tenor and contralto, and William R. Norton, jr., barytone.

Simultaneously came the news of the selection of Kenneth W. Frisbie as regular organist. Howard C. Waldo is chairman of the music committee, now busy with plans for Easter and Palm Sunday music.

The young peoples' chorus comprises singers of high school and college age, as well as several young married parishioners. Many of the latter are members of the "young married couples' club," which plays a vital role in the life of the congregation. The church is one of the few such institutions in the city having a junior board of deacons, which is under the chairmanship of Calvin Milans.

Mrs. Moore (music chief)

Other youth projects are the Senior Christian Endeavor Society, of which Seruch Kimball is councilor; the Intermediates, under the leadership of Miss Helen Smith, and the Junior Endeavorers and Boy Scouts, the latter two groups conducted by Bernard Donnelly. The Juniors meet during the morning church service.

Among other organizations are the Tower Class of Men, Andrew M. Smith teacher, which is affiliated with the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, and the Women's Class, taught by Mrs. Lucius Steere. Andrew N. Ross is Sunday School superintendent, while Mrs. Bernard Braskamp, the pastor's wife, is Junior Department head.

A. N. Ross (school head)

Boasting a colorful history, Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church represents a union of two Washington congregations — the Gunton-Temple Memorial Church, once located at Fourteenth and R streets northwest, and Gurley Memorial, Fourteenth and Meridian streets northwest.

Organized in 1882 as Unity Church, the original Gunton-Temple Church's name was changed 11 years later when the building at Fourteenth and R streets was presented by Mrs. Mary Gunton Temple as a memorial to her father, Dr. William Gunton, and her brother, Edward Temple.

Gurley, formed in 1889, was named for the Rev. Dr. Phineas Gurley, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church during President Lincoln's period of attendance there.

In 1920, during the Rev. Mr. Braskamp's seventh year as pastor at Gurley, the merger was effected and he was called to lead the united congregation. His leadership and the co-operation of members of the new group brought about the merger and the erection of the present $200,000 edifice.

The Rev. Mr. Braskamp holds his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Michigan, doctor of divinity degree from Hanover College, and took postgraduate work at Princeton University. He also studied at Princeton Theological Seminary.

For two years after coming here in 1911 he served as assistant pastor at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. Dr. Charles Wood was then pastor.

Tomorrow at 11 a. m. he will preach on "A Great Text From Paul's Epistle to the Colossians."

Andrew Rankin Chapel

The Rev. Richard H. Bowling, D. D., pastof of the First Baptist Church, Norfolk, will speak at the All University religious service in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Drys to Hear Sen. Frazier At Calvary

Representative Guyer And Maj. Brown Also Will Speak

The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, minister of Calvary Baptist Church, will deliver the seventh in a sermon series on "From Bethlehem to Calvary," tomorrow morning. His specific topic is to be "He Encounters Bitter Opposition."

Senator Frazier, of North Dakota; Representative Guyer, of Kansas, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Washington police, will speak under auspices of the United Dry Forces of Washington in a meeting in the church tomorrow evening. Dr. Everett Ellison will preside, assisted by Dr. W. L. Darby, of the D. C. Church Federation, and Fleurette Joffrie and Mildred Deane will handle the music.

Fountain Memorial. "A Loyal March With Christ" will be started by the congregation at two roll call services at 8:30 and 11 in the morning.

Miss Ethlyn Johnston, of the Church Service Bureau, who is assisting the financial campaign of the church federation, will be guest speaker at the women's service at 8 p. m.

First. "Being Charitable in Our Judgments" will be the sermon theme of Dr. E. H. Pruden in the morning. In the evening he will begin a series of pre-Easter evangelistic messages, his first to be on "Steps From Darkness to Light."

Dr. Homer P. Rainey, former president of Bucknell University, director of the National Youth Administration and president-elect of the University of Texas, will address the annual church dinner Thursday evening, marking the 137th anniversary of the church's founding.

Metropolitan. Assisted by Russell Morse Brougher, nationally known evangelist, Dr. John Compton Ball, pastor, will launch revival services in the morning, to continue through March 20.

Brougher, for ten years pastor of Baptist Temple, Brooklyn, and who assisted in the funeral services for the late Will Rogers, will speak at 11 a. m. on "The Non-Going Church and the Non-Churchgoers," and at 8 p. m. on "The Unfailing Detective."

Fifth. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "The Elims of Life." At 7:45 p. m. Dr. Briggs will speak on "The Life of George W. Truett," as brought out in the new biography of Dr. Truett written by Powhatan James.

Italian. "The Life and Development of a Church" will be the Rev. M. C. Marseglia's sermon topic at morning worship. The sermon will be in Italian and Holy Communion will be observed.

Tuesday, at 8 p. m., the Circolo Vigilanti, Women's Missionary Circle and the Seekers of Good Club will meet at the church.

Takoma Park. In observance of the twentieth anniversary of the organization of the Sunday school, the whole school will assemble at 9:45 tomorrow morning and take part in a program prepared by Robert W. Collison, superintendent. Former Superintendents Harry G. Heiges and John Walker, and Prof. F. Vaughan Pultz will speak.

At the church hour, Communion will be observed and the Rev. William E. La Rue will give a brief Lenten sermon entitled, "Jesus Bearing the Cross."

At the evening service the monthly songfest will be held, led by the combined choirs.

Rev. C. C. Hung Will Speak at National City

Chinese Community Church Pastor to Be Guest at Vesper Hour

Dr. Raphael H. Miller, minister of National City Christian Church, will preach at the morning service tomorrow on "Magic and Miracle in Religion," as part of a sermon series on great questions of religion.

The Rev. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church, will speak at the 6 p. m. vesper service on China.

Thursday at the church night dinner, Page Etchison, of the Y. M. C. A., will give an illustrated lecture on "The Passion Play."

Ninth Street. "The Humiliating Face," third in a series of talks on "Bible Faces of Jesus," will be described by the Rev. Clifford H. Jope at morning worship.

In the evening the Rev. Mr. Jope will start a series of sermons on "The Voices of Jesus," with "The Saviour's Voice" as his first subject.

Columbia Heights. Continuing his "Christ-Centered Crusade," the Rev. A. P. Wilson will preach in the morning on "What Jesus Taught About Man" and in the evening on "The Christ of Bethlehem and Nazareth."

Youth in Capital Churches

Tolerance, Booker T. Washington, Felix Mendelssohn and Africa all will come in for their just deserts tomorrow, starting at 7:30 p. m., as Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Church devotes its evening service to a youth program.

Paul Berry, leader of the service, will speak on Tolerance, which is to be the theme of the program. Isabelle Prosner will give the prayer and Evelyn Leigh will read the Scripture. Eugene Shoemaker will then discuss Booker Washington's contribution to humanity and Paul Cole will do the same for Mendelssohn. Yvonne Atkinson will read a poem entitled "Africa," and the minister, the Rev. W. F. Atkinson, will preach on "The Bases of Intolerance."

Out in Takoma Park at about the same time the young people of Trinity Episcopal Church will be holding a special meeting, with young people of other churches of the community as their guests and the Rev. W. A. Keese, of Metropolitan Methodist Church, as guest speaker.

Another Methodist Church—Petworth—also will be having a Young People's Night tomorrow, starting at 8 p. m.

Elsie Hawn will offer the prayer and Charles Mears will read the scripture, after which the girls' choir, under the direction of Miss Beth King, and Murrell Lank will lead the singing. Dr. Steelman will conclude his Sunday night sermon series on Black Rock, by Ralph Connor, with his specific topic, "A New Birth."

Marjorie Crouch will direct presentation of a program on "Intelligence in Loyalty" before the Metropolitan Baptist Young People's Union tomorrow at 6:15 p. m. Dr. Russel Brougher, visiting evangelist, is to speak.

Dr. Ewald B. Lawson, who will be speaking at various services here in the next week, will be heard by the united group of senior, young people's and round table leagues of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation at 6:45 p. m. tomorrow.

The three Epworth League groups of Emory Methodist Church, South, will be going full blast tomorrow at 7 p. m. Mary Lou Garvin will be leading the intermediates' discussion of "Flash—from India." Judith Leichhardt, assisted by Mrs. Emory C. Cushing, will lead the seniors on "What Do We Believe," and David Halpin will conduct the young people's investigation of "Art Symbols."

The four Christian Endeavor societies of Ninth Street Christian Church would seem to be in their usual state of activity. Tomorrow, at 6:30 p. m. The Crusaders, meeting in the intermediate department, will be led by Faith Caufield on the topic "The Church Battles for Righteousness." The Forum, at 6:45 in the senior department will be led by Ralph Frame, jr., in considering the same subject. Freda Wimer will lead the young people's group in that department in discussing "As Others See Me," and Robert Middleton will lead the Philo Christo Society in the church house on "Urban America—A New Frontier."

3 Episcopal Churches to Hear Guests

Bishop Freeman To Confirm Class At All Saints'

Episcopal leaders, headed by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, and including Canon William Bradner, of the Cathedral, and the Rev. Vincent H. Gowen, canon of the Cathedral of St. Mary and St. John, in Manila, will be guests in three churches here tomorrow morning.

Bishop Freeman will visit All Saints' Church in Chevy Chase at 11 a. m. to confirm a class of over 80 in services at which the rector, the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, will assist.

Trinity Church at the same time will be holding services celebrating the second anniversary of the opening of the present building, at which the Rev. Mr. Bradner, canon precentor of the Cathedral, is to preach.

Canon Gowen, back from 11 years in the Philippines, is to be guest speaker at St. Paul's, Rock Creek Parish, at the same hour, bringing a message of Lent, and will also tell of his work in the Philippines. He also will address members of the Church School at 9:30 a. m.

The Rev. Charles R. Mengers, vicar of St. John's, Mount Rainier, will be guest preacher at the Rock Creek Parish Lenten service Wednesday night.

Tomorrow at 8 p. m. Dr. F. J. Bohanan, Rock Creek pastor, will continue his series of lectures on the history, worship and doctrine of the church.

St. John's. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector, returned last night from Chicago, where he has been speaking under the auspices of the Churchman's Club of the Chicago diocese, and will preach at 9:30 and 11 a. m. Holy Communion will be celebrated at the latter service and at 8 a. m., when the Business and Professional Women's group of the church will attend.

The Rev. William C. White will officiate and preach at evening prayer.

Epiphany. The special noon-day speaker from next Monday to Friday will be the Very Rev. Chester B. Emerson, dean of Trinity Cathedral in Cleveland. These services last from 12:05 to 12:30 p. m.

Communion services will be held tomorrow at 8 and 11 a. m., with Dr. ZeBarney Phillips, the rector, preaching at the latter. The Rev. Duncan Fraser will conduct evening prayer at 8 p. m.

Our Saviour. "Do We Really Want to Find God?" will be the sermon theme of the Rev. A. L. Wills, rector, at morning worship.

Tuesday at the 8 p. m. Lenten service the Rev. Paul D. Wilbur, rector of the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, will speak.

Transfiguration. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 and 11 a. m. The Rev. J. J. Queally will officiate and preach. On Wednesdays during Lent there is to be Holy Communion at 11 a. m. and Lenten Devotions at 8 p. m.

Ruhland to Speak At Mt. Pleasant Forum on Health

"Faith in God" will be the sermon subject of Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, minister of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, tomorrow at the 11 a. m. service. This is the second sermon in a series considering the general theme, "The Church and Its Resources in a Day of Need."

The adult forum is beginning at 10 a. m. a series of discussions on Americanism and Human Welfare. "Healtn: What Shall We Do About It?" will be presented by Dr. George C. Ruhland, head of the District of Columbia Health Department.

First Congregational. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson will preach on "Man's Need of God" at the 11 a. m. service.

Demand necessitates the repeat showing of "Green Pastures" as a part of the 7:45 p. m. program. Spirituals will be sung by Robert T. Murray 3d.

Canon Gowen To Be Guest At Cathedral

Episcopal Diocesan Missions Department Sponsors Service

An American missionary who has served many years in the Orient, the Rev. Vincent H. Gowen, will preach at the special service arranged by the department of missions of the Diocese of Washington in the Cathedral tomorrow at 4 p. m. The Rev. Franklin J. Bohanan, D. D., rector of Rock Creek Parish and honorary canon of the Cathedral, has been in charge of the arrangements.

Preliminary missionary meetings, with the Rev. Mr. Gowen conducting, have been held since Thursday in the northern convocation of the diocese with the Cathedral service tomorrow planned as the climax of this effort to dramatize the church's work throughout the world.

The Rev. Mr. Gowen, principal of St. Jame's School at Besao in the northern province of the Philippines, is acting priest in charge of the mission of St. Mary the Virgin at Sagada. He also serves as canon of St. Mary and St. John's Cathedral in Manila.

Before going to the Philippine Islands, he was in China from 1913 to 1927, serving as headmaster of St. Paul's School in Anking for three years. The Rev. Mr. Gowen visited the United States in 1929 as lecturer on Oriental studies at the University of Washington.

Canon Edward S. Dunlap will deliver the sermon at the service of morning prayer tomorrow at 11 o'clock. Music at the 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. services will be rendered by the Cathedral choir of men and boys under the direction of Robert Barrow, organist and choirmaster. Other services tomorrow will include the celebration of Holy Communion in the Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m.

Tuesday, Canon William M. Bradner is to speak on "The Hymnal as an Aid to Devotions" with the choir boys singing the hymns described in the lecture.

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of Washington, will continue his series of addresses on "The Beatitudes" Wednesday, and Canon Dunlap speaks on "New Apprehensions" Thursday.

German Youth Urged to Shun Drink, Smokes

Leadership Tells Nation to Follow Hitler's Example

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 3.—The Nazi leadership today called on German youth to assume a new "national duty"—abstinence from alcohol and tobacco in emulation of Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Opening a campaign against intoxicants and smoking, Youth Leader Baldur von Schirach, and other orators held up the fuehrer who neither drinks nor smokes, as the example for all good Nazis.

Since beer was not mentioned, it was assumed the campaign was directed only against liquor.

Under the auspices of the national health department of the Nazi party a congress is to meet at Frankfurt-on-Main Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to consider the topic of "Public Health and Harmful Indulgences."

More than 14,000 health officials and others have been notified to attend to hear speeches by Dr. Gerhard Wagner, leader of the organized medical profession, and others.

12 Commandments Listed

As the drive started, a ban on pushing the sale of cigars and cigarettes was imposed by the Nazi-organized restaurant and refreshment trades in their own establishments.

Twelve commandments were listed by the Nazis to back a slogan urging "wholesome life is a national duty." These objectives were:

Abstinence of youth from alcohol and tobacco.

Abstinence of pregnant and nursing mothers; abstemiousness by those endangered by either alcohol or tobacco.

Alcoholic abstinence whenever carrying special responsibilities, such as driving an auto; severe punishment to be imposed for alcoholic offenses.

Control of alcohol and tobacco advertising by a German business council in close co-operation with Nazi leaders.

Prohibition of advertising that promotes alcohol or tobacco as beneficial to health or useful in preventing disease.

Campaign Proposed

Use of at least a third of alcohol consumption taxes for establishing settlements for hereditarily sound families comprised of numerous children.

Establishment of public restaurants which do not serve alcoholic drinks.

Promotion of scientific experiments on nonalcoholic drinks.

A publicity campaign on the nature of alcohol, the misuse of tobacco, and their dangers to the people and the race.

Education of youths in wholesome conduct as a national duty.

Physical exercise for the entire nation.

$8,824 in Gifts Reported in Drive Of Boys Club

Contributions totaling $8,824.50 were reported yesterday by team captains of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club fund drive at a volunteer pep luncheon in the Cosmos Club. The drive, ending March 18, has a goal of $75,000.

Two guest speakers yesterday were the Rev. James Sheehan, of Catholic Charities, and Mary Mason, director of WRC Radio Home Forum, who expressed their views on the work of the club. Other speakers were Maj. Brown, superintendent of police and founder of the organization, who presented a film of the clubs activities, and L. Gordon Leech, campaign director.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

The Public Library presents the Pro-Musica Quartet (Milton Schwartz, Jeon Sevely, Ralph Hersh and William Brennand) Friday night in the Georgetown branch. Program: Quartet in B flat major, Op. 67 (Brahms), "Night" and "Tongatabu" (Bloch), "Molly on the Shore" (Grainger), "Rispetti e Strambotti" (Malipiero).

Through the courtesy of the Honorable and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, the District of Columbia Public Library presented last evening in the Georgetown branch the first of two concerts of chamber music. As on similar occasions in the last few seasons, the children's reading room, extemporized into an auditorium, was filled with guests appreciative of the opportunity to hear a pleasant and informal discourse of music. The performers were Milton Schwartz, Jeno Sevely, Ralph Hersh and William Brennand, members of the National Symphony Orchestra, constituting the Pro-Musica Quartet.

These young enthusiasts, unwearied by their orchestral duties, have already this season played four concerts for the Washington Chamber Music Society, and in last evening's program they did not repeat any of the compositions. Instead, they had managed to prepare a new list of works which began with the substantial B flat major quartet of Brahms, and they gave it a vivacious and satisfactory reading, bearing well in mind that this is one of Brahms' most genial and extroverted utterances.

The remainder of the concert was kept in much the same mood by means of music designed more for entertainment than for the evocation of serious thoughts. First came Ernest Bloch's impressionistic sketches: "Night," with its suggestion of stellar splendor and mud-nace quietude, and "Tongatabu," with its echoes of primitive festivities.

These were followed by Percy Grainger's familiar arrangement of that lively Irish tune, "Molly on the Shore," and Gian Francesco Malipiero's "Rispetti e Strambotti," a string of twenty short pieces full of quips and fancies, piquantly harmonized for the emphasis of humor. The musicians were in good form, and played the entire program with a nice balance of voices and technical assurance.

Press Women Envisage Visit of British Rulers

Mrs. Roosevelt Heads Distinguished List Of Spectators

tinued, "is bounded on the west by the Hope Diamond, on the South by Carter Glass, on the North by the Guffey girls, and on the east by international complications."

"New Anthem" Played

The orchestra swung into "The Watch on the Rhine," which the interlocutor explained is "the Senate Military Affairs Committee's new national anthem."

Next the stage hands set up two stepladders to represent the second story of the White House, where "lots of interesting things happen."

But, the interlocutor continued, there is another well-known house in "Our Town,"—the doghouse. As she called out, "Anybody in the doghouse tonight?" a man rushed across the stage, carrying an enormous dog catcher's net, pursuing a lady wearing a tricorne hat. But the dog catcher fell down.

The interlocutor explained: "That's Martin Dies. Makes a good dog catcher!"

Then came the theme song of "Our Town":

"Stop beating round the mulberry bush
And get me on the payroll."

Offstage sounded a great clamor of speech-making and banging of gavels, as the stagehands unrolled a picture of the Capitol dome.

"Old Faithless" on Scene

The noise came from a house at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue, "now trying to dominate the scene."

"That's our private geyser—Old Faithless," the interlocutor said, "starts spouting in January every year."

Among other acts were:

Four gorgeously dressed ladies, carrying money bags, may or may not have represented Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, and Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, as they sang, danced, and moaned over the fact that Cleopatra, Good Queen Bessie, Marie Antoinette, and Dolly Madison, "the old meanies, kept their secrets in their beanies." On they went about serial rights, and burning the midnight banana oil, until at the end they chanted:

"We tell
And tell!
And tell!
But not QUITE all."

Here one dignified lady stepped forward and said:

"But Edith Bolling Wilson . . ."

The other three pointed at her, chorusing: "The Little Girl!" as she finished ". . . Tells ALL!"

A stork insisted upon entering the White House door, but was shooed away by a butler, as the interlocutor told him "that package is to be delivered in Seattle."

Preparing For Royalty

Then in the White House the butler and maid were discovered dusting and sweeping, getting out the gold plate and the six kinds of tea, getting ready for the King and Queen.

The butler told the maid Mrs. Roosevelt was "so worried she hadn't gone anywhere for at least two hours," because "she can't think where the King and Queen will hang their crowns, and she's afraid they might misunderstand if she asks them if they've got crown insurance."

"This house just ain't equipped for crowns," commented the maid, and then asked, with an afterthought, "Or is it?"

They hid the two billion dollar stabilization fund and the airplane secrets, but just left the war debts lying around, because, as the butler explained, "The British won't pay any attention to them anyhow."

Then came the noise of the procession up the avenue, as the interlocutor, as a radio announcer, shouted:

"See the motorcycle escort coming up Pennsylvania Avenue in reverse! See Secretary Hull waving trade agreements! See Secretary Morgenthau waving IOU's!

They All Bow

"The King's bowing! The Queen's bowing! Washington Monument's bowing!

"They're at the White House gates. They're at the door. My golly, they've got enough attendants to take back the Thirteen Colonies. And look at their luggage!

"Ladies, Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, preceded by their entourage!"

"I say, my love, rawther nice little shooting box," commented the King, as he and the Queen looked over the White House.

"Or head gardener's cottage, Bertie," answered the Queen.

Both carried umbrellas, and wore their brightest crowns.

The Secret Service then searched the King to the horror of the Queen and their attendants, explaining that he's "just looking for matches, Your Majesty. There's something about the White House that makes a Britisher careless with matches."

Take Cigarette Lighter

After turning out all King George's pockets, the Secret Service man deprived him of his cigarette lighter.

The King and Queen promptly discovered the lack of a place to hang their crowns, "Bertie" pointing out, "We really cawn't wear them all the time. Brother-of mine developed heart trouble from wearing his, you know."

They solved the problem by hanging them on their umbrellas pending official action by the Department of State.

As Act II began the Queen was taking a nap, reclining over the stepladder representing her suite on the second floor of the White House. She was awakened by a brash young woman fooling with the crown clutched in the Queen's hand.

As the Queen awakened, she screamed in horror:

"A lady in His Majesty's bedchamber!"

"This ain't no lady, Queen. It's a newspaper reporter," the impudent creature replied, hauling out her pencil and paper.

The reporter questioned the Queen in rhyme, as the Queen murmured shocked remonstrances. Among the questions were:

"What does Your Majesty think of the American girl?
How does Your Majesty keep her hair in curl?
Tell me, Your Majesty, when and how
Will you let the Duchess take a bow?
How does a Princess behave when she's spanked?

Take Away Crasher

As the reporter shouted the last two questions, the secret service snatched this gate crasher away from the second floor of the White House. No sooner had she gone when other intruders arrived, announced by the maid as people of importance: Mrs. Marchmont Whippoorwill and Mrs. Tommy Trotter.

In sailed a seagoing dowager, and a jaded, hard-boiled horsey woman, who curtsied frequently to the Queen.

With exaggerated English accent, from which she occasionally lapsed, Mrs. Marchmont Whippoorwill announced, "Your Majesty, we represent the Amalgamated Mothahs of Washington Debutantes."

Mrs. Tommie Trotter, the horsey woman, interrupted brusquely with "Yes, Your Majesty, we want to know who this man Kennedy thinks he is that he can keep our daughters from being presented at court."

As the Queen grew more bewildered, they finally presented to her a petition "on behalf of the Society Mothah-hood of Washington," yards of which unrolled and tangled itself around the struggling Queen.

Mrs. Whippoorwill asked what message they could take back to the 1,000 "mothahs of Washington debutantes, present and future, assembled at the Sulgrave Club awaiting our return."

The Queen replied:

"Tell them I will take the matter up with my mother-in-law!"

"I feel certain Queen Mary will understand a mothah's heart," oozed Mrs. Whippoorwill, as the two stumbled over each other backing out of the royal presence.

The King looked a little sheepish as he returned to the White House after what seems to have been a poker party, with Vice President John Nance Garner and James Roosevelt among the players.

Song and Dance Finale

The finale was a song and dance by the Great American Public, a very pretty young girl in a red, white and blue costume. She flirted alternately with the King and the Spirit of George Washington, singing a parody of "My Heart Belongs to Daddy."

Then Mrs. Roosevelt concluded the program—off-the-record.

Honor guests of the club, besides Mrs. Roosevelt and Lady Lindsay, included:

From Washington "official" society, all "Cabinet ladies" except Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who was unable to attend; and Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

From the Diplomatic Corps: Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador; Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Senora Doña Isabel Reyes de Lopez, wife of the Colombian Ambassador, and Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the Swiss Ambassador.

Congress Representatives

Nine Indicted In Passport Fraud Mystery

International News Service

New York, March 3.—A long-standing international mystery was revived today when a New York Federal grand jury indicted eight men and a woman in the passport conspiracy case that has been under investigation since Mr. and Mrs. Adolph A. Rubens disappeared into Russian prisons more than a year ago.

Central figures in the mystery, Mr. and Mrs. Rubens were among those indicted. Before they journeyed to the Soviet Union they had obtained, allegedly by fraudulent means, American passports under the names of Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson.

Others indicted included Aaron Sharfin, a former clerk in the New York consulate of the Egyptian government; Ossip Garber, a Russian-born photographer, and Edward Blatt, a New York attorney who was accused of having given legal services to "counsel, advise, aid and assist in the preparation of false and fraudulent applications for passports."

2 Previously Indicted

Sharfin and Garber are under two previous indictements in connection with the celebrated case which is believed to involve worldwide espionage ramifications.

The other four persons indicted today were named as John Blank, Ivan Doe, Dmitri Doe and Alexis Doe, all apparently fictitious names of real persons. It was believed the first of these four is an American, while the remaining three are Russians who probably have evaded trial here by fleeing to Russia.

Started in 1934

The bill of indictment related an amazing story of international plotting and intrigue. The document said the passport fraud network was set up and began functioning January 1, 1934, and its activities reached tentacles out of New York to such widely separated cities as Chicago, Merrill, Wis.; Quebec, Canada; Basle, Switzerland; Stockholm, Sweden; Cheb, Czecho-Slovakia; Eger, Germany; Spiefeld, Austria; Zegreb, Yugoslavia, and Moscow.

Rubens was charged with having conspired with others to get birth certificates of dead persons from the files of the New York City Health Department to use in falsely applying for passports. The couple left for Russia October 16, 1937, as Donald L. Robinson and Ruth Norma Robinson, names of dead children, obtained from the Health Department's records.

Lincoln Citizens Win Award of Civic Federation

On behalf of the Federation of Civic Associations, Charles M. Thomas, president, last night presented the 1938 Civic Award, a scroll of merit, to the Lincoln Civic Association, at a special meeting in the auditorium of the Francis Junior High School. The award was accepted by Dr. Edward F. Harris, association president.

Felicitations were extended by George W. Beasley and Woolsey W. Hall, former federation presidents; Col. West A. Hamilton, member of the Board of Education; John Edelin, Southeast Civic Association; Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, Rock Creek Civic Association; Mrs. Velma Williams, Pleasant Plains Civic Association; J. D. Jenkins, Midway Civic Association; William H. Henson, Bloomingdale Civic Association; B. T. Montgomery, Fairmount Heights community, and Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools. Dean George A. Parker, of Terrell Law School, was master of ceremonies.

Gold Policy Held Treasury Menace By Senator King

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, charged yesterday that the Administration's gold policy has placed the Treasury in a position where it cannot lower the price of gold "without precipitating a major disturbance in the already chaotic monetary and economic condition of the world."

The Treasury has held the price at which it pays for gold stationary at $35 an ounce since January, 1934. Prior to the devaluation of the dollar, gold was priced at $20.67 an ounce.

Senator King asserted that if the Treasury dropped its price policy of paying $35 an ounce for gold, the price "would at once become variable and probably fluctuate widely in price."

He has just introduced a bill to restore to the people "the right to possess gold and gold coin in order that gold may circulate freely within and from our country."

D. C. Asks Participation In Public Works Bill

The Commissioners yesterday requested the District be included in the bill providing a new Department of Public Works submitted recently by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

In a letter to the Senator, the Commissioners pointed out that in one section of the proposed bill consolidation of PWA, WPA and some social security agencies under the new department, excluded District participation. The wording in the bill applies only to "the States and Territories."

When Pius XII Visited Washington

Pius XII, the erstwhile Cardinal Pacelli, is the first Pontiff to have visited America. The greatest traveller ever to ascend the throne of St. Peter, he came to Washington in October, 1936, and charmed all those who saw him.

Edward T. Folliard, of The Post's staff, "covered" that visit of the Holy Father. Folliard has written a special article in Sunday's Post, in which he gives a close-up of the new Pope, and discusses some of the problems confronting him.

Funeral Services For Col. Archer To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Col. Percy F. Archer, U. S. M. C. retired, will be held at the Ft. Myer Chapel at 11 this morning, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

ARCHER

Col. Archer, who had been on duty here for five years before his retirement in 1936, died at Bel Air, Md., March 2. He leaves three daughters, Frances H., Sallie M., and Ethel M. Archer, who live here, two sons, Franklin and Julian, and a sister, Mrs. F. H. Strasbaugh, of Bel Air.

A native of Maryland, Col. Archer entered the Marine Corps in 1903 and soon after entered the Quartermaster branch, which he served the rest of his career. During the World War, he was assistant quartermaster of the corps here and at one time was quartermaster-paymaster director of the Haitian constabulary. He was awarded the Navy Cross for distinguished service during the Marine operations in Nicaragua.

Col. Smith Named Aide in Command Of Marine Corps

Col. Holland M. Smith was named Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps yesterday, filling a post that has been vacant two years.

COL. SMITH

At present director of operations and training at Marine Headquarters here, Col. Smith has had an unusual record of combat service. He participated in four overseas expeditions and most of the battles of the World War. Now with the Fleet Marine Force as an observer during the maneuvers in the Carribean, he will take over his duties here April 1.

Born in Alabama, Col. Smith entered the Marine Corps in 1905. He participated in expeditions to the Phillipines, Panama, and Santo Domingo, seeing active service against bandits on several occasions. In France he was adjutant of Fourth Marine Brigade at the battles of Verdun and Chateau-Thierry, was with the First Army at Soissons, St. Mihiel, Oise-Aisne ocensive and the Meuse-Argonne, and participated in the march to the Rhine.

Lieut. Col. Surles Is Transferred

Lieut. Col. Alexander Day Surles, chief of the War Department press section for the past four years, yesterday was ordered to duty at Fort Knox, Ky.

SURLES

An outstanding expert on mechanized cavalry, Col. Surles will be assigned to the Army's Mechanized Brigade. The shift is effective June 30. Col. Surles is a West Pointer and a native of Wisconsin. He has had several previous assignments at Fort Myer, Va., and in the War Department.

Fire Destroys 3 Buildings of Staunton Plant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., March 3.—Two firemen were injured and 175 workers fled to safety as a wind-whipped fire destroyed three buildings of the Basic-Witz Furniture Co. here today. Damage was estimated between $100,000 and $300,000.

The blaze began at 2 p. m. and for the rest of the day the town's entire fire force fought the flames. Tonight skeleton remains of the plant were still burning.

Two firemen were burned when a section of roof in the main building collapsed, hurling tongues of flame from the windows. The victims were Luther DePriest and Jack Carter, the former suffering serious injuries. The fire fighters were menaced by exploding paint drums, and, although the wind was blowing in the opposite direction, they watered several oil storage tanks 250 yards away as a precautionary measure.

6,000 Persons Watch

Six thousand persons watched the community's biggest fire in five years as flames devoured the three-story wooden structures. Traffic in the area was jammed and State police were called to the scene. The plant is east of the city limits on Jefferson highway, U. S. Route 250.

According to Superintendent Thomas L. Good, the fire started by a spark from a switch, igniting materials in the finishing room, in which the paint drums were stored, and situated in the central section of the main building's second floor. The fire spread quickly through the factory and to the two adjacent buildings.

Employes discovered the blaze and gave the alarm. The 175 workers made an orderly escape from the plant, and the business department staff managed to save the office records. The buildings, containing lumber and finished furniture, were burned to the ground.

Auto Victim Gets $8,000 Damages

Martin S. Hoff, of 1304 F street northwest, yesterday was awarded an $8,000 judgment against the Elite Laundry Co., of 2119 Fourteenth street northwest, for injuries he suffered when struck by an automobile belonging to the firm in September, 1935, on Columbia road near Ontario road northwest.

Last month a jury set damages at $10,000. The first judgment was vacated by Justice Gordon.

All's Well—

As this is written little is known of the details of the meeting of the Board of Education which late yesterday resulted in lifting the ban on the Marian Anderson concert. It is clear, however, that the action was taken as a specific concession, to meet a specific situation, and without altering established precedents which only Congress can change.

On this basis it may confidently be asserted that its decision was wholly constructive, and one which will be welcomed by the great majority of intelligent Washingtonians.

It could not have been easy for the Board of Education to reverse its earlier position. It could not have been easy for its members to risk the criticism that they were yielding to a pressure which was for the most part highly emotionalized and wholly unrealistic. Precisely for those reasons, the members of the board are the more deserving of the heartiest congratulations of all Washingtonians.

The Board of Education has shown real courage and real stature. There is no section of the community which will recognize this more clearly than those who feel, rightly or wrongly, that its earlier action represented unfair discrimination. Now it only remains to be sure that this controversial concert will prove a community success worthy of all the free advertising which has been devoted to it. Miss Anderson's singing is always an event to be remembered. She will doubtless strive to exceed even her most notable best when she is welcomed to Washington on Easter Day.

Toward Co-operation

Opposition of the Board of Education to the proposed consolidation of the schools with other municipal agencies was taken for granted. It was the conciliatory note in the report adopted by the board which gives it special significance. Apparently a majority of the board members are eager to see the District government reorganized if the principle of independent control over educational policy is upheld.

The board offered to co-operate in the task of articulating "the existing school department with whatever plan of municipal government may be established on the basis of the recommendations of the Griffenhagen report." That is a truly constructive attitude which should not be overlooked by any agency inclined to fight the District reorganization plan because of disagreement with some of its details.

As a practical matter, it would be wise to eliminate the educational system from the proposed new set-up at the earliest opportunity. Regardless of what may be said for or against the suggested department of education in place of an independent school board, a fight on that issue would jeopardize the far more important objective of securing a genuine municipal charter for Washington. Friends of the District ought to recognize this fact and join in co-operative support for those parts of the Griffenhagen report which have a good chance of being enacted.

In return for the prospective elimination of this controversy, the Board of Education should be prepared to make some concessions of its own. The board insists that control of educational policy should be retained by a body of local citizens chosen for that special purpose. Its argument has special weight because of the prevalence of this type of organization in the United States. But this logic quickly goes astray when it is extended beyond "the moral and mental education of children" to other activities.

The board criticizes the Griffenhagen report because it would transfer "certain specific school functions" to various departments of the municipal government. The operation of school buildings, for example, would be assigned to the proposed department of public works. Obviously the construction and operation of buildings is not a "school function." It is a community function which could be performed with much greater efficiency and economy if all District buildings are operated under a single management.

Another note in the board's report suggests opposition to the proposed department of parks and recreation which would absorb the community center activities of the schools. Playgrounds and recreation must be closely related to the schools. Yet there must be consolidation of the three local agencies operating in this field before any adequate recreational program for the District can be anticipated. Here is another case in which the board should stand ready to make concessions in the interests of the community welfare.

The first essential to obtain constructive action on the Griffenhagen report is co-operation of local groups and agencies. That does not imply surrender for any group, but it certainly calls for compromises on the part of all.

150 Years Of Congress

Americans like to regard themselves as a young people and the United States as a young Nation living in the New World in contradistinction to the Old World of Europe.

By certain standards this country is, indeed, a relative newcomer to the family of nations. China, which can trace her history several millennia before the birth of Christ; Japan, with her imperial line going back in unbroken succession to 660 B. C.; Italy, with her Roman tradition still a living reality; France, Great Britain—these and other nations can obviously lay claim to greater antiquity than can the United States.

But if the United States is relatively young, some of our institutions are now hoary with age by comparison with those of other and older nations. Today, for example, we celebrate the 150th anniversary of the first meeting of Congress. There are not many other freely elected bodies left in the world and very few, indeed, whose record goes back so far.

In fact, aside from the British Parliament and the Icelandic Parliament, with its 1,000 year lineage, the American Congress is today the oldest representative legislature in existence. And it has probably changed less in nature, functions and authority than any other. The British Parliament today, for instance, is a very different institution from what it was before the Reform Bills of 1832 and 1867 and the Parliament Act of 1910 which considerably curtailed the authority of the House of Lords.

Direct election of Senators and woman suffrage have greatly increased popular participation in the choosing of members of both houses of Congress. They have become more responsive to the popular will as well as more susceptible to gusts of public opinion, wise and foolish alike. But Congress, although larger in membership, remains today substantially the same body as it was in the days when the new American nation formally began to operate a century and a half ago. The American experiment in government under the Constitution, despite recurrent stresses and strains and the grim holocaust of a civil war, has succeeded beyond expectations. And while today there are forces within and without the Nation that would twist our Government into strange contortions of democracy, there is every reason to believe that now as heretofore the good sense, the patriotism, the love of freedom of the American people and their chosen representatives will prevail.

In the 150 years of its history, Congress has often been under attack. Not so many years ago it was popular to scorn Congress, to say that the country was always better off when it had adjourned. Fortunately, this attitude no longer obtains. Like all collections of men and women, Congress has its share of timeservers, crackpots and demagogues. But its virtues have always outweighed its faults and its faults have largely been the faults of the people it represents.

In saluting Congress on the 150th anniversary of its first meeting, the American people are giving thanks for the self-government which they have so abundantly enjoyed in the past and which they doubtless will continue to enjoy in the future.

Gilbertsville

After deleting an item of over $17,000,000 from the independent offices bill for construction work on the Gilbertsville Dam, the House has surrendered to the Senate and agreed to retain the appropriation. Thus goes glimmering the hope that Congress would make more generous flood-control provision for the country at large and cease to pour an unduly large proportion of funds available into the favored Tennessee Valley region.

The final debate in the House revealed an utter lack of agreement as to the ultimate cost of the Gilbertsville project. Moreover, testimony as to the purpose and the urgency of the work was conflicting. It is, of course, impossible for the layman to judge of the truth of the statements made. But Congress should at least have tried to arrive at some understanding of what its commitments are to be before voting funds for continuing this construction work.

Some members insist that approval of the Gilbertsville development virtually commits Congress to an outlay of $200,000,000 in the Tennessee Valley, to say nothing of an estimated additional $400,000,000 for an auxiliary program on the Cumberland and Ohio Rivers. As Representative Dirksen sums up the situation by saying that the original action of the House in withholding funds for Gilbertsville "does not involve a repudiation of what has already been done in the Tennessee Valley, but it does involve the question of whether the Tennessee Valley Authority shall go hog-wild and extend a program for which there is no clear justification and which falls with great weight upon the public treasury."

Without accepting the astronomical figures cited as the last word on the subject of costs, the fact remains that estimates for the auxiliary program are offered by Representative Mansfield, who is chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and former member of the Committee on Flood Control.

Facing Realities

As he departed for his Caribbean cruise, President Roosevelt announced that businessmen need not worry about new or heavier taxes. This cheering assurance was repeated a few days later by Secretary Morgenthau who even hinted that Congress might find ways of lightening tax burdens that act as a drag upon business enterprise.

Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, has now joined the ranks of those who oppose any new taxes at present. In co-operation with Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, he has requested the Treasury to recommend tax-law changes that would stimulate private industry. Unlike President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau, however, the Senator from Mississippi regards retrenchment as a necessary accompaniment of his no-new-taxes program. Otherwise, as he points out, the Federal debt will continue to mount and as it rises the threat of national bankruptcy will become more menacing.

Senator Harrison admits that he does not believe in the spending-for-recovery theory upon which the Administration is relying as a means of raising national income and effecting a painless balancing of the budget. To add to outlays without making provision for additions to tax revenues alarms businessmen. And their anxiety cannot be allayed merely by promises that no new taxes will be levied.

Knowing this, Senator Harrison concludes that radical reductions in Government expenditures are essential to encourage businessmen to expand their activities. He warns that "if immediate and unified plans are not laid, and enormous and unprecedented expenditures are continued, with the national debt mounting, economic confusion and chaos are inevitable." This hard-headed attitude lacks the allure of the spend-to-save theory. But it is sincere, practical and basically sound.

No government has yet discovered a painless method of financing that does not also involve risks of fiscal disaster. Senator Harrison is therefore a much safer guide to follow than those unorthodox advocates of spending who conveniently regard a budget deficit as a blessing undisguised.

Too Great Haste

Eventually, no doubt, the United States will achieve a well-rounded program of social insurance, covering not only the hazards of old age and unemployment but also making provision against that other ever-present menace—sickness. There is unquestionably a need for insurance against the loss of wages due to illness. There is also need for more adequate health service to protect the public against disease as well as to care for the sick.

Nevertheless, the national health program sponsored by Senator Wagner and outlined in a bill just introduced by him has been offered prematurely. It should be our objective to bring the benefits of modern medical science, both preventive and curative, within the reach of all groups of the population as rapidly as possible. But before Congress considers plans for expanding the scope of activities under the social security act it should allow time for the Federal and State governments to master the hard tasks already set them.

The States in particular are now struggling with extremely difficult problems of administration in the field of unemployment insurance. Inexperience, inefficiency, and the sheer pressure of work in some cases, have resulted in intolerable delays in payment of unemployment benefits. Yet Senator Wagner at this juncture proposes to set up a system of Federal grants-in-aid available to States conforming to certain health standards.

Other countries which have well-developed systems of social insurance have been wise enough not to let their zeal for reform outrun their capacity for achievement. They have expanded their program gradually over the years instead of attempting wholesale reforms. We should progress more rapidly by following their example, making sure of accomplishment in one line of endeavor before adding to the administrative burdens imposed upon already creaking governmental machinery.

A Kansas woman, whose husband allowed her 10 cents a day to do just as she pleased with, saved these dimes until she accumulated enough money to buy a divorce. There are some women in this world a man can't afford to be nice to.

Tip to any young man You're really in no danger until she tells you she dreamed of you last night. When she pulls that one, grab your hat and light out.

A Union City, N. J., man dropped a nickel in a slot machine and out dropped ten nickels. Then the man dropped dead. You just can't win.

Happy Birthday

New Faith in Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I read your editorial about the League of Nations entitled "Still Functioning" and it brought to my mind a train of thought which I believe could be truly productive, needing only vision to affirm and courage to carry out.

As the totalitarian states have faith in propaganda and advertising, that is, have faith in the power of certain words and pictures to arouse certain animalistic emotions and hatreds in those whom they desire to influence, why could not true democrats, having faith in true democracy, that is, the equality of all men before God and in the power of intelligence over ignorance, in light over darkness, plan a future of world harmony and world citizenship for humanity. There can be no doubt that we have been a failure in this respect until now—for we have had far less faith in democracy than the dictators have had in their form of government.

Do we not need more than anything else at the present moment, more faith in democracy and more intelligent efforts to make it a reality? Do we not need today the kind of character education which will enable our young people to reassert the faith of the founders of our great country in the possibility of a true brotherhood of men based on freedom of mind, love of liberty and the valuation of the individual?

The citizens of our country can best prove their loyalty and love for the principles of democracy by beginning a new kind of pioneering—biosophical pioneering. As Dr. Frederick Kettner, founder of biosophy, has asked in his recent pamphlet, "The Synthesis of Science and Religion," "Where are those courageous individuals who will dare to experiment with themselves?"

Only the spirit of true pioneering will help us work out a true democracy and solve the great problems which are facing us. Negative preparations, organizations against this or that negative manifestation will be of little avail. Dorothy Thompson has said in a recent article that we can only fight the enemy of democracy by strengthening our own democracy here in America. Let us awake and make our democracy a true democracy through biosophical character education.

Business Confidence

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I note that efforts are now going to be made to restore business confidence. One proposal that has been advanced is that ways be found to enable the small businessman to borrow more money for expansion. The proponents of that idea evidently think that "The hair of the dog that bit you is good for the bite."

What good will it do a businessman to be able to get himself further into debt, if some radical labor leader can shoot his business to pieces with strikes faster than he can build it up?

There is just one thing that will restore business confidence, and that is for Mr. Roosevelt to take this labor situation in hand in a two-fisted way and see that business has the same security that labor has.

WPA Wages

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
As a result of a Post editorial in which it was stated that the average "outlay" for each WPA worker was $61 per month, some of your readers have written to your paper under the impression that this is the average wage received on the projects. Perhaps The Post did not intend to give that erroneous impression. Nevertheless, you have made no attempt to correct it.

The average wage of WPA project workers is $52.50 per month. The $61 "outlay" figure includes the costs of materials and administration. Lest anyone be appalled at this magnificence, it should also be pointed out that the actual range of wages now is from $26 per month to $98.70. The $98.70 rate is received by a few professional and technical workers in New York City. The minimum rate was as low as $19 per month; it was later raised to $21 and then to $26.

"What For Is Democracy?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Your publication of Arthur Erickson's stirring letter on the subject, "What For Is Democracy?" is a hopeful indication that there may yet be recognition, (even by The Post) of the fact that democracy has serious imperfections, and the further fact that there is need for the possibility of rectification within the existing framework of Government.

In the face of a general threat of investigation and suppression of those who give expression to "subversive" thoughts, particularly the unfortunates, Erickson's boldness is admirable. On substantially the same subject we find very recent expressions by some who need fear no condemnation upon the ground that they harbor anti-American ideas, as when President Roosevelt said that: "Our greatest problem is to make democracy work."

It is not the purpose of this letter to suggest that democracy is inherently a failure. It is possible for a democratic form of government to force into existence unlimited and interminable opportunities for successful endeavor without curtailment of individual liberty to a greater extent than is consistent with the desired objective. The answer is not suppression of the unfortunates or control of the symptoms such as monopolies. Our disease is the greed for an increase in income from additional investments at a greater pace than is possible to make additional investments. Whether the attempt be to establish monopolies or several businesses, the result is the same if there is inadequate consumption.

It should be obvious that we cannot successfully invest as much as 60 per cent of our national income and use 40 per cent thereof as support for both the old and new investments. Thirty per cent for investment is nearer a possibility and nearer a proper balance between spending and investment. The answer to the problem, accordingly, is forced consumption by those who have the means for better living, to be accomplished by a threat of a tax of confiscatory proportions against attempts to make investments at an impossible pace—the degree of investment to be permitted, would be controlled by the degree of unemployment.

We cannot make additional investments when existing investments do not provide full employment because of a lack of adequate demand for their products. It is the demand of individuals for better living that supports all investments. It is this demand that must be increased. There is no other answer if we wish to preserve democracy. The first essential is appreciation of the seriousness of the "impending crisis." Those who are not aware of the danger signals are mentally deaf and blind.

Much will depend upon the editors of our newspapers as to whether democracy will be made safe for America. The longer the delay the greater will be the difficulty of solving the problem. CITIZEN.

Further Or Farther?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Since Strickland Gillilan insists on being so meticulous in his hair-splitting, permit me to slice a frog's hair by suggesting that "farther" might have been a trifle more exact than "further" in this line of his letter in The Post of March 2:

"Further on he says . . . ."

Further than that this deponent sayeth nothing', except that Strick, having committed himself to the reformation of blurb-writers, is going farther afield as a Don Quixote of English undefiled than even he and Frank Bowers and Abe Martin were wont to venture in those happy days in Injunoplus when the foam was on the seidel and the seidel full of bock.

"The Unit Of A New Civilization"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I am writing you concerning the device and motto adopted by the "Calvin Coolidge Cultural Foundation," which had its rise in this city, and which now has, as well, business offices in New York.

The device and the motto were suggested by the words of the Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Arahna, when speaking at a round table conference, as reported in The Post. He made the prediction that the two Americas, North and South, would be "the unit of a new civilization."

That is the phrase which was adopted at once for the foundation by its officers. The device itself will be a slender outline sketch of North and South America, placed horizontally. Running through them, their length, will be the word "culture." Above, and binding the two continents in a circular scroll, will be the legend "The Unit Of A New Civilization."

The words of the Brazilian Minister precisely expressed the purpose of the foundation as vizualized by its projectors; which purpose is to foster and to promote, and to encourage the interchange of the factors of culture among the peoples of the New World—by which is meant "culture" in terms of music, drama, art and the art crafts. The foundation will hold itself to the humanities in the future as has been the case in its past four years of existence, leaving all economic, business, political and controversial matter out of its scope; having no respect to partisanship, sectarianism or other divisive questions.

With correspondents in the various states to the south of us, its equipment will be such as to invite the co-operation of all who desire to see the cultural interests of the peoples of the Americas promoted and accentuated. It has thus a work supporting the Pan American Union and the division of cultural relations of the Department of State, with which it will hope to continue always in close relations, while privately administered.

When it has attained years and strength, it will prove to be both a clearing house for intercontinental cultures and, as well, a vital protection for the things intrinsic and mutual in the civilizations represented by the American nations. The conviction is held that it is imperatively necessary to exploit and put into knowledge the ancient resources of culture of the earlier peoples, as well as to quicken interest in creative enterprise by gifted spirits of all the countries.

The Post Impressionist

Old-Timer

HE WAS an old-time newspaper man, although to choose any one of them as typical of the rest is silly. They were all different.

They came from all sorts of places . . . wandering in from the West, or from abroad, or drifting in as cubs from nearby points. Some were from well-to-do families and had got bored half-way through their college terms. Others were from the humblest homes and had worked their way up from being carriers. Some were soldiers of fortune who had found they could write; or fakirs from circuses or sideshows who had made the same discovery. All were restless, curious, sentimentalists—or nearly all. And most of them were gifted with an amazing imagination, and a naive belief in the incredible.

Perhaps Pudding Andersen sticks in my memory because he was of the brotherhood and yet in a curious way not of it at all. An orphan, he always claimed that he had been born on a pile of newspapers and had been suckled on printer's ink. Except for a few years when he attended a board school, he had spent all of his years around a newspaper in one capacity or another. One of his own points of difference was that it was always the same newspaper—one of those now vanished sheets with an historic past that had been published in an Eastern city for more than a century.

At the time I knew him he was city editor, and life had nothing more to offer him, or so he seemed to think. I haven't seen him since he became director of press relations for a museum in his native town. Although if I should call upon him I am certain that I would find him immensely uncomfortable at having to work like a businessman, instead of bawling out his orders with peremptory authority, and fancying that he held the fate of politicians and jurists in the palm of his hand.

Perhaps, however, press agentry sits well upon him. For in spite of his being an old-timer and associated with the days when each newspaper had a distinct personality, like the men on it—when, for example, there was no large number of columnists and correspondents who were syndicated to every nook and corner of the land—there was something in him also of newspaper publishing as a business. To most of the rest of us—the real old-timers, and the reporters like myself who were beginning as cubs—it was always the newspaper "game." We got all the fun and excitement and very little of the earnings or profits, and this attitude was inevitable. So far as we were concerned, we were in the pursuit largely just for the interest of it.

Pudding never got much of the profits either, but he had spent time in other departments of the paper, and realized that there were obscure factors connected with the institution that were intended to elicit profit as well as fun and influence from the paper. This knowledge conditioned his reactions to a certain extent. His imagination, for example, was kept under much stricter control than those of the older men with whom he was associated. There was a matter-of-factness about him that didn't seem quite to harmonize with the florid and incredible excitement that lay in the conversations of other old-timers who had gone from city to city and who had seen tremendous things, and written about them tremendously.

Yet the feeling for the mysterious and portentous that may be largely responsible for having drawn these other men into the game, and that led them into the wildest kinds of situations when the news itself failed to provide them with enough thrills, revealed itself even in Pudding Andersen. It was what made me think of him the other day when I was musing on the mechanical efficiency with which the newspapers of today are put together.

I am sure that Andersen would not object to the business-like way in which this is done, but I am just as certain that he would object stentoriously to the public's being let in on the matter. These radio broadcasts about how a newspaper is made, for example—they would chill his soul. They may, in fact, explain why he has withdrawn from the business. As for letting visitors go through a newspaper plant and see reporters and editors actually at work like other mortals, that would seem to him incredible—a tearing aside of the curtains of the inner temple.

There wasn't any of this show-window journalism in Pudding's day. There weren't even any schools of journalism, or any correspondence schools in newspaper writing. Persons were drawn to the game by some inner urge that may in itself have indicated their fitness for it. If they were suffering from a delusion, it was easy enough to find it out. You simply assigned them to "go out to the zoo and get a story."

If a man came back with some incredible yarn about a family feud in the monkey cage, or the languishing passion of a hippopotamus who had fallen in love with a lithesome antelope, you knew that he had in him the makings of a reporter. If, on the other hand, he returned with a list of recent acquisitions that he had obtained from the superintendent, or a tally of visitors who had passed the gates that afternoon, you knew at once that he would be better off apprenticed to the banking business, or some other matter-of-fact calling.

As for revealing how news was obtained, how it was put together, or by what black magic newspapers were produced every morning—that was knowledge peculiar to those really in the game. Under no circumstances was a supposed public belief in the universal knowledge and ever-present eyes and ears of the press to be endangered by letting the world know how things were done.

When the plain facts began to get abroad, and the only place where newspaper publishing and reporting continued to be a mystery was in the motion pictures, Pudding Andersen padded his last expense account, drew whatever of his paycheck remained from the advance vouchers of the week before, and left the game. I am sure, however, that life for him afterward, continued to be very flat.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Anderson Storm

IT TAKES no very keen nose for fraud to scent the fake in some expressions of indignation which have been heard since the D. A. R. refused to rent its hall in Washington for a recital by a colored woman singer.

Labor organizations have enforced an exclusion policy against many worthy Americans for years. Some unions have denied colored persons the right to work in certain occupations because they were colored and for no other reason. Some have denied white men, as well as colored, the right to work in occupations over which the unions have established monopolies.

In one notorious case a moving picture job trust demands an initiation fee of $1,000 and refuses to accept new members, even though they be able to dig up the extortionate price of a union card, without which it is impossible to obtain work, and the applicant can prove that he is an artist as well as an American citizen in good standing. I have a citation of a court case in which evidence showed that a union demanded an initiation fee of $3,000, which would make it one of the most expensive and exclusive clubs in the world.

Should Quit Party To Be Consistent

ONE OF THE C. I. O. unions, dominated by a Stalinist group of Communists, would, if it had sufficient strength to enforce its program, deny expression to artists in the literary line if they refused to take membership and thereby acquiesce in policies imposed by the Stalinists. Such Americans, artists or not, also would have to contribute money to the political program of an organization which they believe to be un-American or anti-American.

I use the word "artist" in a very careless sense. It is hard to say whether or not a writer is an artist, but, for that matter, is singing ever art?

Mrs. Roosevelt resigned from the D. A. R. because by continuing to be a member she would seem to acquiesce in a policy of which she disapproved, to wit, the exclusion of colored performers from the hall in Washington. In that case she should have resigned from the Democratic Party long ago and would seem to have established for herself a moral compulsion to do so now. I assume, of course, that Mrs. Roosevelt does belong to the Democratic Party. I have not inquired, but the assumption seems logical and nonactionable.

Political Intolerance Is Shown By Many

THE D. A. R. will find among those who ridicule and detest it for this act of exclusion men and women who make a great virtue of their racial tolerance but are guilty of political intolerance equally narrow and vastly more threatening to the rights and independence of American citizens.

Marian Anderson, the victim of a not-too-painful martyrdom in Washington, was excluded from one hall by a ruling which instantly defeated its purpose and made famous a hitherto obscure singer. Even if the D. A. R. persists she will be barred from only that particular hall, and there is something about the D. A. R.'s conduct in the present controversy which gives one to suspect that the sisters may out-"last word" Mrs. Roosevelt with an explanation vindicating their position.

BUT AMONG THOSE who most angrily scold the D. A. R. largely because of its stuffy and reactionary but always patriotic Americanism are some who would bar certain craftsmen or artists from all employment and artistic expression in print for refusing, like Mrs. Roosevelt, to acquiesce in policies which they disapprove.

If the D. A. R.'s action proves to have been correctly reported it will be a pleasure to join in the indorsement of Mrs. Roosevelt's action. But those who do applaud should be compelled to show clean hands in this test which would eliminate some of the loudest members of the Communist claque.

The First Congress

By Thomas Nicholson

Waiting For A Quorum

The United States Senate and House of Representatives will meet in joint session at noon today to hear an address by President Roosevelt in observance of the 150th anniversary of the meeting of the First Congress under the Constitution.

ON MARCH 4, 1789, Sir John Temple, British consul in the muddy little town of New York, wrote to his superior in the foreign office in London:

"This day the new Congress meet under the new Constitution in this city, and tomorrow Expresses will probably be sent off to General Washington at Virginia, and to Mr. John Adams at Boston, to inform them that they are duely elected, by the Eleven Federal States, to be President and Vice President of Congress; and upon their arrival in this City (in about 3 weeks) it is probable that Congress will proceed to business, and much indeed they have to do before their affairs can appear in any tolerable order."

His original letter is in the British Public Record Office, and a manuscript copy is in the Library of Congress.

BUT SIR JOHN was overly sanguine in his expectation that Congress would meet on the appointed day, as were also the citizens of New York. For with all their firing of cannons and ringing of bells at dawn, noon and sunset there appeared in the city only 8 members of the 22 due in the Senate, and only 13 members from five States in the House of Representatives. And although the Daily Advertiser confidently reported, "It is expected that in a few days there will be a quorum," it was actually four weeks before the lower house could muster half its membership to elect Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg as Speaker. It was not until five days later (April 6) that the arrival of Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, gave the Senate enough of an atendance to organize for the counting of the electoral votes.

Two States, North Carolina and Rhode Island, had not yet ratified the Constitution. Of the 12 members who formed that first quorum in the Senate, 8 had been members of the Constitutional Convention at Philadelphia two summers before. Among these were William Samuel Johnson and Oliver Ellsworth, of Connecticut; Robert Morris, of Pennsylvania; William Paterson, of New Jersey, and John Langdon, of New Hampshire, who presided over the counting of the votes for the new executive.

When, as expected, the electors' ballots were unanimously for Gen. George Washington for President; the faithful Charles Thomson, secretary to the old Continental Congress, was dispatched to carry him the official notification. Similarly another messenger set off for Boston to advise John Adams of his election as Vice President.

Hazards Of Travel 150 Years Ago

EITHER TRIP was scarcely a junket in those days, certainly not in comparison to present ease of transportation. There were few bridges anywhere, the many wide rivers between New York and Mount Vernon having to be crossed by ferries. Most transportation along the coast was by water; certainly all communication between New York and Charleston or Savannah was by sailing vessel, and all the rivers and inlets were full of sloops and barges. Under adverse ice or wind conditions it might take longer and be much more hazardous to cross the Hudson to Elizabethtown Point in New Jersey than it now takes to fly from New York to Washington. Or going from Manhattan to Boston, travelers apparently thought nothing of getting up at 3 or 4 o'clock in the mornings to make the trip by stagecoach in eight or ten days at a cost of $25 or $30.

This cost, of course, must be figured in equivalents, for there was as yet no national coinage but rather a serious shortage of money and a number of makeshift currencies in circulation. Calculations might be made either in English shillings and pence or in Spanish milled dollars. But in any case the paper shillings printed in one State usually took a sharp depreciation when a delegate to Congress had to pass them for food and lodging in another State.

Considering these circumstances it is not remarkable that Congress was slow in assembling. Spring meant release from snow, but thawing also meant mud. Yet when Sir John Temple again on April 9 wrote of the delay as having been "on account of the badness of the roads at this season of the year, and perhaps for some other reasons," he may have had in mind some cases of civic apathy, slow elections and political squabbles. For instance, New York State was not yet represented in the Senate though the meeting was being held in her borders. Another jurisdiction had made provision for opening the election but none as to when the polls should close.

WITH RESPECT to the British consul's remark about Congress having much to do before the young Nation's affairs could "appear in any tolerable order," it was all too true. There was primarily the pressing question of revenue to meet the Government's operating expenses and to begin to meet the relatively heavy debt incurred in fighting the War of Independence.

Without waiting for Washington to arrive or for the formalities of the inauguration, the House of Representatives as soon as it had organized set to work on a tariff bill to put something into the treasury and incidentally to give some encouragement to home manufacturers. The lack of ability to lay important duties was one of the great weaknesses of the union under the Articles of Confederation. Now the House started with a list of imposts that had been proposed by the Continental Congress but for which it had been impossible to get the necessary unanimous consent of the States.

The list, starting with rum, molasses, iron and five other items, was soon extended to twice its original length, was made the subject of a bill by the House, was sent back by the Senate and eventually became law in July but not to go into effect until August. Meanwhile many cargoes had come in free and there was talk of the influence of merchants in postponing the tax. Also Sir John Temple had observed with relief the subsiding of an agitation to tax British goods more heavily than those from other nations in order to try to wring from Britain some commercial concessions and the withdrawal of troops from certain border outposts.

On April 3, the date to be commemorated by the opening this year of the World's Fair, New York was in readiness for the inauguration of President Washington. Carpenters, paid by popular subscription, had finished their remodeling of the City Hall into a Federal Hall suitable to be the seat of the Government. The two legislative houses, which had already been meeting there, arranged to meet in joint session, but not without considerable fuss and perturbation about formalities.

A Tough Problem In Republican Etiquette

JUST HOW should the President be addressed? Should the Vice President receive him standing or sitting? How should one house receive a messenger from the other? And so on. At length it became settled that the President should not be "His Excellency" or "His Highness" but simply "the President." The first temporary journal of the Senate, now in the National Archives, shows the designation of members of that body to have been changed from "Mr." to "Esq." and then back to "Mr." As for the entrance of the members of the lower house into the Senate chamber for the joint session, they at length simply pushed in and took their seats without ceremony of any kind.

Gen. Washington took the oath of office on a balcony just off the Senate chamber and overlooking Broad street, in the presence, as the Daily Advertiser recorded, "of an immense concourse of citizens." The oath was administered by Chancellor R. R. Livingston of New York State. The Chief Executive then re-entered the Senate chamber where he read his first address to Congress.

Among the acts of that First Congress doubtless the most important to the present City of Washington was the one which established the Capital of the Nation on the banks of the Potomac. The first session had been held in New York simply because that was the last meeting place of the very nomadic Continental Congress. That city, of course, wanted the permanent capital, but there was more talk of placing it somewhere in Pennsylvania.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Alleged Labor Relations Board

THE MOST CERTAIN thing about the decision in the Fansteel case is that the courts are compelled to guess what Congress intended the National Labor Relations Board to do. Perhaps the reason why it is so difficult to guess is that Congress did not really know what it intended the board to do. For with six judges of one opinion and two of another, it is evident that the statute is not clear. It follows that the ordinary employer and worker and trades-union official can have only the foggiest notion as to what are his rights and his duties under the act.

The history of the Fansteel case as summarized by the Chief Justice from the findings of the board shows, I think, why Congress could not have known what it was doing when it passed the Wagner act.

In the summer of 1936 some of the employes of the Fansteel Co. organized themselves as a branch of a national labor union. The company not only refused to deal with the union but did various things, such as employing a labor spy, which under the terms of the Wagner act are illegal. At this stage of the affair it was the function of the Labor Board to protect the employes in the enjoyment of the legal right which Congress had specifically conferred upon them. Its function at this stage was that of a Federal bureau for giving legal aid to employes in enforcing their right to be protected from coercion if they wish to form a labor union.

Created As Workers' Legal Aid Bureau

THIS IS THE primary purpose of the Wagner act. The statute creates for certain kinds of employes engaged in interstate commerce a particular form of civil liberty, the right not to be coerced by the employer when they wish to form a union. Since the working men cannot afford to hire the lawyers to enforce this right by ordinary procedure in the courts, Congress created for them a bureau of legal aid, but it should not have been called a National Labor Relations Board any more than the bureau which deals with smuggling is called the tariff commission. The proper place for such a bureau would have been in the Department of Justice, as an agency similar to the anti-trust division which seeks to protect businessmen against monopoly.

Superimposed on the function of protecting the legal right to organize, Congress then created a second function for the board. The board has also to decide how the employes shall organize if they wish to organize, whether by crafts, by plants, or by some other unit, and then to promote that particular kind of unionism. At this stage the board has moved beyond the protection of civil liberties and has made itself the advocate of certain kinds of unionism.

The employes who do not like the kind of unionism provided for them by the Government must accept it, nevertheless, if they are a minority. So at this level of its activities the board is no longer a protector of civil rights but a sponsor, often a controversial sponsor, of particular labor union policies, and it is at this level of its activites that the board has necessarily entangled the Government in the internal disputes of the labor movement.

Strange Assignment For Federal Agency

BUT ON TOP of this, the board has a third function. Not only does it have to protect the civil right to organize, and to sponsor certain kinds of organization; it has also to compel the employers to "bargain" collectively with the representatives of the organization. This is by all odds one of the strangest assignments ever given to a Government agency. It must compel employers to bargain voluntarily.

The law does not say that an employer must make a bargain. The law does not give the board any authority to decide what would be a just bargain. It establishes no principle of what a bargain ought to be, nor any agency for determining that question. The law merely requires the board to see to it that the employer "bargains" regardless of whether a bargain is arrived at, or whether it is enforced after it is arrived at.

At this stage of the proceedings, the board is a mind-reader and a psychoanalyst trying to determine whether the employer, though no bargain is struck, has in good faith meant to go through the motions of bargaining.

Means, In Practice, Employer Is Coerced

THIS IS NOT only an impossible function for any board to perform. It is a useless function. Surely the object of Government intervention in labor disputes must be to promote peace and justice. But the National Labor Relations Board is not required or even allowed to work either for peace or for justice. It does not mediate. It does not arbitrate. It does not examine the merits of the dispute. It does not provide a procedure for doing any of these things.

It seeks to decide whether subjectively the employer meant "to bargain." Regardless of all objective considerations, such as whether the claims are just, whether they are practicable, whether there is a settlement, whether it is observed by the two parties. In practice this means that the employer is coerced by the Government into a bargaining conference which he cannot leave without falling foul of the law, whereas the employes may go on strike if they do not like the bargain offered to them.

Surely this is in principle what it has proved to be in practice: A device which aggravates rather than conciliates, intensifies rather than settles, the disputes among labor unions and between unions and employers.

The remedy is to reorganize the whole thing so as to create in fact, rather than in name, a national labor relations board. The first step in such a reorganization would be to remove from the board's functions the protection of civil rights and place that in the Department of Justice. The second step would be to re-define its functions in dealing with the organization of labor by giving the board the power to hold elections in industries on the petition of some percentage of the employes, but not to decide what shall be the unit or the type of labor organization.

Name Is Misleading, Functions Confusing

THE THIRD STEP would be to make the board an agency for conciliation, fact finding, mediation and perhaps eventually of arbitration, with power not only to go into the merits of disputes but with power to hear complaints in regard to the observance of the settlements of disputes.

Then the board would really be charged with promoting peace and justice in national labor relations. As now set up, it is charged with one item in the list of civil liberties, with an ambiguous duty to foster labor organization, and with the absurd function of promoting collective bargains, regardless of their merits, regardless of whether there are any bargains.

Its name is totally misleading, and its misleading name covers such a confusion of functions that not Congress, not the board itself, not the courts, not Mr. Green, not Mr. Lewis, not the employers, not the public, knows what it is supposed to do.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Exam for an Auto Driver

(Written examinations for applicants for licenses to drive automobiles are urged by head of New York Motor Vehicles Bureau.)

1. What is your understanding of the words "School Zone. Go Slow"?

2. Fill in the missing word in this sentence: Officer, I am a —— of the mayor."

3. What's wrong with the following sentences:

(a) One of the great satisfactions of motoring is giving the other fellow the best of it.

(b) The truck moved over and let the little fellow pass.

(c) As an automobilist and a gentleman I never toot my horn in a manner to disturb or frighten anybody.

4. How many "i's" are there in the word "driving," and why don't you use them?

5. Write a 200-word thesis on the subject "Why is it that a driver at a traffic light can never bear to wait"?

6. What is wrong with this sentence: The autoist said, "I don't care what auto registration I get as long as it isn't a low number"?

7. Problem: "A" is a new limousine driven by a liveried chauffeur at 80 miles an hour and having the license plate "C 2." "B" is a dilapidated old boiler driven by its owner at 50 miles an hour and having the licence plate "X576548." Which will be chased by the motorcycle cop, and how do you explain it?

8. Give the derivation of the word "Stop" and state what meaning it has in your language, if any.

9. Which is correct: A sign reading "No Parking" means there is no parking. A sign reading "No Parking" means welcome. A sign reading "No Parking" means we are going to have an early spring.

10. Check the clause which properly completes the sentence "When about to make a sudden turn the thing to do is (blow your horn); (light a cigar); (hold out your hand); (whistle through your teeth); (imitate two Hawaiians).

11. When a motorcycle policeman comes abreast and says "Pull over to the curb," which of the following things do you do? Step on the gas? Tell him your uncle is State motor vehicle commissioner? Ask him if he has read "With Malice Toward Some?" Pull over to the curb?

12. Problem: You are driving through a crowded street at 55 miles an hour because you are in a hurry to buy a spool of thread; a man riding a bicycle at 10 miles an hour to get home to a sick wife suddenly comes out of a side street and makes you put on your brakes so suddenly that you skid into a lamppost; which of the following remarks will you probably make:

(a) What the —— is the matter with you? (b) Sorry, it was all my fault. (c) Well, what do you think of the general business situation?

13. Is the following statement true or false? I always give pedestrians a break and never start out from a curb without giving the proper signal.

14 Check the phrase which properly completes the sentence "I keep my registration license . . ." (on a shelf in the cellar); (in my wallet); (under a stone in the back yard); (in a pocket in my auto); (inside my wife's hat).

Democracy's New Ally

By Mark Sullivan

Blow To Dictators

THE WORLD-WIDE expressions about the elevation of the new Pope everywhere include gladness that the new Pope has the same attitude as the late one about the principal controversy now before the world. To both, democracy is religion's ally. To both, dictatorship is religion's enemy.

Probably the College of Cardinals, by their choice of Cardinal Pacelli, and by their promptness, wished to give the world a sign of continuity of the late Pope's policy. The new Pope was in long personal association with the late one. The new Pope, in his former office of Papal Secretary of State, exercised the function which had to do with the relation between the church and the dictatorships. A confirming symbol is seen in the new Pope's choice for himself of the same official name that his predecessor bore—Pius XI is succeeded by Pius XII.

It happens that the particular conflict between religion and dictatorship that is just now acute, the one that is stressed in all present comment, is the one between religion and German Nazism. But it would be unfortunate if the world neglected to bear in mind that the conflict is between religion and all the dictatorships. In fact it is with Russian communism that the conflict goes deepest; it was Russian communism which set up extermination of religion as a fundamental principle of authoritarian society.

Communism Is Parent Of The Other 'Isms'

THE ATTITUDE of Naziism toward religion is shocking, but that attitude, like nearly all the practices of Naziism, the whole technique of it, was borrowed from communism. Properly seen—and it is most important that the world should see it properly—communism is the parent of both Naziism and Fascism. Neither in persecution of religion nor in most other respects, does either offspring as yet, go as far as the parent.

The recent ceremony at Rome, one of the great rituals of religion, took place in a Fascist country—Fascism has never seriously molested the church.

But that ceremony could not have taken place in Russia. There, the Vatican would have been exiled, or its heads executed, as soon as communism took hold. In Russia, the ruling group hold the extermination of religion to be a principle of their form of society; and in the 22 years they have been in power they have indoctrinated the Russian people with this tenet as deeply as with the rest of the Communist creed. In communism, extermination of religion—expressed in the slogan, "religion is the opiate of the people"—is as fundamental as extermination of the right of the individual to own property.

Dictators Want To Use Religion

THOUGH THE hostility of the three authoritarian governments to religion differs in degree, yet it is inherent in the very conception. It is inherent because dictatorship is inherent, and dictatorship cannot endure religion.

We should understand the true nature of the dictators' hostility to religion. It is commonly thought of as atheism. But it goes farther than that, and differs from that. It is more cunning than atheism. It is not that the dictators want to stamp out religion. What they want is to make use of religion. It is not that they want to destroy religion, they want to steal religion. I have said this before and now is a good time to repeat it.

The dictators know that most human beings are born with a spiritual hunger, as powerful as any of man's other instincts. They know that most human beings perpetually long for something having moral authority, and something to worship, something outside themselves and above themselves, to look up to and have faith in and give reverence to. This hunger composes, in part, what we call the religious instinct. This hunger is satisfied by a conception of God, and by churches.

'State-ism' Takes Place Of Religious Instinct

ALL THIS, the dictators and leaders of authoritarian government observe. They observe it and shrewdly decide to take advantage of it. They proceed to stamp out the existing conception of God, and the churches which reflect the conception of God. They know well that the hunger of the people for God and for moral authority will remain and will continue to seek satisfaction. And they hope that the people, denied the opportunity to give worship and moral authority to God, will give it to the state. The state will become the beneficiary of the religious instinct. The religion will become state-ism. The state, in addition to commanding the people's material interests, will command also the devotion and fervor which ordinarily the people give to religion. Louis XIV said "I am the state." The new dictators hope to say, "I am the state and I am also God."

It is a new and enlarged variation of the divine right of kings. Their attitude is a revival of the union of church and state, with a monstrous perversion of it. The new conception is a union of church and state, with God left out.

Defense And Policy

By Barnet Nover

The Senate Debates The Issue

FOR PERFECTLY sound reasons, the Senate's full dress debate on the defense bill revolved almost entirely around the question of what America's role in international affairs should be. A nation's defense policy is and must be a reflection of its foreign policy while the latter, in turn, cannot help but be conditioned to a greater or lesser extent on the state of the Nation's defenses.

In the case of the United States, foreign policy and defense policy have the same objective, namely, to keep this Nation out of war, but if we are attacked, to enable us adequately to defend ourselves.

On this point there can be no real disagreement. Lack of agreement is to be found only over the question whether the policies we pursue, either in the field of foreign relations or in the field of national defense, are best suited to achieve that aim.

IT IS EXTRAORDINARY, therefore, that in the Senate debate so singularly little objection has been raised to the Administration's defense program. But, in more than one instance, Senators who announced themselves as prepared to vote for the bill also took occasion to take a very critical view of what they deemed to be the present conduct of American foreign relations.

In particular, the argument was advanced that in some fashion or other the friendliness shown by the Administration toward Great Britain and France and the hostility manifested toward the totalitarian powers entangled us in the affairs of Europe and threatened to plunge us into war.

One Senator—Nye of North Dakota—went so far as to say that "there will be no war in Europe this spring, this year, or next year, unless the United States encourages, and eggs Europe on to it."

Now if Senator Nye is correct not only is the foreign policy which the United States is pursuing dangerous but the defense bill represents a wholly unnecessary expenditure of funds badly needed for other purposes or better saved.

United States Cannot Afford To Sit Back

IF THE QUESTION of whether Europe is to plunge into war or is to remain at peace depends not on Europe but on us, then obviously there is no reason why we should be alarmed and no reason, therefore, why we should build up our defenses to the level desired by the Administration, approved by the House and very likely to be approved by the Senate.

The fact, however, that Congress appears to be pretty generally agreed regarding the wisdom of the defense bill suggests that few take Senator Nye seriously. The assumption must be that we are rearming because war threatens and that while the threat to the United States may not be as immediate as it is to Great Britain and France it is not so remote that we can afford to sit back and do nothing.

In other words, we are rearming because others are rearming and they are rearming either because, as in the case of the totalitarian powers and Japan, armaments and war are instruments of aggressive policy or, as in the case of Great Britain and France, because they are fearful that the next aggressions may be directed against them. The logical conclusion to be drawn from this interlocking chain of events is that if there were no aggressors in the world there would be no need of the present American defense bill.

BUT IT IS necessary to go a step further. If past developments made it necessary for the United States to embark on an ambitious program of building up its Army, Navy and air force future developments may compel us to go much further than we are prepared to go today.

The most probable of such developments would be either a war in which Great Britain and France would be defeated by the totalitarian powers or a series of new Munichs which would, without war, reduce the European democracies to an equivalent degree of impotence. The United States could view neither of such developments with any degree of equanimity not because of any sentimental love for Great Britain and France but because, at the present juncture of world affairs, they constitute for us a barrier holding back the tide of totalitarianism from moving westward across the ocean.

Further Munichs A Threat To Us, Too

IF SENATOR NYE'S argument has any validity whatsoever it presupposes that a further succession of Munichs involves no danger to us since war would be averted by the continued capitulation of Great Britain and France. Yet the fact that there has been no general war in Europe has not stopped us from large-scale rearmament arising out of an increasing sense of fear.

He also assumes that if the United States manifests friendliness toward Great Britain and France the roles in Europe will be reversed and those two countries, having for so long played the parts of rabbits, will suddenly play the parts of lions. But it is difficult to see Neville Chamberlain using his umbrella as a machine gun and M. Daladier suddenly going berserk.

IT ALL GETS down to this: It is the overwhelming desire of the American Government and people to stay out of war. We can best stay out of war if war in Europe is postponed. It can be postponed in one of two ways; namely, by the continued capitulation of Great Britain and France, or by a shift in the present balance of power between the Berlin-Rome and the London-Paris axes so that the odds would be definitely on the side of the latter. No nation enters war in the anticipation of losing.

It seems the counsel of wisdom, therefore, for the United States to give whatever aid and assistance it can to those nations which want peace and to withhold that aid from those which, again and again, have demonstrated that they regard war and threats of war as useful instruments of policy. It seems as reasonable a measure of insurance as building up our armed forces.

America's first line of defense is not at our borders or even the borders of this hemisphere but at any and every point where the structure of peace threatens to collapse.

Harrison and Doughton Ask Morgenthau to Plan Tax Cuts

Tax

sentiments of our respective committees, we would like to have, as soon as possible after the March 15 returns have been received and examined, the views and recommendations of the Treasury Department relating to any provisions of the tax law which, in your judgment, act as a deterrent to business and which in your opinion, come within scope of the statements to which we have referred," read the letter to Morgenthau.

They told Morgenthau they believed "any well-defined recommendations concerning such modifications of the present tax law as will encourage private industry to increase employment, add to the purchasing power of the people and stabilize the revenues to the Government will be most helpful. We stand ready and anxious to cooperate."

Profits Tax May Go

The Treasury recently is said to have been considering abandonment of the last vestige of the undivided profits tax, which expires at the end of the year, and substituting possibly a flat 17 per cent rate. Other proposals known to be considered are a larger allowance for capital losses and possible simplification into two tax categories of the five different levies now paid by business.

Senator Van Nuys in his statement last night declared the undivided profits tax ought to be immediately repealed, and the capital gains tax should be amended to induce investors to assume necessary risks.

Van Nuys declared the main consideration is dissipation of industry's "present feeling of fear." He said businessmen want no "breathing spell" but want rather "assurances of a definite program upon which they can rely and under which they will feel justified in rehabilitating and expanding their respective industries. They want assurances that their efforts will not be met by additional burdensome legislation and increased taxes."

The Indiana Senator said the Government should stop "heckling and harassing" business, that "new and untried" reforms should be abandoned, that expenditures should be immediately curtailed and that the Administration should not "try to force through Congress" the proposed $5,000,000,000 increase in the debt limit.

But especially, Van Nuys said, "ought we to be careful in placing men in crucial positions in whom the country has confidence." Specifically, the Senator mentioned Amlie's appointment and referred to the latter's sponsorship of legislation he said "would socialize all business." He asked withdrawal of the nomination, "with no repetition of similar nominations in the future."

Senator Byrd, in his statement, predicted Congress will reject proposals to increase the Nation's legal debt limit "as a first step toward retrenchment and economy, and at the same time put on notice Government spendthrifts to co-operate in reduction of deficit spending."

Byrd charged the spending theories of Chairman Marriner Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, and the President's "resistance" of Congressional efforts to economize have done much "to impair a revival of business confidence necessary for prosperity."

Byrd and Eccles have exchanged a series of statements on their conflicting fiscal theories and Byrd struck again yesterday with the declaration that Eccles contends "the greater the deficit the greater the prosperity."

Referring to a statement once made by Morgenthau that he was not "worried" about the debt climbing to $50,000,000,000, Byrd asked: "How large must the national debt become before the Secretary of the Treasury and the Administration get worried?"

"In the reassurances to business offered by Secretaries Morgenthau and Hopkins," Byrd said, "I cannot find a single sentence indicating any intention to economize and to eliminate the waste now existing in governmental operations. It is true we are told that new taxes are now contemplated, but every businessman knows that the longer great deficits continue the greater the ultimate increases in taxes must be. The extravagance of today must be paid by the higher taxes of tomorrow."

Frank's Idea Vetoed

At the Monopoly Committee hearing yesterday, Jerome Frank suggested the Federal Trade Commission could be given authority to say in advance, on application for advice, whether a proposed business merger or price agreement, or other practices, would be in violation of law.

Although the commission can now give advice, it cannot render an advance decision that would exempt a firm from antitrust prosecution.

Opposing such authority, both Chief Counsel Kelley and Commissioner Ewen Davis said businessmen experience little difficulty in determining for themselves whether a given course of action might violate the law and only rarely are businessmen in real doubt about application of the antitrust law.

Chairman O'Mahoney said his "inclination" was against giving the commission authority to make advance decisions.

Municipal Drivers' Safety Record Lauded

250 Honored For Example Set for City

Safe driving records of drivers of District Government vehicles were commended last night as "a wonderful example to the rest of the drivers in the city" by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

"You can be thankful you are safe drivers," he told the 250 automobile and truck operators to whom he presented "no-accident" awards from the National Safety Council. "You have been spared the guilt of maiming or crippling someone for life."

Lieut. Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner, emphasized that cuts in the accident toll might result in "actual saving to everyone."

"This safety business is no one man job," he said. "After all is said and done, it is the men behind the wheel who prevent or cause accidents. The splendid safety record of District government drivers shows they have been on their toes."

Other speakers were Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner; Charles G. Morgan, jr., manager of the division of operations of the American Trucking Association; Miss Sadie Lewis, of the Playgrouod Department, and Sylvester Woodfork, of the Municipal Garage. Music was presented by the Street Division Quartet and entertainment by Joe Walker, of the Municipal Garage. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer presided.

Part of the crowd which filled a room in the Franklin School Building yesterday to hear the Board of Education rescind its earlier action and vote to permit Marian Anderson, colored singer, use of Central High School auditorium, is shown above. There were two dissenting votes

Custody of Child Given to Haugwitz

London, March 3 (AP).—Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, estranged husband of the former Barbara Hutton, heiress to the Woolworth millions, today obtained custody of their young son, Lance.

The Count and Countess, now legally separated, apparently had agreed on this course since the application to Justice Sir Charles Bennett of the chancery division of the the order, was made on behalf of theorder, was made on behalf of both.

Ickes' Brother Wins $45,188 Suit For Back Pay

By International News Service.

Chicago, March 3.—The city of Chicago faced tonight the problem of whether to appeal or borrow money to pay a $45,188 judgment awarded to John Ickes, 66, a brother of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and chief clerk in the board of local improvements.

The award was made today by Superior Judge Allegretti in Ickes' suit charging that his dismissal in 1926 was illegal under the civil service laws and that charges made against him at the time never were brought to trial.

Ickes demanded seven years back pay from the time of his dismissal until he was reinstated in 1933, together with interest, damages and "anticipated increases in salary."

Wife of Hummel Admits Attempt To End Her Life

Summit, N. J., March 3 (AP).—Union County police said Mrs. Elizabeth Hummel, 23-year- old daughter-in-law of wealthy George H. Hummel, tobacco company executive, admitted today that she shot herself in a suicide attempt.

The woman was taken to a hospital Monday and the case had since been a mystery.

Police said the woman admitted using her father's pistol in an attempt to fire a bullet into her heart because of disappointment over a two-month-old separation from her husband. Mrs. Hummel is Hummel's second wife. Her father-in-law is vice president of P. Lorillard & Co.

President Plans To Anchor Three Historic Ships Here

Charleston, S. C., March 3 (I.N.S.).—President Roosevelt, upon his return from the fleet maneuvers today, disclosed he planned to assemble some of the Nation's most historic fighting ships this summer in Washington as a permanent Potomac River exhibit.

The Constellation, Hartford and Olympia are three of the famous vessels, and it is the President's idea that when the new Navy Department Building is erected beyond the Lincoln Memorial and Naval Hospital, these ships and others should be anchored along the sea wall as public museums.

Board Rescinds Ban So Marian Anderson Can Use Central High Auditorium for Concert

Anderson

quests for interchangeable use of schools was presented, Charles H. Houston, former member of the board and now legal counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, rose and said:

"I want to see Marian Anderson get the Central auditorium—but I want to do it and still keep my self-respect and dignity. I cannot do this and hear the board say it desires to hear no future applications for similar use of school buildings."

At this point, Charles Drayton, a member of the board, who had earlier indicated opposition to a reversed decision by the board stepped forward with a prepared statement he said "I had hoped not to read."

Asks for Order

As he began his talk by stating he was "friendly to all colored people," a ripple of laughter came from spectators in the crowded room. Drayton paused and addressing Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, said:

"If there is any more of that, madam chairman, I'll be forced to request the meeting adjourn."

"I am satisfied," he said, "that the majority of Washington citizens are opposed to inter-racial use of public schools. If a precedent of this sort is established, the board will lose respect and confidence of the people and bring about its destruction."

He cited the law of dual school operation established by Congress and added:

"The fact that Marian Anderson is a great artist is not enough, in my opinion, to set this precedent."

Reasons Stressed

Although at the final vote, Drayton raised his hand in favor of granting Miss Anderson permission to sing, he stressed numerous reasons why the ban should be maintained. He said:

"The Board of Education has no moral right to go counter to the law setting up the dual system.

"The rights of white citizens to have the law carried out in relation to white schools are entitled to consideration.

"Many white citizens are opposed to this step.

"Rules adopted by the board prohibit use of schools where fees are charged."

Gratz Dunkum, who with Dr. Robert Maurer, a former principal of Central High School, voted against lifting the Anderson ban, urged the board not to rescind its earlier action "for the good of the school system."

"After careful consideration," he said, "I have concluded that our first action was proper and should be sustained for the good of the system. I have never been influenced by prejudices and never will as long as I'm a member of the board. I oppose this move because it is contrary to our rules—and for that reason only."

Attacks Ban Lifting

Just before the board took its action, Houston again rose to his feet, contending:

"We are not dealing with the dual system nor the fact that an enterprise is profit-making—we are dealing with a school building after school hours. The use of this school after hours is the only issue, as I see it."

Henry Gilligan, former member of the board, urged that the ban remain, declaring:

"If this permission is granted, it will be a sad day for the school system in the District."

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, another member of the board, voted to reverse the earlier action, commenting:

"I want to grant permission for a great artist to perform, but I realize the board is charged with a duty to the white residents of Washington as well as the colored."

The motion to suspend the rules and allow Miss Anderson to use Central was made by John A. Wilson, colored member of the board. One of the principal reasons he wanted to see Miss Anderson receive use of the auditorium, he said, was because if she didn't "there are those who would like to start some kind of a campaign and make it more of an issue than it already is."

Hall Refused by D. A. R.

Several spectators in the room clamored to be heard during the stormy session, but Mrs. Doyle refused them permission, explaining the board had voted not to hold another open hearing.

When Miss Anderson first announced intentions of appearing in Washington, she applied for use of Constitution Hall, but was turned down by the D. A. R. The issue grew until Mrs. Roosevelt resigned from the organization because of the ban.

In Sarasota, Fla., yesterday—according to Associated Press reports—Mme. Julia Grant Cantacuzene, of this city, prominent in D. A. R. affairs, offered an explanation which she "hoped would clarify the Marian Anderson situation."

"Rules governing leasing of Constitution Hall," she said, "prohibit renting the building to any colored organization. This is the first time any issue has been made of the policy and it is definitely not a discrimination against Marian Anderson, whom I consider a very talented singer."

A storm of protest has descended upon the D. A. R. since it announced the ban. Jascna Heifetz, the violinist, said yesterday he was "ashamed to perform in Constitution Hall, controlled by the D. A. R., in view of the organization's refusal to permit Miss Anderson to sing. Deems Taylor, Dr. Walter Damrosch, Lawrence Tibbett and Geraldine Farrar added their voices to the protests.

From Capitol Hill came messages to the Board of Education urging that Miss Anderson be permitted to sing at Central. The messages bore the names of Senators Wagner, Borah, Capper and Van Nuys. The National Urban League also expressed regret that the colored singer had been barred here.

Nathalie Merrell Gets Reno Divorce

Mrs. Nathalie Bishop Choate Merrell, Boston socialite, yesterday was granted a Reno divorce from George R. Merrell, jr., of Washington, now United States Consul General at Harbin, Manchukuo, the Associated Press reported. Mrs. Merrell charged cruelty.

The Merrells were married at Peking, China, December 18, 1936, and have no children.

Sought $250 From Baltimore Theater Operator

Baltimore, March 3 (AP).—Only a day after he dispatched it, 17-year-old Dale Blakney pleaded guilty in police court today on charges he wrote an extortion letter in which he threatened to bomb a theater, kill its owner and kidnap his daughter for $10,000 ransom.

Magistrate Elmer H. Miller committed Blakney to Spring Grove Hospital for a mental examination.

The justice announced he would set a preliminary hearing for March 17 and take testimony at that time from physicians.

The note was received late yesterday at the theater owned by Walter Silverberg. As he was out of the city and his daughter was substituting as cashier, she opened the note.

Captain of Detectives John A. Cooney said the text of the letter threatened:

"Your theater will be blown up, your daughter will be kidnaped and held for a large ransom—$10,000. And death will follow if you mention this to anyone."

The letter demanded $250, and offered to tell the theater owner who robbed his place several weeks ago, Cooney said.

Cooney said Blakney confessed he sent the letter "because I wanted the money and thought that would be a good way to get it."

Fugitive Freed From Penitentiary Faces Old Term

Pittsburgh, March 3 (AP).—William Wright, who has spent 33 of his 69 years of life in prisons of four States, was released today from Western penitentiaray, but release didn't mean freedom.

He was taken into custody at the gates by a county detective in a detainer from authorities of Richmond, Va., who charged he had escaped from the State prison there in 1910 after serving five years for housebreaking.

Guards said he commented:

"Well, I might as well make Virginia my home. My mother lives down there, and, anyway, I like the place."

Agents Seize Six In Rare Stamp Counterfeit Ring

Farrell, Pa., March 3 (AP).—Secret Service agents said today they had broken up a counterfeiting ring forging rare stamps and money with the arrest of five men and a woman in the home of a steel worker here.

The six were seized in a raid on an apartment in the heart of this community's business section after agents spent almost two months watching the building through field glasses.

The agents confiscated a home-made press, a copper die resembling a United States stamp, and a die copied from a Treasury Department seal, Agent William Houghton said.

Mrs. Gable to Start Divorce Suit Today

Las Vegas, Nev. March 3 (U.P.).—Clark and Mrs. Gable reach the final parting of the ways tomorrow.

Mrs. Gable's attorney said he would file her divorce petition then and that he expected the case to be heard Monday. The grounds probably would be "extreme cruelty," mildest upon which a divorce may be granted in Nevada.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bachelor of 40 Is Baffled By Intricacies of Getting Engaged; Business of Ring Has Him Puzzled

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bachelor, 40 years old, and love has come to me late in life. Because I had never expected to be married, I never paid any attention to things matrimonial. Consequently, I find myself groping in a fog concerning the formalities of getting engaged. I should like to know about engagement rings. I am a man of modest means and cannot, therefore, give my intended the size diamond I should like to buy—for my window shopping tells me they are most prohibitive in price. I don't want my bride to feel that I should have furnished a microscope with the ring, so will you tell me, first, what size diamond is most frequently purchased by the man of modest means? . . .

Second, it is still customary to use two rings—an engagement ring and a wedding ring?—or has the diamond-set wedding ring taken their place? Also, which is more formal—two rings or one? And which do most women prefer—one expensive ring or two rings moderately priced? What do you personally recommend—one or two rings? Third—how are diamonds graded? And how can one determine the quality of what one is getting? Fourth—would it be better for me to purchase the ring and then present it? Or should I have the girl choose from a pre-arranged selection?

Fifth—does the State of North Carolina issue marriage license? I plan to be married in North Carolina and would like some sort of written record to show that the ceremony had been performed. Sixth—about how much do you think two rings(or one) should cost? Seventh—do you think my questions are dumb? If you can supply this information, I shall be everlastingly grateful. Sincerely,

HELPLESS BACHELOR.

The Customary Procedure

DEAR H. B.: Your questions aren't dumb. No doubt your bride-to-be is puzzling in secret over a thousand-and-one similar perplexities having to do with the selection of an appropriate trousseau and the arrangement of an impeccably correct wedding day program. However, it isn't necessary that you should try to work out your problem without her assistance. It is quite in order that you should take her into your confidence, in the sense of consulting her tastes and preferences, in the matter of one ring versus two; or a diamond versus some other perhaps less expensive (but from her point of view, more desirable) stone or gem in her engagement ring.

I suggest the following procedure: Have your banker recommend an altogether reliable jeweler, whose judgment and honesty with regard to precious stones and their settings may be accepted without questi n. Take said jeweler into your confidence, explaining your perplexity and the amount of money you have to spend.

Assemble an array of tentative selections, to include diamond-encrusted wedding rings and pairs of rings (i. e., engagement and wedding rings). You will find, I think, that moderately priced diamond-set engagement rings fall into two classifications—those set with sizable, showy, but imperfect stones, and those set with small but perfect stones. Some women prefer the former; others, the latter. Still others don't care for diamonds, but admire other stones more; and some have a definite preference for their own birthstone. So you might have the jeweler set aside, in addition to the diamonds, a few rings set with her birthstone—or have him get together a few such stones and sketches for appropriate settings.

Having set the stage, talk with your bride-to-be. Tell her you want her help in selecting the rings. You may say that, on your banker's recommendation, you have talked with So-and-So "—a dependable jeweler—"), and have put aside a few stones you would like her to see; but that, since you know so little about these things, you have no confidence in your own judgment and it may be she will be easily able to find something far more to her liking. If you wish, you may be entirely frank about the amount of money you have to spend, since, according to customary present-day social usage, it is no breach of etiquette to do so. You need not designate the amount down to the last dollar and cent, but may state it in round figures, as "around $150," or "around $500," or less or more, as the case may be.

As for how much you should spend—that depends entirely on the amount of your income and savings. Your banker and jeweler can best advise you on this point. If your bride-to-be is a person of good taste, she will most tactfully conspire to keep the selection comfortably within your means. About marriage licenses—it is my understanding that licenses are issued in the State of North Carolina; but since it is your intention to be married there, why not check for yourself? M. H.

Tailored to perfection, the three-piece suit worn by the gay, confident girl above at a recent local fashion show, consists of a fitted, buttoned-up-the-front jacket with a cardigan neckline, a slightly flared skirt and a boxy, full-length top coat. Made of woodland green Scottish tweed, the material is soft but durable. This is ideal for the first brisk spring days

Your Figure Madam

—By Ida Jean Kain

First Three Days of Diet Are Hardest; When Stomach Shrinks, Appetite Does

WOULDN'T YOU have a conniption fit if you thought once you weighed 50 pounds too much you would always have to stay that way! That you could never get it off!

But that could only happen in a bad dream. You know that you can get down to normal weight any time you please and so, holding that thought, many of you go right along for years weighing much too much.

Knowing that you can always do something about your weight may be what stops you. Getting started on a reducing diet is half the battle—certainly the first half—and you have to win it before you can get your weight down.

Ever so often, you people who are excessively overweight probably think seriously of going on a diet. But then, you begin to realize how you hate to give up food. And you know you are going to be humgry!

Stomach Shrinks

You are right. You will be hungry . . . but not for long. On any diet, the first three days are the hungriest, because your eyes are not bigger than your stomach. That organ is almost limitless in its capacity and the more you eat the more it stretches. The adaptability of the stomach is the main cause of overeating and overweight.

It is also, however, the reason you do not keep on being hungry on your reducing diet. The stomach very obligingly shrinks with smaller meals, and your appetite gradually becomes smaller. After awhile, you are just as satisfied on less food. As Mr. Einstein might put it, the question is one of relativity—the size of the stomach as compared to the size of the meal!

In spite of the food cut on a reducing diet, the quality of the food is very often improved. Since the object is to satisfy body needs, not only are most of the calories in the protective foods but the concentrated vitamins supplement the menus. A diet so highly reinforced with the protective foods will increase your vitality while you lose weight.

Health Will Improve

When you can convince yourself that you won't be really hungry after the first three days and that instead of being weak and worn out on a reducing diet, you will improve your health, there will be less of a struggle in getting started.

Don't put your diet off too long, or you will build up the idea that it is much harder than it is. Reducing is no snap but it is far from the ordeal some overweights imagine it to be. It is getting started that is hard . . . and unless you go ahead and reduce, it is just as if you couldn't get slim.

A Woman's New York

New York, March 3.

HUGHES HAS been hanging around the Hudson River docks again. Those bleak and windswept piers have a fatal fascination for Ole Missy, even at this time of year, when they are colder than the Pole itself. Lurking behind mountains of luggage, I managed to meet and greet my dear pal, Lilly Dache, the hat architect, just back from Paris with a new bag of tricks. And soon after Lilly's arrival came the five beauteous models who gave North American fashion shows at various South American capitals, sponsored by our World's Fair and a big store.

The four blondes and the lone brunette reported they had a very fine time on their good-neighbor trip, and they looked it. But these gorgeous mannequins of ours always look in the pink. It's their business, of course.

The lithe and limber ladies were distressed at tales here that a presidential cocktail party at Montevideo, Uruguay, had slowed up their return. Sure, the President had tossed them a very elegant party indeed—but the champagne consumed did nothing to slow up their return to the dear old States. They were very firm on this point, and a classy mannequin can be very firm indeed. Ask the boys around the Stork Club.

The nicest tribute to the quintet was paid by Long Bob Sherwood, the playwright, who was a passenger on the same cruise. Robert said he saw the girls present a bathing beauty fashion show at Buenos Aires. And that a native of the place turned to him and said, "Only one country in the world could produce legs like that!" Take that for a tribute, my fine-feathered womanhood of the United States. That Argentinian said a whole throatful.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I don't think the Artists and Writers Club, gathered at Palm Beach, made any bobble when they voted young Cobina Wright, the willowy blonde baby-doll, the prettiest young girl at that Southern resort. In my wanderings around New York this season, I've seen no youngster of her age and speed to touch her for looks. Naturally, great mobs of boys constantly lurk in young Cobby's vicinity—but she seems to insist on a "career" before any thought of marriage intrudes. Hollywood should be able to use La Belle Wright. Unfortunately, rated off her debut at the Waldorf last fall, I don't think the kid can sing a lick—but she certainly can draw looks . . .

This town has made vigorous attempts all winter to "revive vaudeville," the dearest amusement of our childhoods. Only Billy Rose, the magical mite, has had any luck. Now the comical Fank Fay, once married to Barbara Stanwyck, is bent on having a shot at it. He has signed Elsie Janis and Eva LeGallienne, I hear, for his first bill. But if Frankie himself appears, and tells the story about his uncle who was a string saver, I'll be first in the theater. Frank's my idea of a funny bloke—and he's had a long run of bad breaks in show business . . .

We hear that Anny Ondra, the beautiful blond wife of prize-fighting Max Schmeling, is headed here for a visit soon. There are reports that Germany doesn't want her in pictures any more. Anny may take a whack at Hollywood—in spite of the cold shoulder recently turned on Leni Riefenstahl, the stunning brunette film-dictatress of the fatherland. . .

But we are much more interested in the fact that Aunt Mae West, queen of the swivel-hipped stride, is headed toward town for personal appearance. I wonder if Auntie Mae, bless her heart, is still the big noise at the box-office. Well, we'll soon know.

The girls of the sewing classes at our Horace Mann High School for Girls say that a lass who is handy with a needle can outfit herself with clothes at the astonishing figure of $111.68 a year—and this includes six pairs of shoes and four hats. Well, I'll be darned. That comes to about $2.15 a week. Mebbe so, girls, mebbe so—and mebbe you-all are much smarter and handier than we were as kids. But this old skeptic still has to be shown!

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay

Solomon's Choice

You walk back and forth before the mirror looking critically at your feet.

"After all," says the shoe salesman, "nothing can beat a good conservative pair of oxfords."

That word "conservative" does not sit well with you. You point to the pair of open-work, high-heeled sandals on the floor beside him. "Let me try those on again."

Again you parade before the mirror. "Well, after all," says the salesman, "everybody will be wearing the open-toed shoes this summer."

You hesitate . . . look in the glass approvingly at your feet. They look much smaller someway than they did in the oxfords.

"Of course they may seem a little frivolous to you just because you're not used to them," says the salesman.

You turn impatiently. It's not their frivolity you object to, you point out, but—well, they just don't feel as good on your feet as the Cuban heeled oxfords. "Oh well, of course in that case . . ." The salesman hesitates, picks up the oxfords.

Again you go before the mirror, this time shod in one oxford and one sandal. "After all," says the salesman, "a plain oxford is always in good taste. Now many of our ultra-conservative customers—"

You stop him again. It's not a matter of conservatism, you explain, it's the way they feel and the good you will get out of them. "Oh well, then of course you can't beat the plain oxfords," he says with an air of finality.

You sit down in perplexity. Haven't you anything," you plead, "that is just sort of in-between?" He shakes his head. Most of the spring models run to the open-work, though, of course, many of our more conservative customers—"

You point desperately to the other open-work sandal. "Let me put them both on."

You make another trip to the mirror. The sandals really do something for your feet. And they really feel all right—in a way. Of course you couldn't do much walking in them, but then anyway you'd wear your old shoes for that. And besides it would soon be too hot to walk anyway.

Of course though they do look a little jazzy in the mirror. A person with genteel taste would probably prefer the long simple lines of the oxfords—still, genteel taste never got anybody anywhere. Look at all the women with bad taste . . .

"You're sure they'll really wear this kind of shoe on the street?" you ask.

"Absolutely!" says the salesman. "That shoe can go anywhere."

Well—that's so. And, of course, the sandals will look so much better with your summer dresses. Still the oxfords would come in so handy next fall . . . Oh, but maybe you'll have a lot more money next fall and can buy all sorts of new shoes . . .

Of course now on a train the oxfords would be better—oh, there you go again buying things for the train. You sit down, pick up the oxfords and re-examine them. "They have very smart lines," says the salesman.

Well, maybe he is right. Maybe you just imagine they look clumsy and oldish. Probably the sensible thing to do would be to get the oxfords and then buy some tailored clothes and do a lot of walking this spring. And when you went places you could sort of keep your feet out of sight and not sit out in front with your legs crossed . . . and anyway with summer dresses you'll have your white shoes . . . and then on rainy days the oxfords will look so much better than the sandals would with your big toes sticking out all wet and . . . oh, you might as well take the oxfords.

You turn to the clerk. "I guess I'll take—" Wait! After all, you could wear rubbers with the sandals . . . And you wouldn't have to do a lot of walking . . . you could take taxis and things . . . and they would look so much better when you went places and crossed your legs . . . and they do make your feet look smaller . . .

"I'll take the sandals," you tell the salesman.

800 Exhibit Needlepoint at New York Show

New York (AP).—Needlepoint is gaining as a hobby of American women. One indication is that an exhibition of some 800 examples by amateurs has just been held in a Fifth avenue store.

Behind the revival is Mrs. W. W. Hoppin (Social Register), whose mother and grandmother were expert needlepointers. Mrs. Hoppin is so devoted to the craft she takes her work to bed with her. Says it's very restful.

Four years ago Mrs. Hoppin felt something should be done to raise the standards of amateur needlework in America and decided a guild would be the best means. She would hold an exhibition in New York every year and award prizes. Friends spread the news and in no time at all Mrs. Hoppin was deluged with exhibits. She had more than 1,000 pieces—even got some patchwork quilts which, as any needlepointer will tell you, are not examples of needlepoint at all.

Figured Drapes Held Best This Spring

Bright Sateen and Linen Appear On Counters

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT'S ALL very la-de-da to have a room done entirely in plain colors, and there's something to be said for such a plan, to be sure. A room in monotones without any pattern has a lot of style, and it usually has a pleasant serenity.

But it gets a little tiresome after a while; so perhaps the good rule is to save such ideas for special rooms kept for company best. For draperies in every-day rooms it's just as well to inlcude a pleasant patterned fabric—somehow they are more restful to live with, and design-interest most definitely by now has established its place in the decorative sun.

Sateen Is "Tops"

I've been looking at new fabrics for spring refurnishing and, as usual, those bright yards have set me all a-flutter with ideas for pretty rooms. A lustrous, firm-bodied sateen is tops in informal fabrics, and it is expected that it will replace chintz and cretonne in our affections. There are many lovely florals in this material, with lots of luscious-colored, plain sateens to use with the figured materials. Another popular new-ish fabric is a ticking-weave called "dust-tight," which is a fine type of goods, if you want practicality with style. Watch linens, too—they're coming in again with fresh colorings and informal patterns.

On my desk I have a tempting pile of samples of the new patterns that appealed most to me. Among them there's a lovely shaggy chrysanthemum design—the color combination I liked best has dusty lavender-pink flowers on white ground, with dull green leaves, but there are many other colors in the same pattern. Another sample has a deep blue ground with big bouquets of old-fashioned flowers and white shells—this is called "Queen Anne shell."

Oak-Leaf Design

A linen that seems friendly and usable to me has an oak-leaf design—it's available in many autumnal colors, but my pet has an almost white ground, with the design in three shades of blue, grading to quite a dark blue. A cheery chintz is an intricate new stripe based on Persian motifs. Another unpretentious but versatile patterns is called "turkey berries," with sprays of green leaves and red berries. Quaint and pretty is a fern and flower garland tied with a ribbon bow. A scenic that will go places is "Robin Hood," and for boys, big and little, there are some salty sailor design chintzes. And many, many more than I've space to talk about here.

Mme. Oumansky's Fete Ties Up 16th Street

Soviet Envoy's Wife Receives Alone In Glittering Embassy With Diplomats Of Other Nations Dominating Guests

By Elizabeth Henney.

IT WAS MME. OUMANSKY'S at home last evening that tied up traffic on Sixteenth street in the dusk to dark hours. Lights gleamed from every window of the imposing embassy at the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, as a long queue of sleek limousines deposited guests at the door from 5 o'clock until well after 7.

Mme. Oumansky received alone at the door of the drawing room, which opens from the large marble-columned upper hall. She was gowned in floor-length powder blue crepe, with a silver gray band at the neck line and a matching girdle. Her corsage was of pink tea roses.

Latvian Minister Wife Present

Noted among the guests were the Minister of Latvia, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, and Mme. Bilmanis; the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Povilas Zadeikis, and Mme. Chramiec, wife of the Military Attache of the Polish Embassy. Mme. Chramiec was wearing a smart black outfit with a matching veiled hat and silver fox furs.

Also noted were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Christopher Bramwell, first secretary of the British Embassy; Resid Anamur, first secretary of the Turkish Embassy; Rafal Lepkowski, second secretary of the Polish Embassy; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, and Senora de Baron, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy.

The wife of the Counselor of the Czecho-Slovakian Legation, Mme. Brejska, was noted, as was the Albanian Minister Faik Konitza. Noticeably absent was the Spanish Envoy, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, who usually attends all the Soviet receptions . . . The comment made often this past winter by Mme. Oumansky, and repeated last evening, that she is homesick for her homeland, gave rise again to the recurrent rumor that the Oumanskys may be returning to Russia, possibly for a trip, sometime soon.

The Siamese Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri were noted, Mme. Rajamaitri stunning in black with a tiny, veiled matching hat. Perhaps the most effective feminine costume of the afternoon was that worn by Mlle. B. Batlivala, of India, who wore a silver-bordered Sari of purple chiffon, wound many times around her and making a coif over her auburn hair. She is in Washington on a visit while on a lecture tour of this country.

The Misses Guffey Among Guests

Dr. Leo Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, was one of the later arrivals and also noticed were Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stokes, Madame Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian Minister; Senator Arthur Capper, Mrs. Carl Hinshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekial, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Miss Vera Bloom, Col. John Crane, Miss Emer Brennan, the Rumanian Counselor and Madame Babes, the Rumanian Minister and Madame Radu Irimescu; the new Rumanian Military Attache, Col. Dumitru Petrescu, who is also the honorary Aide-de-Camp to the King of Rumania; and the Swedish Minister, Wollmar Bostrom.

Miss Lane Is Wed To PhilipKrautwurst In Lutheran Church

With the Rev. Edward Gvetze officiating, the Zion Lutheran Church last evening was the scene of the wedding of Miss Lena L. Laue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Laue, of Silver Spring, Md., to Philip Krautwurst, jr. Mr. Krautwurst is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Krautwurst, of Washington.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin, with a very full net skirt appliqued in white satin tulips. Her veil of bridal illusion was held with a cap of orange blossoms and she carried a white prayer book and a gardenia, from which fell streamers of white satin ribbon and lilies of the valley.

Miss Hilda Laue, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her gown of peach marquisette was trimmed with bands of matching velvet, and she wore a halo hat of peach tulle and carried talisman roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Wilhelmina Krautwurst, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Emmett O'Bryan, cousin of the bride. They wore gowns of aquamarine marquisette made like that of the maid of honor with halo hats to match. Their bouquets were of Johanna Hill roses.

Miss Morse Wed To Willard Kane

St. Albans Episcopal Church yesterday at noon was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Herndon Morse, daughter of Mrs. Bryan Morse, and Willard Weir Kane, son of Mrs. Van Ness Kane, of Sterling, Colo. The Rev. Charles Warner officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mason Harwell Morse. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Julie Eloise Morse. John MacWilliams, of Washington was the best man. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, the wedding was attended by only the members of the immediate families.

Mrs. Kane, a graduate of the University of Colorado, is an economist with the United States Tariff Commission.

Press Club's Stunt Party Assembles Famous Women

Half a Dozen Cocktail Gatherings Precede Main Affair and Two Receptions Follow; Fetes to Continues Through the Week-End

A galaxy of women distinguished in the career world and society—or both—such as is not often assembled, attended the stunt party given last evening by the Women's National Press Club in honor of its leading member, Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Half a dozen cocktail parties preceded the affair, which was held at 7:30 o'clock at the Willard Hotel. There also were two receptions afterwards, a buffet supper given for almost 500 members and thier guests by Mrs. Eugene Meyer and a smaller affair at which Mrs. Eleanor Patterson was hostess.

The round of parties which began last evening will continue through the week-end, as many of the distinguished visitors from out of town are staying over until Monday.

Hope Ridings Miller, president of the Women's Press Club, who presided at the party, was guest of honor at a cocktail party given by Mrs. Jouett Shouse. The hostess had taken a room at the Willard for the occasion and wore a gown of black lace with a corsage of white orchids.

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, wife of Senator Gerry, again observed her pleasant custom of entertaining for members and their friends at a cocktail party before the dinner. She received her guests in the drawing room of her residence on R street, wearing a gown of black, simply made.

Julia Peterkin, author of "Scarlet Sister Mary" and other novels, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Willard, where she is stopping, by Mrs. John (Genevieve Forbes) Herrick. The company included Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. Worth B. Daniels, Mrs. Harry W. Blair and Mrs. Warren Wheaton, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Wheaton, a member of the Women's Press Club, always comes to town for the stunt party and she and Mrs. Herrick gave a cocktail party together yesterday, as they have in past years.

Mrs. Frederick Benton gave a pre-dinner party at the Army and Navy Club for Miss Maud McDougall, who was her hostess at the dinner, and Mrs. J. Duncan Elliott also entertained friends.

Social Notables In Company

The parties will continue today, when Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg gives a luncheon at 1925 F Street Club for Mrs. Joseph Medill Patterson, wife of Capt. Patterson, owner and publisher of the New York Daily News. Mrs. Patterson is accompanied here by her sisters, the Misses Lulu and Loretta King, and by Miss Antoinette Donnelley, expert on women's interests and compiler of "The Woman's Almanac."

Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, who attended last evening's party, will give a luncheon today for her house guest, Miss Louise Boyd, explorer. Miss Boyd came to Washington to be an honor guest at the stunt party.

Some of the prominent Washington women who whirled from party to party yesterday afternoon and evening included Lady Lindsay, Mme. Ertegun, Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, Senora de Lopez, wife of the Colombian Ambassador; Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mme. Marc Peter, Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Senator Hattie Caraway and Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers, Jessie Sumner, Mary T. Norton and Caroline O'Day.

Others present were Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mme. de Morgenstierne, Mme. Bostrom, Mme. Wadsted, Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Robert Taft, Mrs. William Borah, Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Vandenberg, Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Virginia Jenckes and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster.

Ruth Bryan Owen Here for Party

Mrs. Boerge Rhode (Ruth Bryan Owen) had come from New York for the party, and others present included Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Lewis Caldwell, Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mrs. Louis A. Johnson, Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. Warren Lee Dierson, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Miss Mary Winslow, Miss Doris Stevens, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, Miss Helen Davis, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Thomas McAllister, Mrs. Crosby Boyd, Countess Felicia Gyzicka, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Smith Hempstone and her sister, Mrs. Luther Sheldon; Mrs. Helm. Miss Earlene White and Mrs. Joseph Himes, who was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Casper Whitney, of New York.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, was a center of attraction. Others in the limelight included Clare Booth, author of "The Women" and Kiss the Boys Good-Bye"; Alice Hughes, fashion writer and New York columnist; Alice Duer Miller, novelist; Merry Hull, designer; Dr. Louise Stanley; Dr. Katherine B. Blodget, inventor of the new invisible glass; Bess Streeter Aldrich, author of "Song of Years"; Margery Sharp, who wrote "The Nutmeg Tree"; Gertrude B. Lane, editor of the Woman's Home Companion, who is stopping at the Willard over the week-end, and Helen Jacobs, tennis player.

Wrightsons Plan To Take Dinner Guests to Play

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Wrightson will entertain at dinner this evening at their home on Hesketh street, Chevy Chase, later taking their guests to "First Lady," the play of the Essayons Dramatic Club, which will be given at the Post Theater, Fort Belvoir, Va., tonight.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wrightson will be Mr. and Mrs. Woodlief Thomas, Commander and Mrs. Harold Nelson, Mrs. Stella Dunne Furbeck, Miss Priscilla Wrightson and Maj. Edward Conger.

Interest in this production of the Essayons Club, known as the oldest little theater group in America, has run exceedingly high. Many prominent hostesses are taking large parties of dinner guests down to Virginia for the event, and just this week the Footlight Club of Maryland University indicated they would attend full strength.

Mrs. Roosevelt Fetes Students

Mrs. Roosevelt entertained yesterday afternoon at a reception at the White House for 500 girl students from Stephens College, of Columbia, Mo.

Last evening they entertained at a reception and dance at the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of their Washington friends. A gay and impressive affair, it was attended by a large representation of members from both Houses of Congress as well as many of the Diplomatic Corps.

Assisting James M. Wood, president of Stephens College, in welcoming the honor guests were Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark and Senator and Mrs. Harry S. Truman, of Missouri.

Da Mianos Stop At the Shoreham Over Week-End

Mr. and Mrs. Andre Da Miano, Monterey, Calif., are stopping at the Shoreham over the week-end. Mrs. Da Miano came for the Women's Press Club party, at which she was the guest of Miss Babs Lincoln.

Mrs. Da Miano is a noted fashion authority and editor, and both she and Mrs. Da Miano are doing a series of magazine articles. Mr. Da Miano is a noted Italian photographer and writer.

Mrs. Roosevelt Finds D. C. Interest Rising

Voteless League and Other Civic Groups Praised for Arousing Congress to Closer Watch on Capital Affairs

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters and other local groups which have interested themselves in government were credited by Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday with having aroused "a greater interest than ever before in committees of Congress which deal with District affairs."

The First Lady was guest of honor and speaker at the annual luncheon of the league at the Mayflower Hotel. The program was devoted to dramatization of the work of the league's departments. Introduced by Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the national organization, after Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, local president, had opened the meeting, Mrs. Roosevelt discussed the value of the league's educational work among its members.

"There are any number of questions," she said, "which are political because they have to do with Government but which are not partisan matters. We should decide first whether or not a thing needs to be done; second, what is the best way to do it, and third, whether it needs to be done badly enough for us to make the sacrifice as individuals to do it.

Taxation Test Of Interest in Needs

"There are many things it would be pleasant to have done, but how much are we willing to tax ourselves and how much work are we willing to do to accomplish those things."

Commending the league for insistence that its members be acquainted with local needs, she stressed importance of having a standard by which to gauge conditions when making an investigation. Referring to a recent visit to Gallinger Hospital, she said that "miraculously" it was kept so clean a visitor might not discern the difficulty with which this was done. From the fresh, pleasant appearance of the student nurses, she added, no one would guess that they worked 12 hours straight, those on the night shift attending classes the next morning, and that they had to care for from 40 to 50 patients, a third of whom were on the danger list.

The league is making its greatest contribution in giving members training in how to acquaint themselves with conditions and use their influence to correct them, she said.

Peace Skit Scores Biggest Hit

Following Mrs. Roosevelt's talk, she remaind for part of the program of skits before hurrying to the airport for the christening of the Yankee Clipper.

"Peace Makes a Bow," written by Mrs. Henry Wadsworth Moore for the Department of Government and Foreign Policy, was outstanding among the five dramatizations of department work. Mrs. World, giving a debut party for her daughter, Peace, discovered Moto, the Japanese butler, making away with some of her china. She warned him to keep an "open door" and see that none of the friends got it slammed in their faces. She spoke of the League of Nations School her daughter attended but how she met there a girl from Mars, named Bella, whom she feared would crash the party and take away some of the "boy friends" of Peace.

Cordell Hull was the first of the "boy friends" to arrive. Mrs. World confided to him that "Benito and Adolf," who were coming later, were reputed to be crazy about Bella.

"Manchuria is married now," she told him, "she is Mrs. Manchukuo, but, according to the old saying, 'Change the name and not the letter, change for worse and not for better.'"

She asked with concern about Mr. Hull's Uncle Sam and he replied that "just now he's having a bad attack of Congress and is all broken out in a rash of appropriations but the doctor is cutting down on his WPA."

Neville Chamberlain arrived, accompanied by Edouard Daladier and carrying his umbrella, which he refused to relinquish, explaining it was the only thing he brought back from Munich. Joseph Stalin was ushered in alone and then came "Adolf and Benito" arm in arm.

Throughout the skit there was clever play on words. "Adolf" remarked, "We take what we want and you Austrians know it." Benito said to Neville, "I don't like the cut of your Gibraltar either. It gives me a Spain in the neck." In a discussion of bouquets sent to the debutante, Peace, reference was made to the shower of Spanish bayonets, with a Franco in the center, sent by Benito; the bomb-bomb chrysanthemums from Moto, the Japanese butler, and the "bunch of sweet appeasements" from Neville and Edouard.

The skit on Government and its Operation presented Griffe, as the Griffenhagen report on District Reorganization; Keppie as the Kepecs report on Child Welfare, Louie as the Lewis report on relief, and Taxi as recent studies on taxation, with a "boo" as the final line on "taxation without representation."

The skit dealing with child welfare showed the District as the old woman who lived in a shoe with its children being herded off into institutions instead of being given foster home care. The other skits were on principles of economy, given under the Department of Government and Economic Welfare, and on the cutting of the school budget for the Department of Government and Education. The cutting process was represented as a game in which the budget bureau, House and Senate all waited eagerly, shears in hand, to slice the school board's budget.

Many Prominent Guests Attend

Several hundred attended the luncheon. Those at the head table included, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt and the heads of the national and District leagues, Mrs. John A. Livingston, president of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters; Mrs. Joseph Mackenzie, Mrs. H. L. Smith, Mrs. Fred Fishback, Mrs. P. W. Chappell, Mrs. Franklin Ryan, Mrs. George R. Johnston, Mrs. Robert Leonard, Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Woman's Bureau; Mrs. Alexander Wiley, wife of Senator Wiley, Mrs. Prentiss Brown, wife of Senator Brown, and Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King; Miss Belle Sherwin, former president of the National League; Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer, Mrs. William Kittle, Edith Rockwood, Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau; Mrs. Eugene Duffield, Mrs. Allan Moore, Mrs. James MCaskill, Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, Mrs. Charles Duncan, Mrs. George Backer, of New York, and Mrs. Henry Chalmers.

Funds Will Go To Milk Fund

George O'Connor and the Troubadors of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick will present on March 20 their sixth annual play by Thomas W. Brahany for the benefit of the milk fund of the Citywide Group, Ladies of Charity at the Mayflower Hotel. The committee in charge is putting forth every effort to make the affair a success as funds are badly needed to carry on this work.

Mrs. George Luers, chairman of ushers, has selected the following girls to assist her: Miss Betty Quirk, Miss Grace Mary Colliflower, Miss Rose Colliflower, Mrs. W. A. Curtin, jr., Miss Faith Harlow, Miss Mary Jane Moran, Miss Maryan Moore, Miss Mary Therese Norris, Miss Marion Norris, Miss Florence O'Donoghue, Miss Mary Murphy, Miss Jeanne Murphy, Miss Helen O'Connor, Mrs. Lorraine Scott, Miss Mary Catherine Johansen, Miss Peggy Gibbins, Miss Ruth Dove, Miss Bette Ryder and Miss Helen Forbes.

Mrs. O'Connor entertained at tea Tuesday afternoon for the Citywide Group of which she is president. This organization furnishes milk to the underprivileged children of pre-school age in the District.

Over the tea cups plans were discussed for the annual benefit. Only once a year do these women call on the public for assistance in carrying their work.

The committee chairmen are: Mrs. C. P. L. Moran in charge of boxes; Mrs. Alfred Whitton, chairman of reservations, assisted by Mrs. Edward Johansen and Mrs. Joseph Tumulty; Mrs. Walter B. Clarkson, in charge of tickets, and Mrs. Luers.

Georgetown Houses Will Open in April

Georgetown houses will be open to the public this year on Friday and Saturday, April 21 and 22.

The annual spring event provides an opportunity to visit many of the most interesting houses in this oldest section of Washington.

The ten houses which will be open each day cover a range of age and size that gives each visitor a real cross-section of Georgetown. For many years this event has been under the auspices of St. John's Church, Georgetown.

"THE ADVISABILITY of a Woman Being Placed on the Bench of the United States Supreme Court" will be the subject of a forum discussion tonight at a dinner meeting of Beta Chapter, Phi Delta Delta, at the Admiral Club. The subject, which is of increasing interest to women attorneys, will be discussed by Dorothy Dorian Samuel and Edwin Jo Mayhall, with Pearl Phillips presiding.

This dinner will be the last in a series this winter by Beta Chapter, at which topics of general interest have been discussed, books reviewed and prominent speakers presented.

THE M. ELEANOR BRACKENRIDGE CLUB, which brought the friendship message of Miss Brackenridge to Washington, is also endeavoring to have it emphasized with a Nation-wide observance.

March 7, designated as Texas Friendship Day, honoring the memory of Miss Brackenridge, who was one of the State's foremost club leaders, will be celebrated here by the club named for her. A dinner will be given by the local club, and others by organizations in Texas. Churches have been asked to make "Friendship" the theme of their services tomorrow.

MRS. RUBY SMITH STAHL, director of the a capella choir, is working with it in preparation for the annual concert at Constitution Hall, March 13. Sometimes they repeat one phrase from 10 to 20 times in a single rehearsal, she said the other day, just in order to bring out the tone quality or shading. It is the attention to detail in interpretation which has made the reputation which the choir enjoys, she believes.

Neither Mrs. Stahl nor any of the singers receives remuneration for the hours of work the unusual organization requires—no pay in dollars and cents, that is. Everyone who has sung with such a choir knows there is ample compensation in the performance itself and the beauty of the music.

THE ANNUAL MEMORIAL SERVICE of the Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary will be held Tuesday at 11 a. m. by Bishop James E. Freeman, it has been announced. It will be in Bethlehem Chapel in National Cathedral, followed by a box luncheon in Satterlee Hall of St. Alban's Church. At 1:30 meditations will be led by Dean Chester B. Emerson, of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland.

MRS. HENRY F. JONES, chairman of the annual benefit to be given by the Ladies Aid to Garfield Memorial Hospital, entertained Wednesday with a luncheon at her home for chairmen of the various committees.

MRS. RAPHAEL TOUROVER, president of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, will talk on Youth Aliyah Monday night at the monthly meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Jewish War Veterans Post. The auxiliary will meet at the Jewish Community Center and a movie of activities at the Center Camp will be another feature of the program.

ALPHA GAMMA DELTA alumnae will meet at the home of Mrs. W. A. Shannon, 501 Aspen street, Thursday for a buffet supper at which Mrs. Clinton Sigel and Mrs. Paul Steigner will be co-hostesses.

THE TEMPLE and education committees of Gavel Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will go to Arlington, Va., for their joint meeting Thursday night, when Miss Hazel Booker will be hostess at 4002 Fifth street. Degrees will be conferred at the regular chapter meeting Tuesday night.

IRENE SCHMIDT, chairman of ways and means for the 1932 Association, O. E. S., has announced plans for a country dance April 1 at Chillum Masonic Hall, Chillum, Md. Sarah Peden, Jessie Ridings and Ella Smith have been appointed on the sunshine committee of the association this year.

HOMECOMING NIGHT for the associate grand matron, Minnie Burdine, will be observed at the next regular meeting of Acacia Chapter, O. E. S., Tuesday.

THE CHEVY CHASE CHAPTER of the Y. W. C. A. will have a Lenten meeting Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Barney J. Peterson, 5602 Thirty-ninth street. Mrs. Thomas J. Frailey and Mrs. Robert H. Turner will be assisting hostesses.

Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, will be the guest speaker and Mrs. Diller B. Groff will sing.

Chevy Chase Club Hears Librarian

Miss Helen Mullinix, librarian of Leland Junior High School, explained the file system used there in a talk yesterday before the civic section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase. The club has started its own verticle file system and is acting as a clearing house for clippings, pamphlets and pictures on science, history, music and social studies which will be available for school children.

Another speaker was Mrs. E. W. Chapin, president of the Community Film Council, who talked on the work of her organization.

Representative William D. Byron, of Maryland, who was to speak, was detained on "the Hill" and in his place sent his secretary, F. Byrne Austin, who spoke on women in community work. Mrs. Edward H. Helmuth, chairman of the section, presided, and Mrs. George W. Lewis was hostess for the luncheon. About 75 attended.

Dr. Cobb, Bahai Leader, To Speak Here Tuesday

Dr. Stanwood Cobb, educator, author and organizer of progressive education in America, will be the guest of honor and the speaker at the weekly luncheon at Opportunity House on Tuesday. Dr. Cobb, who is a leader of the Bahai faith in this country, will bring his talk into the general theme of the luncheons, planned for the Lenten period, which is "Why Not Try God?"

Dr. Cobb is author of "Patterns in Jade," "World Order, 1935—," "Essential Mysticism" and "The New Heaven."

Hard-of-Hearing Gadgets to Be Shown

The Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing will stage a gadget show at the society's headquarters, 1116 Vermont avenue, next Friday and Saturday. The gadgets will consist of the various mechanical aids to the hard of hearing, such as electrical hearing instruments, audiometers to test the degree of hearing loss, supports for carrying hearing aids, amplifiers to enable the hard of hearing to use the telephone, door lights to indicate to the hard of hearing that someone is ringing the doorbell, and various alarm watches to rouse hard-of-hearing persons in the morning.

These serious displays will be shown through both days. On the evening of March 11, the organization will give a party to which the public is invited, the only admission fee being some sort of freakish headgear. The hat show is to add interest to the gadget show, and to emphasize the fact that the gadgets the hard of hearing are compelled to use are not more conspicuous than some of the things ordinary people wear on their heads.

Miss Elizabeth Brand, executive secretary of the society, will be present all day to explain the devices.

Saturday evening, John A. Ferrall, of the Department of Agriculture, will give a "chalk talk" without words. After it games will be played, tables being available for bridge, Chinese checkers, and others. Refreshments will be served.

Gallinger Hours Called 'Murderous'

10 of Overworked Nurses Victims of Tuberculosis, House Committee Hears

Gallinger Hospital nurses are being "murdered" by overwork and Congress is to blame for not making adequate appropriations, Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, asserted yesterday at the conclusion of the second day's hearing on conditions at the municipal hospital.

"It's an outrage that those poor girls have to work as long as they do," said Bates, chairman of the sub-committee holding the hearings. "It's nothing short of murder, and it's criminal that persons responsible for appropriations have neglected them so long."

Bates said that he would recommend that the whole House District Committee go before the House subcommittee on District appropriations next week, at the conclusion of the hearing, to urge more funds to end the long hours.

The District estimates, approved by the Budget Bureau, provide for additions in personnel to permit installation of a 44-hour week at the hospital for most employes, many of whom now work 60 and 70 hours.

Gallinger officials asked for 196 additional employes in all classes at an estimated cost of $197,000, while the budget as approved by the budget director now carries 82 new jobs at an extra cost of $75,480.

Chairman Bates' outburst came after Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger, testified that ten nurses had contracted tuberculosis at the hospital. Asked by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, whether this could not be attributed to long hours and crowded living conditions, Dr. Bocock said that it probably could.

Doctor "Stymied"

Earlier two Gallinger nurses, Pauline Hall and Alfreda Bourmark, shocked the sub-committee with testimony of excessive working hours and overcrowded living quarters.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland took the stand for the second day and described an operation performed by a young visiting doctor, who because of inexperience became "stymied," according to Dr. Ruhland, until one of the staff physicians came to his rescue. The operation was of an abdominal nature.

Such an occurrence, however, was unusual at the hospital, the health officer added.

During the cross-examination Representative Bates stated that he agreed with Dr. Ruhland that full-time resident physicians should maintain supervision over the visiting staff.

The hearing will run over into next week, Bates disclosed, because of the growing list of witnesses. This morning the sub-committee will hear Dr. Martha Eliot, assistant chief of the Childrens Bureau, who assisted in preparing the U. S. Public Health Service report on Gallinger in 1937-38.

2 New Buildings

Two physicians from the Howard University Medical School will follow her. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, and Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, who first complained of friction between the visiting and residential staff, will not testify before Monday.

The sub-committee expressed concern while Dr. Bocock was testifying over the fact that 200 patients are quartered in old wooden buildings, but the superintendent explained that two new buildings are being constructed now with PWA funds.

Meanwhile yesterday, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen reversed his stand on departmental control at the hospital to indorse supervision by visiting physicians. Last week he backed Dr. Ruhland by favoring control by staff doctors.

"I want it thoroughly understood," he said, "that I am not changing my mind regarding this controversy. Although I publicly stated last week I favored retention of the control in the chief resident physicians, it was predicated on the recommendation of Dr. Ruhland's advisory committee."

Hazen explained three of the seven committee members were present with Dr. Ruhland when they indorsed the health officer's program and one of them, Dr. Sterling Ruffin, later wrote that he had not indorsed the plan.

Richard Mackenzie, special investigator employed by the Commissioners to help iron out the fight between the Health Department and the city's two medical schools over jurisdiction, reported he was unable to bring them to an agreement. He was instructed to recommend his own solution of the impasse.

School Truck Kills Year's 18th Victim of Traffic

Keating, who lived at 1607 Thirty-fifth street northwest, was knocked down by an Industrial Home School truck while crossing in the 1200 block Twenty-ninth street northwest.

Unconscious, the man was taken to the hospital where he died of skull fracture. His identity was established by markings in his hat which were recognized by his wife, Mrs. Mary E. Keating.

Police said the truck was operated by Frederick W. Stabley, 23, 2453 Wisconsin avenue northwest, who will face a coroner's jury.

Keating's death brings the number of fatalities this year equal to last year's figure at this time.

Walsh Predicts New Victims of Nazi Theories

Race-Blood Worship Termed Legalization Of Old Superstition

The Jews are presently the chief victims of Nazi racial theories, but "new emergencies will require new victims," warned Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, speaking last night in Memorial Continental Hall. The lecture was the third in a series of ten by the school of foreign service regent.

"The most serious aspect of racism," declared Father Walsh, "results from its denial of one of Christianity's essential beliefs—the common origin of man, his redemption, and common supernatural destiny."

The new Nazi "mystical faith based on possession of certain blood corpuscles," he said, could easily lead to a conflict such as modern history has not yet seen "if imposed on the more than 20,000,000 Catholics in Germany." He observed that Pius XII already has asserted there can be no compromise with such an attempt to displace Christianity by a superstitious worship of blood and race.

Race-blood worship, averred Dr. Walsh, is an ancient superstition made legal in Germany mainly for the purpose of ridding the Reich of Jews and so-called non-aryans. He added:

"Based on wholly unscientific premises long ago repudiated by anthropologists . . . the superstition of Aryan superiority has been converted into a weapon of state reprisal against certain chosen victims. It has frequently appeared in the history of the autocracies requiring some new emergency or fresh scapegoat to divert attention from internal weakness or impending crisis.

"The Nazi persecution finds its victims by a racial test as the Communist government of Moscow does on a class basis. In point of fact, the Bolshevik's insistence on class origin as the test of orthodoxy is somewhat more rational and realistic than Mr. Hitler's demands for pure Aryan blood."

In Training to Be Good Wives, 520 Coeds Go on Blind Date Here

520 Dancing Partners and 100 Stags Drafted From Local Universities to Entertain Visiting Girls From Stephens College

The students of Stephens College last night took a first-hand lesson in poise and self-possession.

The students—520, all girls—went on blind dates to Wardman Park Hotel, where their Congressmen and Washington's universities had furnished 520 dancing partners and 100 extra stags.

In attendance also were some of the Senators and Congressmen. To them the onslaught was distinctly pleasant, for many had luncheon parties at the Capitol yesterday for the girls from their States.

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, who has never been known to miss a really swell party, was enthusiastic.

"The party is grand," he said, "and the girls from Kansas are lovely."

Escorts, usually wary of blind dates, also were impressed.

Jack Cummings and Ed Crummey, both of Georgetown, said they "had signed up for the dance" somewhat unwillingly, but they added, "look around, the scenery is lovely."

"I haven't met my date yet," Ben Willis, of George Washington Law School, remarked, "but I'm not worried; it looks like a beauty contest."

He said Stephens Alumni here had contacted fraternities at George Washington to find men for the party.

Today the girls will move to Annapolis—to take in the midshipmen, not the Naval Academy—and then they will "do" New York City. Miss Teenie Angerstein, of Chicago, explained.

After that they will visit Miami and Galveston, Tex., before returning to school, she said.

President James Woods, of Stephens, declared his faculty believes "marriage is the natural career for women . . ."

"We emphasize health and relaxation," he said. "Girls take up the kind of sports they can enjoy later with their husbands—horseback riding, tennis, golf."

The college fosters poise and self-possession, he added, and the girls all "learn to be expert dancers."

$19,485 Deficit Faces Symphony

Faced with a deficit of $19,485 in the National Symphony's current drive for funds, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., general chairman of the campaign, has called an emergency meeting for Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. The public as well as members of the symphony association is invited to attend.

Morgan revealed yesterday that most of the volunteer workers have agreed to continue their solicitation efforts for the next two weeks, although the drive has officially ended with $91,515 pledged for the ninth annual season.

Contributions may be sent to campaign headquarters in the Carlton Hotel.

Bund May Visit Unknown Soldier's Tomb; Ban Asked

Secretary of War Woodring was warned last night by Treasury Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, to "be on guard" against a reported visit of Nazi Bund members to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The post was told a member overheard a conversation in German in which the incursion of uniformed Nazis was forecast, but did not learn its date.

The post adopted a resolution urging the Secretary of War to ban all uniformed civilian organizations from the tomb except veterans and Boy Scouts.

Fellowship Fete Held by Churchmen

Chevy Chase M. E. Group Dinner Guests of Wives

Enjoying the privileges of a "night out" program, the men of Chevy Chase Methodist Church ate last night while their wives served, joined in a fellowship hour and heard an inspirational message from Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, jr.

Mingling in the parish hall at Connecticut avenue and Shepherd street, the diners were advised by the speaker, pastor of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, that "personal vanity is a stumbling block to man's usefulness."

Earlier in the program plans were discussed for expanding the men's work through recreational and other activities. Led by Osmand L. Varela, the men paid a tribute to Mrs. William Springer and her committee in charge of the dinner.

Introduction of the guests revealed a cross-section of Washington life present, including bankers, lawyers, stock salesmen, students, builders—even an undertaker, the latter drawing a big laugh as he declared that . . . "I'm an undertaker . . . I take care of the bodies and the Rev. Latch takes care of the souls." The Rev. Edward G. Latch, the pastor of Chevy Chase Methodist Church, was a guest of honor.

Coroner to Study Death of Infant

Found unconscious in his crib late last night, eight-months-old Thomas Robinson, of 1434 F street northeast, was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital. The child was brought to the hospital by his mother, Mrs. Waneta Robinson.

Coroner A. Magruder Macdonald will investigate the death today.

Ex-Navy Mechanic Returned Here For Holdup Trial

Trailed from a Chevy Chase home through several Southern cities and arrested after a checkup of 132 hotels in Miami Beach, a 20-year-old former Navy machinist was brought back to Washington yesterday to face charges in a $600 night club holdup here two weeks ago.

THOMAS

William F. Thomas was arrested on a U. S. commissioner's warrant by Detective Lieuts. Joe Shimon and Robert Magham. They said he had confessed spending the loot and planning a robbery in the hotel where he was caught.

Thomas also admitted, police said, that he had stolen the gun from a home in the 1300 block, Massachusetts avenue northwest, the night before he allegedly held up the manager of the Bamboo Gardens, Fourteenth and H streets northwest, and escaped within sight of 150 patrons of the night club.

Capital News In Brief

Traffic was halted for almost an hour last night as fireman from four engine companies fought a two-alarm blaze in the basement of Simpson's Pharmacy, 701 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Firefighters in gas masks at first were impeded in bringing the fire under control as the blaze, which started in one corner of the basement, spread to alcohol and chemicals.

Battalion Chief Harmon Chapman estimated the damage between $2,000 and $3,000.

Lost But Happy

Both lost and lonesome, Barbara Morningstar, 4, of 1000 B street southeast, and Earl Saunders, 7, of first block Seventh street northeast, became fast friends at Fifth Precinct Station yesterday.

Unconcerned with the dilemma of the police trying to find their parents, they played at various games, until Barbara's mother arrived and Earl's father was found. The youngsters were brought into the station within a few minutes of each other.

D. C. Income Tax Urged

In an address broadcast by Station WOL last night, Boyd Fisher, special assistant to the rural electrical administrator and member of the executive board of the Citizens Committee for Fair Taxation, urged adoption of an initial 1 per cent income tax for the District. The proposed sales tax he described as "obnoxious and unfair" and "undemocratic."

Ickes Stays Off Jury

Secretary Ickes, who was summoned to appear for jury duty in Montgomery County, yesterday told how he got out of it without calling upon the intervening arm of the Federal Government.

Ickes said he simply told the judge: "I am a lawyer."

The judge said that was enough to keep him off the jury.

Toy-Gun Holdup Fails

It takes more than a toy pistol to frighten William D. Lockwood, manager of a gas station at Eleventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Confronted last night by a middle-aged would-be robber who poked the barrel of a "pistol" from his pocket, Lockwood argued with the intruder, then seized the "gunman" and called police.

Windsors Not to Visit U.S., Duchess' Aunt Says

New York, March 3 (AP).—The Duchess of Windsor's "Aunt Bessie," Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, arrived on the liner Manhattan tonight after a month's visit with the Duke and Duchess at Antibes, France. She said as far as she knew they did not plan to come to this country.

Doctors Ask Review in Trust Fight With U.S.

Claim Indictment Returned Illegally By Grand Jury

A petition to review the legal record of the Government's battle with the American Medical Association over future health policy was presented yesterday to Justice Proctor in District court.

Justice Proctor took under advisement the plea of the A. M. A., 3 other medical groups and 20 physicians that their indictment for criminal conspiracy to violate the Sherman antitrust act by restraining the trade of Group Health, Inc., was returned illegally by a grand jury conducted in violation of law and of their constitutional rights. Also presented was the Government's counterclaim that the indictment should stand and that the petition of the doctors failed to show irregularities in the grand jury hearings last December.

Charles S. Baker, attorney for the medical groups and the individual physicians, asked the court to receive in evidence all the records relating to the indictment to clear the way for later appeal.

Justice Proctor said the entire record would be considered in studying the doctors' plea, and added "I don't want any action of mine to preclude a full review of the case by the Appelate Court.

Alan Hart, special assistant to the Attorney General, assured Justice Proctor the Government had no intention of blocking any plans for taking the case to the Appeals Court. He objected however to Baker's request for a bill of exceptions at this time. Justice Proctor pointed out the records showed attorneys for the medical groups had taken exception to every ruling of the court, and that all were in the record.

Baker explained one main purpose of his petition was to show the court the "whole picture" of the grand jury hearings. He said it was common knowledge that truckloads of evidence had been brought to the grand jury from outside the District, while doctors known to be proponents of group health practice had been brought to testify in the hearings.

He said the evidence thus obtained and the witnesses had given the grand jury a "great background of which we believe was incompetent evidence." He said if this formed the basis of the indictment the medical groups and physicians were entitled to relief under the search and seizure clause of the Constitution.

Deadlock Halts Hotel Strike Parley

Effort to Reopen Negotiations Is Rejected by Union Workers

Possibility the hotel strike here may become general appeared last night when representatives of the strikers rejected, because of conditions, the offer of the hotels to resume negotiations for settlement.

In accepting the invitation of Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, to resume bargaining with the union, hotel managements laid down the condition that any agreement to be negotiated should not include a closed shop and should leave to the hotels complete control over personnel, including the "right to hire and discharge, except, of course, for union activities."

After Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the 13 local hotels with partially unionized staffs, had announced the terms, union representatives informed Colvin there would be no point in resuming negotiations.

Colvin said the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and the Bartenders' International League of America, American Federation of Labor organization representing the strikers, had accepted Thursday night his invitation to resume bargaining efforts. The hotels accepted yesterday.

Spokesmen for the strikers insisted on a closed shop as a protection against substitution for union members of out-of-town non-union personnel.

The union has threatened to call out workers from other hotels unless the hotels agree to negotiate for a closed-shop agreement. The strike at present is in effect at the Roger Smith and Ambassador Hotels.

McGarraghy recalled that the union representatives walked out of a conference Monday, when the hotels flatly refused to consider the closed-shop demand. The Labor Department intervened, through Colvin, to try to prevent the strike from spreading.

Loses $2,700 Brooch

Florence M. Llewellyn, 2310 Connecticut avenue northwest, reported yesterday that she had lost a platinum brooch set with 15 large and 90 small diamonds and valued at $2,700.

Life Begins at 70

Widow Hasn't Time at 78 To Fret About Aches and Pains

MRS. SALLIE LEIZEAR

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

Found: A woman who actually enjoys housework. Mrs. Sallie Leizear not only does dishwashing, cooking and mending with a smile and a song but, at the age of 78, single-handedly performs all the other chores in the maintenance of a six-room house.

Mrs. Leizear, a widow, lives alone and enjoys it. Her domain is 630 Keefer place northwest. She coals the furnace, carries out the ashes, does her own laundry, makes minor repairing about the house and finds time to make colorful hooked rugs and handbags and crochet knickknacks of every possible use and description.

Popular Hostess in the Neighborhood

From 7 o'clock of a morning until 10 at night she is busy. Only when it comes time for heavy cleaning does she have any assistance.

With all that, she is still more to be envied than pitied. Only 17 months this side of octogenarianism, she looks no more than 60, enjoys good health and is one of the most popular hostesses in the neighborhood. Chinese checkers and the radio are her main indoor sports, yet when all is said and done housework is her favorite hobby and vocation, rolled into one.

Mrs. Leizear has made a career of keeping a home. A native of Ellicott City, Md., she married young and held only one nondomestic job in her life. That was during the World War, when she worked for a year as clerk in a wholesale house. Her husband died in 1909.

'I'd Be Having Imaginary Aches and Pains'

"Working really isn't the right word to describe what I do about the house," says Mrs. Leizear. "It's fun, not labor. Friends have suggested that I take a small apartment but do you know what would happen if I did? I'd get to sleeping late because there would be so much less to look after and first thing you know I'd be having imaginary aches and pains. Here I don't have time to fret about myself."

An ardent Bible student, she has been driven to church by the same friend every Sunday for the past 20 years. She likes the movies but goes seldom because her income is small and she prefers to drop spare coins in the church plate.

Childless herself, Mrs. Leizear was one of six children, of whom she is the only survivor. Neither her parents nor any of her brothers or sisters lived as long as she has, yet she was sickly in her younger years.

"If housework isn't the thing that has kept me going up to this point I don't know what it is," she says.

Mrs. Leizear makes all her dresses. Up to the time she fell and broke her arm a few years ago she sewed for friends also. Now, however, she makes dresses only for herself. And they're right chic, too.

Earle Film Is Not Naughty, But It Is Nice

'Darling Daughter' Is An Amusing Farce; Cass Daley Tops Stage

"YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER." Warner Brothers picturization of a play by Mark Reed, adapted to the screen by Casey Robinson with Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Roland Young, Fay Bainter, May Robson, Genevieve Tobin, Ian Hunter, Robert Homans, Edward Gargan, Spencer Charters and Lottie Williams. Directed by William Keighley. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

From the hinterlands — which would be New York, N. Y.—reverberations have been to the effect that "Yes, My Darling Daughter" is a naughty and censurable influence, but at its first local showing yesterday afternoon at the Earle Theater, we found it about as embarrassing as a taffy-pull. It isn't naughty, but it is nice.

Maybe we feel that way because we took it at its face value just as we do the old rhyme from which it gets its title:

"Mother, may I go out to swim?"
"Yes, my darling daughter:
Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,
But don't go near the water."

Priscilla Lane is the daughter whose swim takes the form of a week-end with her wholesome young boy-friend, Jeffrey Lynn, and away from her family. Fay Bainter is the bright mother who tells her daughter to have her swim but not to get wet.

Because it is obvious that Miss Lane uses liquids for washing purposes only and since Mr. Lynn is such an upstanding exponent of good, clean living, it would be merely nasty to infer that their week-end was anything but platonic. Furthermore, the film is not concerned so much with what happened to them as to what happened to everyone they left behind them. It is while the youngsters are tucked into their beds that the farce seeks its laughs.

Granny Is Delighted

Granny, May Robson, smiles delightedly at the situation, for in her clover days as a Greenwich Village suffragette, daughter Fay pulled the same stunts on her. Granny quietly enlists on the side of the younger generation and sees that Priscilla reaches her hickory limb without parental interference. As luck would have it, Roland Young, in his youth a village poet and now a respectable bachelor, is spending this particularly climactic week-end with the upset household. Father Ian Hunter barges into his daughter's whereabouts quite by accident. Auntie Genevieve Tobin sets her matrimonial bow for a fifth arrow and Roland Young.

Roland Young, Fay Bainter and May Robson are artful and amusing people and they make "Yes, My Darling Daughter" a pleasantly comical film.

Cass Daley Stars

On the Earle stage this week, the lassies hold all the spots, footlights and beams on the premises. Janis Williams and her beauty band try hard, but when the damsels take to waving the stick, this poor heart still belongs to Ina Ray Hutton.

Cass Daley is the backbone of the performers with her what-the-hell posings and her shouted assertion that "Old Man Mose Isn't Dead." And if, as she claims, he ain't, Cass is probably his reason for staying alive.

Verna Dette, a pleasant young blonde, sings her Victor Herbert and modern ballads neatly, improving as she goes along, and Beatrice Howell has a good impersonation of Barbara Stanwyck, but we still wish all impersonators would leave us our illusions about Garbo. The ever precise Roxyettes swing "Martha" smoothly and patter off in some very wet rain. RICHARD L. COE.

Mickey Rooney and Able Cast Score in Twain Story at Capitol

'Huckleberry Finn' Is Given an Interesting New Production; Stage Bill Clicks

"HUCKLEBERRY FINN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Mark Twain story, adapted to the screen by Hugo Butler, starring Mickey Rooney, with Walter Connolly, William Frawley, Elisabeth Risdon, Minor Watson, Lynne Carver, Jo Ann Sayers, Rex Ingram, Victor Kilian and Clara Blandick. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Mark Twain's rowdy young rascal of the Mississippi River banks, who abhorred shoes and the drudgery of school, but loved his pipe, has been rousingly brought back to life on the screen in all of his humor, pathos and heroism by that bounteously endowed young phenomenon of the cinema, Master Mickey Rooney.

BELL

"Huckleberry Finn," as revealed on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for the first time in Washington yesterday, adheres with remarkable fidelity to the spirit and the incident of the Clemens fiction. No attempt has been made to modernize the story, give it "glamour" or the slightest vestige of boy-and-girl romance.

Adventure on the River

To relieve the Widow Douglas and Miss Watson, his benefactors, from the money demands of a renegade father, humiliated by his failure to pass his grades in school and otherwise goaded to desperation, "Huck" sets out on his raft to see what he can see down the river. There he encounters Jim, the slave, seeking freedom, and together they come upon those two precious scamps, "The King" and "The Duke." It is then that their troubles really begin. The manner in which "Huck" salvages the fortune of the young heiresses, about to be swindled by the brace of crooke he and Jim have plucked out of the river after they have been tossed off a Mississippi packet for having had a few too many cards in the deck; the events that lead to Jim's threatened lynching and the manner in which "Huck" solves the whole exciting business are depicted on the silver sheet with a full emotional play that runs the gamut from low comedy to heartbreak and near-tragedy.

"Huckleberry Finn" is outstandingly Mickey Rooney's picture. He plays the title role completely up to the hilt. Perhaps he idealizes it a little too much and makes "Huck" a more sensitive creature than he appears on the printed page, but the result is all on the side of the film's ultimate effect as variegated and diverting entertainment.

"The King" and "The Duke" are played with fine exaggeration and a steady flow of comedy by Walter Connolly and William Frawley, and Rex Ingram, not seen on the screen since his memorable portrayal of De Lawd in "Green Pastures," does an exceptionally fine piece of work in the role of Jim.

Stellar Stage Bill

The stage bill at the Capitol this week is of all-star quality. The proceedings are presided over by Ken Whitmer, who also conducts the overture and provides a diversified musical specialty as one of the stellar features of the bill. He introduces a remarkable young feminine juggler from the continental halls, known only by the name of Trixie; Marjorie Gainsworth, a sterling soprano, already known to Washington audiences; Frank Albertson, Hollywood screen star and a stage actor of no mean proportions, and those peerless dancers, Virginia Lee and the Lathrop Brothers. Frankie Albertson, unlike many Hollywood stars, has a real act—in which he is assisted by two comic fellows—that includes comedy, singing, dancing and a great measure of informality. A clever chorus of line girls fills in the chinks with novel and colorful routines.

Young Star Brings 'Huck' to Life

MICKEY ROONEY

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 3.—Offhand, I'd say it won't be the easiest task in the world to screen the life story of Brigham Young and all his wives—but leave it to Darryl Zanuck to find a way. Yes, the history of the Mormon leader is to be Darryl's next fling at screen biography, following "Alexander Graham Bell," "Stanley and Livingston" and "Steinmetz." When I talked with the busy head of Twentieth Century-Fox last week, he told me the old "boy meets girl" theme is deader than a dodo bird, and obviously he's making good his word to give us mre stories of real people.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"Brigham Young" will be produced as an adventure spectacle emphasizing, of course, the famous trek of the religious group from Nauvoo, Ill., to Utah. I have often motored to Nauvoo, where relics of the early Mormons are still standing.

Just can't keep it a secret any longer that Clarence Brown will be borrowed by Darryl Zanuck to direct "The Rains Came." The deal brewing for nearly a week is due to be signed tomorrow. Clarence ought to be very good for the Louis Bromfield story, which involves a great many characters and combines the spectacular with the dramatic. Myrna Loy, as Lady Esketh, is the only player set so far. She, too, was borrowed from M.-G.-M., but Darryl is not one to delay once he gets started and you will find no "Gone With the Wind" monkey business on this one. Thank goodness—we couldn't take another one.

The smile on Frank Lloyd's face that won't come off is all because of a cable Will Fyffe sent him from London saying he will be here April 6. Frank had set his heart on the British character actor to play the dour Scotch engineer in Paramount's "Rulers of the Sea." But several other companies were angling for him, so you can imagine Frank's delight when he was able to sign him. Fyffe is not entirely unknown to Americans since he was in the Earl Carroll "Vanities" in 1936 and was seen here in "To the Victor," one of Great Britain's most successful pictures. "Rulers of the Sea" is a yarn about the fight between the old sailing boats and the steamers which supplanted them as a mode of water travel.

The long-talked of "Life of John Paul Jones" is not so far away from production. Clements Ripley, who has writen a serial on the "Father of the American Navy" for a current magazine, has sold his biography to Hal Wallis. Ripley is headed for Hollywood to write the treatment and discuss the story with James Cagney, who is to play the naval hero. Of course, "On Your Toes" is down for Mrs. Cagney's popular redhead first. Today on the Warner lot I heard that both Cagney and George Raft were definitely excused from the "Dillinger" melodrama and that Humphrey Bogart, heaven help him, is to play America's top gangster menace.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Kay Francis has been nursing her fiance, Baron Erik Barnekow, who has a streptococci throat; Marlene Dietrich says her tan needs replenishing so she is going to Palm Springs instead of Santa Anita tomorrow; Countess Di Frasso is also there but comes in Sunday morning to meet her house guest, the Duchess of Sutherland; Harry Warner was as happy as a 2-year-old today when a son of Man o' War was born to one of his thoroughbreds. His grandson, Warner Leroy, was just as delighted for he has a new playmate; Diana Tauber reached here today to attend her husband's concert Tuesday. Big night in Hollywood with both the "Dark Victory" preview and the Tauber event; Joy Hodges with Pat de Cicco at a night spot. Now don't tell me Joy is getting ready to announce an engagement to Pat; Will Rogers, jr., who has been keeping company with Eleanor Harris for many months, her escort at a cafe; Danny Danker's mother seriously ill in Boston; Orry Kelly is going to school every night to learn how to become a good American on account of he is applying for citizenship papers; Frances Langford and her favorite boy friend, Jon Hall, are hosting a luau tomorrow—a novelty even for Hollywood; Annabella, Tyrone and the Robert Youngs are traveling to Yosemite for a week-end of skiing; Nancy Lee is a flu sufferer. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Columbia

"Idiot's Delight" is notable for several reasons. The playwright did his own adaptation, Clark Gable tap dances, Norma Shearer turns in a neat Garbo burlesque, and there are some astounding-for-Hollywood indictments of war.

Robert Sherwood's fine play was naturally doctored somewhat for the movie public; its soldiers crowding the European mountain resort where the main action transpires, speak Esperanto; Mr. Sherwood says his collaborator was Mr. Mussolini. In all, it may be considered one of the most daring impeachments the screen has presented in spite of the fact that the main purpose seems to be to call attention to the fact that Shearer and Gable are together again.

Danger on the Mountain

Gable and Shearer come to the danger spot on the mountain from crude beginnings in American vaudeville. He has a troupe of dancers called "Les Blondes"; she is a phony Russian countess, who refuses to remember a certain hotel in Omaha until the enemy bombers are wrecking the resort.

Burgess Meridith has some brawny lines as a pacifist and he delivers them with fire and conviction. Laura Hope Crews has a few good scenes in the reading partner in his four-a-day routine. Edward Arnold is a despicable munitions magnate. There are any number of other skilled players who contribute vastly to the smoothness of the pretending, making it a feature you will not want to miss.

In the supplemental shorts there is a travelogue about Singapore, a "Captain and the Kids" cartoon, a "Miniature" by Carey Wilson, and an adequate newsreel. S. S.

Unique Crime Play Features Bill at Met.

'Ambush' Presents Many Aspects of Novelty; Gladys Swarthout Stars

"AMBUSH." Paramount picturization of a story by Robert Ray, adapted to the screen by Laura and S. J. Perelman, with Gladys Swarthout, Lloyd Nolan, William Henry, Ernest Truex, William Frawley, Broderick Crawford, Rufe Davis, Raymond Hatton, Antonio Moreno, Billy Lee and Polly Moran. Directed by Kurt Neuman. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater

Although Gladys Swarthout stifles her far-famed voice and Ernest Truex hides his popular penchant for comedy, "Ambush" is one of those engrossing melodramas that shows what careful workmanship can do for the cinema. It opened yesterday at the Metropolitan Theater and the verdict must be that it is an almost surprisingly straightforward and interesting film.

In this tale of cops-and-robbers there are no ditteringly brilliant detectives, no dither-headed dandies, no reporters who speak like a producer's dream-journalist, no toughies whose talk is worthy of an Alec Woollcott and no top-hatted lawyers. All the persiflage of cinematic typing has been "included out" and the result is a cast of credible humans going about life the way such people generally don't in most melodramas.

A quartet of bandits is made up of some of these natural people: the weak, but resourceful youngster, who scarcely realizes his potentialities; a smart and decisive leader, cold and without compassion; a husky, lack-luster and a ruthless murderer, motivated by his ambitions. They force a girl employe to help them in their plot to rob the bank. To insure a successful escape they marshal the services and truck of honest Lloyd Nolan and force him to aid in the flight. While a love story does develop between these two innocent victims of the gang, it really doesn't rear itself to the detriment of the plot's evolution.

Is Carefully Developed.

That is the chief redeeming feature of "Ambush." Nothing is allowed to stand in the way of the progression of the central story, which is developed with remarkable care. Director Kurt Neuman carries each sequence from one move to the next and the strict adherence to facts, upon which he has apparently insisted, give the film a genuinely believable police angle. The detection is shown to be as cunning as that of the criminals and not the usual last minute brilliant stroke of a master detective.

The brunette Miss Swarthout doesn't miss her velvety notes in the least and plays her role with disarming candor. For anyone fond of the comical tendencies of Mr. Truex it is something of a wrench to find him behaving so evily and we are afraid that for us, at least, his comedy will never seem quite so funny again. We have a notion that that is merely the result of some skillful acting by a versatile performer. Praise be to heaven, Polly Moran pops in for a time and creates enough finger-pointing in the Metropolitan to force her to remain "in harness" where she belongs. To complete our confusion about villains, Lloyd Nolan plays the honest truck driver and while he was certainly innocent enough, we'd feel more at home next time to be sure that he was a villain and not have uncomfortable doubts.

Auxiliaries Are Many

The Metropolitan surrounds this forthright dictum that "Crime Does Not Pay" with a quarter-hour of newsreels and other short reels. There is a bit of doubt in the clips from Rome, which purport to show the crowds acclaiming the new Pope Pius XII right after his election. While we do live in a remarkable age, it is certainly not that remarkable. A Grantland Rice Sportlight, "The Sporting Irish," shows some of the activities of the Emerald Islanders at play and "Sunday Serenade" is a two-reeler with songs and dances. Floyd Gibbons also brings one of his lengthening series to the screen in "One Minute from Death."

Taking stock, it is a full bill at the Metropolitan with special emphasis on "Ambush" and its unusually exciting melodrama.

'Three Smart Girls' Resent RawTurkey

Nan Grey, Helen Parrish and Bob Cummings are vigorously seconding her remarks.

The "turkey talk" came about when an under-done roast turkey was used as a "prop" during a dining sequence for "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," Deanna's current picture. The Three Smart Girls registered a protest.

"But you don't eat any of the turkey in the scene," Henry Koster, the director, explained.

"That's right. But what do you suppose becomes of the turkey after the scene is finished," the girls asked.

Investigation as to the fate of past turkeys disclosed that roast turkeys are usually divided among the cast and crew.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 3.

SHIPPING NOTES: These are the facts concerning Jim Farley's single trip on F. Donald-Musica's yacht—facts which have just been checked by the Department of Justice . . . Two years ago Farley dined at the New York Yacht Club before he was scheduled to go to Staten Island by ferry. His secretary suggested that some yacht moored at the club might take the Postmaster General to his Staten Island engagement . . . The commodore of the yacht club informed that the only yacht in commission was the Carolita, whose captain suggested that the owner's permission be secured . . . Farley's secretary called F. Donald Coster, who gave his consent . . . After the Carolita took Farley to Staten Island and back, he signed the guest book: "Thanks for a lovely trip across the Kull to Staten Island and back to New York.—Jim Farley."

HEALTH DEPARTMENT: The Marquis de Cuevas, John D. Rockefeller's son-in-law, must submit to an eye operation next month . . . The operation will be performed at the Eye Institute by Dr. Castaviejo . . . "Tell me, doctor," asked the marquis, "what will the operation be like?" . . . "It's be like this," the surgeon replied, took Cuevas to a darkroom—and showed him movies of a similar operation.

FOOD DEPARTMENT: Mayor LaGurdia has been placed upon a strict diet by his physician . . . Fiorello is permitted to eat steak, but the one dish he positively must not touch is spaghetti.

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: The New York Times learned that Eleanor Roosevelt was attending the premiere of the WPA Federal Theater's "Swing Mikado." Sam Zolotow, the Times' drama editor, received a message from his editor assigning him to ask Mrs. Roosevelt about that 80-year-old Westerner who told the newspapers that he had received a WPA job by writing to Mrs. Roosevelt, and hearing from her . . . Zolotow approached the First Lady during intermission and asked her about this story . . . "I don't know," Mrs. Roosevelt frankly confessed. "I write so many letters I forget what I write."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: Harry Hopkins, who was WPA Administrator when "Swing Mikado" first was produced, also attended the premiere. He was questioned about Michael Todd's forthcoming production of "Hot Mikado" and the complaint that the United States Government thereby was competing with private enterprise . . . "Well, this show made $70,000 in Chicago—so people complain that we compete," replied Hopkins. "But if we had lost $70,000—they'd complain we were throwing away money."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: When Benny Goodman broke the record at the Fox Theater in Detroit this week, his mother sent him a framed plaque on which was inscribed Oliver Herford's line: "Here's to Music, joy of joys—one man's music . . . another man's noise." It was signed: "Queen Mother of Swing."

LOCAL NEWS: Ted Husing, who emerged from the hospital recently, is back there now—at Lenox Hill . . . A Philadelphia school suggested to Random House, which published the play, "The American Way," that if the play were rewritten as a novel, they'd order 10,000 copies and use it as a textbook . . . Woollcott Gibbs is writing a Profile of Alexander Woollcott for the New Yorker. It will be done in the Woollcott—Alec, not Gibbs—style . . . The Monte Carlo has become the town's newest favorite . . . Leon Turrou, who became a former G-man when J. Edgar Hoover refused to accept his resignation, will have his second book published next month. It will be called "How to Be a G-Man" . . . Ben Blue went to two cafes last night to try to forget the fact that he has to pay his wife $1,200 a month alimony. In both places he saw her—with another man.

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Patsy Perroni, the heavyweight who fought Gus Dorazio at the Garden tonight, appeared in the Robert Taylor movie, "The Crowd Roars" . . . In that movie Perroni was "kayoed" by Taylor . . . "Why didn't you throw a real punch at Taylor?" Perroni was asked. "It would have made you wind up famous" . . . "It would have made me wind up," Patsy sighed, "on the cutting-room floor."

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: When Norman Bel Geddes was producing his modern-dress "Hamlet" some years ago, Noel Coward suddenly announced that he was quitting the play. "I just can't work in a play I didn't write," Coward explained. "But I know somebody in England who can do the role perfectly" . . . "What's his name?" Bel Geddes asked . . . "His name is Raymond Massey," Coward answered—and phoned the then unknown Massey . . . Bel Geddes spoke to him and offered him one-way fare . . .

WHEN MASSEY arrived in N. Y., Bel Geddes was introduced to him, took one hasty look at Massey's face and lamented: "Coward should've known that I wanted a man to play Hamlet—not Abe Lincoln."

GAME DEPARTMENT: Goodman Ace of the Easy Aces played bridge at the Friars Club this week . . . Bert Frohman, who is building a new Fifty-second street cafe, decided to take a hand— but when he seated himself, Ace quit . . . "What's the idea?" Frohman asked. "I'm not such a crack bridge player" . . . "That's just it," Ace returned. "I once promised myself never to go into the night-club business."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 3.—The marryingest man in Hollywood wears an expression of quiet melancholy. Now, don't jump to conclusions. That tenderly pained look is no reflection on the institution of matrimony — in his case, that is. Rather, it, combined with a general bearing of great dignity, is important stock in trade in his marrying role.

HEDDA HOPPER

You may not even recognize his name, but you've seen him often performing marriage ceremonies in pictures. He is Joseph Benton North and he carries almost as many kinds of marriage rituals in his portfolio of assets as a certain pickle factory has brands.

Forty-seven varieties—that's the list of marriage ceremonies, representing 47 religions that Benton can spout by heart with absolute accuracy, authority and conviction. How's that for specialization—and for giving him a unique place in Hollywood—or elsewhere?

Benton's latest marriage chore is being performed for "Wuthering Heights," tying the knot in Nineteenth Century fashion for Merle Oberon and David Niven. He could have done this one in his sleep, having performed six Church of England weddings previously on various lots. Guess it's true for I hear he was letter perfect in the first rehearsal.

Besides those six roles, Benton's faced a screen bride and groom in 46 pictures. Seems he's an authority on all kinds of rituals—from Eskimo to Hindu. But it's interesting to know that he often has to combine ingredients from different rituals, in order not to shock any religious sects.

Another thing that might amuse you—screen brides sometimes feel as jittery as the real thing. That ought to prove some of 'em lose themselves in a part. Claudette Colbert was nervous as anything as a picture bride, he says, and the "I do's" once made Laura LaPlante cry.

I had missed the one about the Loy bonnet. Maybe you did, too, so here goes. Silver fox, it was, and gorgeous atop Myrna's luscious, you-all-know-the-color hair. Muff and stole matched (the fur, not the hair, silly.) On the way out to dine with hubby Hornblow, one balmy eve, a long low whistle reached her ears. "Don't shoot," said the whistler to his companion, "She's out of season."

Did the quizzical look on sweet little Mrs. Bergen's face when she looked at Charlie McCarthy while visiting here the other day, mean she couldn't realize he wasn't alive and human or the old wonder that he was just a chip off an old block? At any rate, she didn't appear a bit jealous of all the furore the little man's caused, as many a dotting mother might on seeing her son so modestly evade the limelight.

Of course, you can dish out Spencer Tracy to me in anything. And I suppose that'll have to include the tin shorts he wears in a scene of "Stanley and Livingston." Well, it's better than striped broadcloth for wading through an alligator-infested swamp, now isn't it?

KAYAK II, STAGEHAND FAVORED TODAY

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 3.

Pardon my British accent, but Old England is blowing its breath all over this bally place. Mr. Joseph E. Widener, affluent son of a Philadelphia butcher, who runs the Hialeah show, is attempting to make the quality folks like it. For the Cliveden set it must be wonderful, but to an old Bowie bettor like myself, it is slightly confusing.

POVICH

Mr. Widener has left no blarney stone unturned in his unblushing efforts to make of Hialeah a British track. There is no such thing as a first, second or third race at Hialeah. If you want to get a bet down on the first, you must bet on the 2 o'clock race and if you like something in the second, you don't like him in the second, you like him in the 2:30 race. The eighth isn't the last race of the day here, it's the 5:30 o'clock race. Just like old England, see?

And that ain't all. The vulgar "foul claimed" is out at Hialeah. Instead we have the tony "objection" flashed on the odds board. And tomorrow afternoon when the winner of the $50,000 Widener Cup enters the winner's circle, they won't play "My Old Kentucky Home," or the National Anthem. They will play "America," but Mr. Widener probably will call it "God Save the King."

The Customers Seem to Like It All

Folks seem to like it, though, so we suppose there is no quarrel with Mr. Widener's British phobia. But there is evidence that he is a better showman than he is a businessman. Because tomorrow afternoon along about 4:30 p. m. he will see a horse that he sold for $8,000 go to the post the 3 to 5 favorite to win the $50,000 Widener Cup.

Stagehand is the horse and he has done right well since Widener sold him to Col. Maxwell Howard two years ago. He picked up a little sum of $100,000 for beating Seabiscuit in the Santa Anita Handicap a year ago and that must have been a bit galling to Mr. Widener, who seemingly has made a practice of selling horses which win $100,000 stakes. After he sells them. Not so many years ago he disposed of a steeplechaser named Azucar to Fred A. Alger and what did Azucar do but take down that $100,000 Santa Anita prize not so many months after.

But lucky it is for Mr. Widener that Stagehand has panned out as he has, because save for Stagehand's presence in the Widener Cup tomorrow it would be a very sorry race indeed. Because Stagehand will go to the post, the show is saved. The bottom fell out of the 1939 Widener when War Admiral developed a fever and laryngitis, destroying the picture of a race between the Riddle ace and Stagehand. But whatever interest attaches to the race will be supplied by Stagehand. The fans like to see him make his famous stretch rush. He is strictly a come-from-behinder and that kind of a race always pleases.

Four of the Nine Entries Hold Interest

One thing is certain about tomorrow's race. Stagehand will be last when they round the far turn and head for the stretch. He's as sluggish a beginner as any stake horse in history. But that is the only way he can run, and his riders are directed to let him settle into stride in the first half mile. Because tomorrow's will be a small field of not more than seven, Stagehand, if he had the speed, could run most any kind of a race that he liked with little fear of interference, but Stagehand must run the only race he knows—a slow first half-mile, and then let 'em have his furious speed late in the backstretch and after the turn for home.

Four of the nine entries are commanding all the discussion of the Widener tonight. They are Stagehand, of course; Trainer George P. Odom's entry of Sir Damion and Pasteurized, and the Calumet Farm's Bull Lea. The rest will merely look pretty in colors, according to the pre-race dope. And the $650 starting fee may scare out such as Teddy Weed and Xavier, who are also entered in the day's seventh race, and would like mud anyway.

Earle Sande, who sends Stagehand to the races in his role as trainer for Col. Howard, may be visited by some of his old tricks tomorrow afternoon and in that case Stagehand may not win the race. Because the Odom entry will have on its backs the two jockeys who are Hialeah's best—Don Meade and Eddie Arcaro, while on Stagehand will be Jimmy Stout, an earnest, dependable rider, but by no means brilliant.

Sande-Fator Tactics May Be Revived

It is conceivable that Meade, on the speedy Sir Damion, and Arcaro, on the stretch-running Pasteurized, may attempt the old Sande-Fator tactics when those two jockeys were riding Rancocas Stable entries in stake races and getting away with cute tricks. Sande or Fator, as the case may be, would take the speed horse of the field to the front and set a killing pace, and set also the stage for the second part of the entry to come from behind and win.

That's what may happen tomorrow. Meade will be aboard Sir Damion, the possessor of the best early foot, and Arcaro will be on Pasteurized, noted for his stretch-running qualities. If Meade can force Stagehand to make his move early, Arcaro may be able to give the favorite a battle of it in the stretch with Pasteurized. Over night the odds are 3 to 1 that the Odom entry can turn the rick.

Sout, on Stagehand, can hardly afford to let Sir Damion go too far to the fore because Meade is a faultless judge of pace and may go on to win with his mount. Thus there will be a strong temptation for Stout to attempt a move earlier than usual. And Arcaro, on Pasteurized, is not called the Kentucky Strong Boy for no good reason. He's the most muscular rider in silks and if a rider can help a horse in the stretch, Pasteurized will be in great hands if he hooks up in a fast finish with Stagehand.

But if Stagehand tomorrow run back to his record-tying mile and an eighth of last week here, you can buy the chances of the rest of the field for twopence, at current Hialeah quotations.

Strong Field Seeks $50,000 At Hialeah

Entry of Sir Damion And Pasteurized Strongest Threat In Rich Widener

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 3.—Nine thoroughbreds, headed by Col. Maxwell Howard's great Stagehand, were named today to go to the post in the fourth running of the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup, mile and a quarter classic climaxing the Hialeah Park season tomorrow.

A crowd of 25,000 is expected to throng the beautiful plant, and a good part of them will have their money riding on Stagehand, long-striding son of Sickle. Stagehand won both the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby last year.

It would have been different if War Admiral hadn't developed a temperature and been withdrawn. He and Stagehand would have reached the post about equal favorites. But with the stout son of Man o' War moping in his stall, Stagehand is figured to be a little too powerful in the stretch for Bull Lea, Pasteurized and Sir Damion, the trio counted upon to give him the real opposition.

Meade on Sir Damion

Marshall Field's Sir Damion, with the sensational Don Meade in the saddle, and Mrs. W. Plucket Stewart's Pasteurized, ridden by the talented Eddie Arcaro, are running as an entry, and a dangerous one. They will be second favorites in the mutuel betting, with Calumet Farm's Bull Lea and logical third.

The other five runners, Teddy Weed, Mythical King, Francesco, Warlaine and Xavier, scarcely are in Stagehand's class at such a long distance, and it is considered probable Xavier will be withdrawn unless it rains hard before post time at 4:30 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time). But a continuation of today's beautiful weather was forecast.

There is no way to get out of pick-

Santa Anita Classic Lists 18 Starters

Crowd of 63,000 Is Expected to Watch Annual Running of $100,000 Fixture

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 3.—Eighteen candidates were named to make up the cast as the stage was set tonight for the presentation of the richest turf extravaganza in America—the fifth running of the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap tomorrow.

A crowd of 63,000, another "million dollar" betting day and a fast track were in prospect as the following candidates were named to go postward in the mile and one-quarter event: Kayak II, 110; Cravat, 120; Whichee, 112; Heelfly, 117; Specify, 115; Jacola, 119; Gosum, 110; Today, 12; Sorteado, 124; Thanksgiving, 118; Congressman, 110; Main Man, 117; Quick Devil, 109; Amor Brujo, 108; Frexo, 106; Olimpo, 114; War Minstrel, 112, and Melodist, 105.

Kayak II Favored

Kayak II, owned by C. S. Howard and the San Francisco sportsman's best bet since withdrawal of Seabiscuit, rated the general favorite. With a record of eight victories in 11 starts and never a finish out of the money, the South American horse seemed to justify the betting odds of 4-1. Jockey Johnny Adams was named to ride Kayak II.

Rated just back of this Argentine-bred 4-year-old was Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, also at 4 to 1, which gained following by a terrific stretch dash that made up 12 lengths on the winner in the San Antonio Handicap last Saturday. It was Cravat's first start at Santa Anita and veteran Alfred Robertson will be back in the saddle.

No Rain Expected

Far from conceding any entry a solid chance for victory, expert opinion was widely divided between Kayak II, Cravat, Gosum, Today, Whichcee, Specify, Jacola and possibly Congressman, Heelfly, Sorteado, Thanksgiving and Main M.

Prophets said tomorrow's weather probably would be "unsettled," but added a reassuring note that no rain was expected.

In the draw for post positions, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Heelfly, a great 3-year-old that has been having a hard time getting back to form after an illness a year ago, plucked the No. 3 position. Stagehand won the big race from this position last year, and Azucar had it the year he won the inaugural. Top row, 1936 winner, started from No. 10 and Rosemont was at No. 17 in 1937.

Kayak II On Outside

Kayak II drew the outside, Cravat No. 12, Whichcee 11, Specify 4, Gosum 10, Today 14, and Jacola, lone filly in the field, came out with 6.

With no standout candidate in the ranks, dopesters were in a dither—reluctant to light on any eligible as a "sure thing." Doubt was cast on the ability of Kayak II, the two sprinters, Whichcee and Specify, and some of the longer shots to go the handicap distance, while Cravat, Jacola, Gosum and Thanksgiving were rated well able to cover the route.

If all 18 answer the bugle at post time, set for 7:12 o'clock (E. S. T.), the victor will collect $92,600 along with a handsome gold cup. Runner-up purses are $20,000, $10,000 and $5,000, and, in addition, the winning trainer collects $10,000 as a present from the Los Angeles Turf Club.

Picard Loses To Sam Snead In 25 Holes

West Virginian Is $700 Richer After St. Pete Play-Off

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 3.—Sammy Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., won the St. Petersburg Open golf championship here today, defeating Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., in a 25-hole playoff.

Snead and Picard shot 69s, three under par, for the first 18 holes after tying at 207, nine under par, for the 54 holes of the tournament. Snead won the playoff at the twenty-fifth hole by sinking a 4-foot putt for a birdie 2.

Snead's hard-won victory gave him top money of $700 and his first major tournament victory of many weeks, although he was the leading money winner of 1938.

Although Picard missed out on his third straight tournament triumph, second-place money of $450 boosted to $3,150 his winnings for the past two weeks. He captured top prize of $2,000 in the $10,000 Crescent City Open at New Orleans two weeks ago and his first at Thomasville last week brought him another $700.

It was the longest play-off in the history of the St. Petersburg Open which has produced overtime play for four straight years.

Leonard Dodson, of Springfield, Mo., defeated Harry Cooper, of Chicago in the 1936 play-off. The next year Harry Cooper won from Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., and Ralph Guldahl, Coral Gables, Fla. Last year Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., defeated Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va.

DeWitt Star as Terps Gain Final Round

Old Liners Only Seeded Team Left In Southern Conference Tourney; Johnson, And Mondorff Also Star for Locals

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., March 3.—The high-riding Old Liners of Maryland, only seeded team left in the play, swamped the North Carolina State Red Terrors here tonight, 53 to 29, to advance to the finals of the Southern Conference basketball tourney.

George Dewitt and Eddie Johnson turned in pretty offensive exhibitions and Pershing Mondorff, with a fine exhibition of ball hawking, topped the defensive work. Mondorff also scored 8 points, several times breaking away to score. Dewitt tallied 12 points and Johnson 11.

Clemson defeated Davidson, 49-33, in the other semifinal. Clemson will meet Maryland U. tomorrow night in the final match of the tourney.

State's team, consisting of only seven men who have taken part in any reasonable number of games this year, couldn't get to going after winning over Duke, the defending champion, Wednesday night by one point and then taking a 2-point thriller last night from the fourth-seeded team of the Citadel. Bill Mann scored 14 points and P. G. Hill, 12 for the losers.

George Dewitt, working smoothly, started the game's scoring after 30 seconds, and Johnson made it 4 to 0. Hill sank two free chances to start State off after 1 minute and a quarter, but Maryland forged steadily ahead. The lead was 26 to 9 after 19 minutes, and half-time found it 27 to 11.

After the score reached 35 to 15, in the second half, the Terrors rallied, but couldn't close the gap. The

Clark Griffith Praises Work Of Masterson

Old Fox Says Walter Is Best of Rookies; Cold Hampers Drill

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., March 3.—Cold weather chilled the Nats workout here today as a stiff wind and heavy sky brought out the squad in heavy overjackets and sweat shirts. Nonetheless, several pitchers were paraded before the scrutinizing eyes of Clark Griffith.

Walter Masterson, rather than Roberto Ortiz or Alejandro Cassaquels, dominated today's program, causing the Old Fox to coin new phrases of praise for the youngster who forsook the Athletics to join up with the Griffmen.

"The more I look at him," said Griffith, "the more I think he's the best rookie of the crop. That boy is smart, I tell ya'. He's only 19, but he picks up things quicker'n all the rest of the greenhorns put together."

Masterson Amazes Bosses

Masterson, a big righthander, husky and good-looking, amazed Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris with his remarkable display of control. Demonstrating his newly acquired change of pace, Masterson brought wonderment to the eyes of Griffith, who had been giving the Philadelphia boy pointers only the day before.

"This kid doesn't tip off his hand a bit," declared Griffith happily. "I can't tell whether he's going to throw his fast ball or ease up with his change of pace until the ball is half way up to the plate. He's gotten his delivery down pat. When a youngster masters deception like that he's got something."

At the same time Harris was comparing Masterson's fast ball with the other youngsters of the squad.

"For the time being, at least," said Bucky, "I'd rather have Masterson's fast ball than Ortiz's. Its got more life to it. The Cuban's just rides up there straight as a string, but Masterson's has a decided hop on it."

Rookies to Foreign Ports

Many of the green rookies will be shipped to foreign ports by the start of next week, as Harris said today he was retaining only those whom he thought "might possibly" come through this year.

"Besides," said Harris, "I want to teach a few of these fellows something before we send them away. When a boy gets in the minors he has to educate himself. Very seldom does anyone else tip them off on their faults and help them to correct themselves."

Track Stars Vie Tonight In C. U. Games

More than 400 athletes, representing 15 high and prep schools and 18 colleges, tonight will bid for recognition and prizes in the sixth annual Catholic University indoor track meet, starting at 7:30 o'clock.

The feature events of the meet, which has drawn one of its largest fields of outstanding athletes from every part of the East, are the Abbey Club Trophy 50 yards and the Rector's Cup Mile, both for colleges.

The District area will be well represented, both in the collegiate and scholastic divisions. In addition to Catholic University, Georgetown, Maryland, George Washington and American have entered men to uphold local prestige against Virginia, Johns Hopkins, Washington and Lee, St. Peter's, Navy, Villanova, Bridgewater, West Chester Teachers College, Dela-

Cunningham, Lash Meet in 2-Mile Race

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 3.—Collegiate track hysteria, growing these last two months, will reach the padded cell stage tomorrow night in the eighteenth Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championship meet, a meet spiced with the promise of a spectacular duel between two of the day's greatest runners, Glenn Cunningham and Don Lash, in a special 2-mile race.

As the army of 300 athletes, representing 28 Eastern colleges, went through final workouts today the question, "who will win the 2-mile" ranked with the always pertinent query, "who will win the team title." This is one meet when the boys give the old college try in an effort to pick up the fourth or fifth place points that often decide the winner of the team championship.

If Cunningham or Lash can be believed, neither will win their special, thus leaving the event to either Tommy Deckard, Don's fellow Hoosier, or Greg Rice, determined Notre Dame ace. This is hard to accept. Despite Lash's preoccupation with his try to lower his 2-mile record at Dartmouth, March 15, and Cunningham's beef he is not trained for the distance, neither Rice or Deckard figure to whip the master miler or the world's indoor record holder.

Paul Waner May Quit Baseball, Report

Mann, Kanner Win N. Y. Bouts

New York, March 3 (I.N.S.)—Nate Mann, New Haven heavyweight, scored a close 10-round decision over Buddy Knox, of Dayton, in Madison Square Garden tonight.

They slugged head to head for the whole journey but there were no knockdowns and neither was in danger until the tenth when Mann staggered Knox with a right to the jaw.

In another 10-rounder, Patsey Perroni, of Cleveland, easily outpointed Gus Dorazio, Philadelphia heavyweight.

Pat Comiskey, 198½, Paterson, N. J., and Gene Bonin, 190¾, New Haven, drew, six rounds.

Murray Kanner, 200½, Washington, decisioned Francis Jacques, 191, Paris.

Hubbell's Screwball Is Perfect, He Finds

Hot Springs, Ark., March 3 (AP).—An operation may have altered Carl Hubbell's pitching arm, but that famous screwball hasn't changed a bit, he discovered today.

The New York Giants mound ace, uncorking his regular pitch for the first time since his arm failed on him last August, said:

"It didn't hurt a bit. Of course, I didn't bear down but I really believe my arm is going to be all right. I really believe that."

New York, March 3.—Fred Perry is mad at Ellsworth Vines for playing so limply here and there against Don Budge . . . the Englishman thinks, and justly enough, that he himself will have to work all the harder, in his own impending tour with Budge, to restore public confidence in pro tennis . . . Perry was especially distressed by the way Vines played at Madison Square Garden in the opening match, and at New Orleans, where Budge beat him 6—0, 6—1 . . . "How does that guy expect to play tennis in Des Moines when he's mentally playing golf in Los Angeles?" Perry demanded the other day, after finishing a workout.

DiMaggio Signs Yankee Contract; Gets $2,000 Raise

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 3 (AP).—Manager Joe McCarthy, of the New York Yankees, today announced Joe DiMaggio had signed his 1939 contract. McCarthy made his announcement after a telephone conversation with Ed Barrow in New York. DiMaggio is due to report here on Monday along with other members of the second squad, and presumably is en route to camp now.

While no figures were announced, it is believed DiMaggio signed for 27,000, a $2,000 increase over his 1938 salary. His signing leaves only Red Rolfe, Joe Gordon and Frankie Crosetti as holdouts.

This is the earliest date that DiMaggio has signed his contract since joining the Yankees in 1936. He held out until March 20 in 1937 and didn't put his name on the dotted line until April 25 last year.

False Point, $9.50, Takes Final Race on Turf at Hialeah

Meade Rides Healey Filly In Triumph

Go Home Is Beaten By Three Lengths; Hard Lu Winner in Sprint for Juveniles

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 3.—The last turf course event of the Florida season featured the next-to-closing program of the Miami Jockey Club's successful meeting here today. False Point, a 4-year-old daughter of Jamestown flying the silks of J. A. Healey, proved the heroine of the mile and a sixteenth Grade "C" contest, called the Del Rio Purse. The brown filly scored by three lengths in 1:46 2-5, one of the fastest grass performances of the local session, and paid her backers $9.50 for $2.

Dewitt Page's Go Home, favorite in the field of nine, saved the place by a half length. J. F. Quinn's Landblubber was third.

False point won her last start over 7 furlongs of the main track. She again had the pace-setting jockey, Don Meade, in the saddle.

Tomorrow's renewal of the rich Widener Challenge Cup was on everyone's lips here today, with virtually one question being asked, "Who will be second to Stagehand?" Although the weather report early this afternoon predicted partly cloudy weather tonight and Saturday, a bright, warm sun was shining as the feature was run and the racing strip was in perfect condition. Should all nine start in the Widener, the net value to the winner would figure $47,450.

Meade lost no time hustling False Point into a daylight lead. Feng gave closest chase into the backstretch, then Go Home made a threatening move approaching the far turn. The highly fancied veteran drew up alongside False Point and the pair battled around the bend. Go Home went wide entering the stretch, but he was, nevertheless, no match for the winner. The Healey filly pulled away without being extended. Landlubber ran over the tired Feng for the show.

(Copyright, 1939, by Regal Press, Inc. Daily Racing Form.)

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Three furlongs (nursery course). Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:00. Off 2:03. Winner, Stroube and Collins' ch. f. (2), by Hard Tack—Luminosa. Trained by M. M. Harrison. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:34 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARD LU, $12.10, $6.10, $5.60; DARBY DALLAS, $5.10, $4.30; BALTEE, $43.60.

HARD LU broke alertly, responded gamely to pressure while racing straight, assumed a short lead approaching the furlong pole and outlasted DARBY DALLAS in the final drive. DARBY DALLAS, quickest away, swerved out in the run out of the chute and lost ground, made a courageous effort when straightened out, but was unable to overhaul the winner. BALTEE, prominent contender throughout, held the others safe. FIERY VISION closed some ground through the stretch. MAECHANCE had no excuses.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:33. Winner, Mrs. W. Hodson's ch. c. (4), by Whiskalong—Predominant. Trained by W. Hodson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPANDAU, $7.50, $4.60, $4.30; MEXICO CITY, $10.80, $6.20; MAEBAU, $5.30.

SPANDAU, much the best, opened up a commanding lead at his leisure on stretch turn and won with speed to spare. MEXICO CITY gradually bettered his position and closing gamely between the leaders, held MAEBAU safe in the final drive. MAEBAU saved ground early and was taken to the outside coming into the stretch, made a bold bid, but faltered in the last furlong. FLUSHING, slow to get going, closed a big gap. GAONA showed early foot, but quit badly.

Daily Double, Hard Lu and Spandau, Paid $45.50.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00. Off 3:01. Winner, C. H. Cleary's br. c. (3), by Chicle—Somora. Trained by C. Porter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:12.

BLUE TRACE	(Roberts)	110	2	7	7h	8h½	11	11	124.36

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALEXICO, $3.80, $3.60, $2.70; HEZDREL, $24.60, $9.10; BUCKET HEAD, $3.90.

CALEXICO began fast, set a fast pace while maintaining a short lead and saving the most ground, responded gamely to punishment in the final furlong and drew out. HEZDREL displayed good speed and went well up, swung to the outside entering the stretch and closed gamely to wear BUCKET HEAD down in the last strides. The latter, in close attendance of the winner in the early stages, faltered slightly when the final test came. PETE WENDLING, on the outside early, maintained his position gamely in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200. The Del Rio. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won cleverly; place driving. Went to post 3:29. Off 3:31. Winner, J. A. Healey's br. f. (4), by Jamestown—Fallacious. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FALSE POINT, $9.50, $3.60; $3.40; GO HOME, $3.30, $2.90; LANDLUBBER, $4.50.

FALSE POINT took command at once, was rated in front while saving much ground and shook off GO HOME when straightened into the stretch to win mildly urged. GO HOME, on the inside rounding the first turn, swung around the leaders approaching the half-mile ground, assumed a brief lead between calls, but bore out entering the stretch and lost ground, and was taken to the outside coming into the stretch, made a bold bid, but faltered in the last furlong. FLUSHING, slow to get going, closed a big gap. FENG, a forward contender early, weakened through the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Lost Lake. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:59. Off 4:00. Winner, Greentree Stable's gr. c. (3), by Royal Minstrel—Easy Day. Trained by J. M. Gaver. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:13, 1:38 1-5, 1:50 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DAY OFF, $2.70, $2.20, $2.20; GRANDEVER, $3.30, $2.20; SHAMBLES, $2.20.

DAY OFF, in tight quarters rounding the first turn, swung around EGRESS in the run down the backstretch, and took command when called upon to win mildly urged. GRANDEVER, slow to find his stride, gradually improved his position in the final three furlongs and easily disposed of SHAMBLES. The latter moved up stoutly on the stretch turn, but faltered in the final drive. LOURDES had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:43. Winner, Mrs. W. H. Cane's b. c. (3), by Burgoo King—Blue-Eyed Peggy. Trained by H. L. Campbell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:13 1-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:52 4-5.

LENOIR	(Merritt)	104	4	2	1½	10	10	10	10	137.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINGOO, $8.80, $5.20, $3.60; GREEDAN, $5.10, $3.80; BIG NED, $3.60.

KINGOO, under steadying restraint in the early stages, moved up with determination entering the stretch, drew out into a safe lead and was in hand at the end. GREEDAN, carried wide, lost ground rounding the first turn, gradually bettered his position and finished gamely, but could not reach the winner. BIG NED, in close quarters on the inside to the stretch turn, was taken around the field coming into the stretch, finished strongly and outlasted BEACON ROCK, the latter, hustled to the front in the run down the backstretch, weakened in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:04. Winner, McKelvey and Moran's b. m. (5), by Percentage—Homebody. Trained by E. A. Moran. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:52 4-5.

MY WO	(Nash)	104	4		Lost rider					4.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MO, $19.30, $16.60, $5.70; MAEFLEET, $12.90, $6.30; CROWNING GLORY, $3.40.

MO, going forwardly on the outside, assumed command entering the stretch, responded gamely when the final test came and outlasted MAEFLEET. The latter, on the inside and troubled early, went around the leaders coming into the stretch and made a game effort, but could not get up. CROWNING GLORY held the field safe for speed and rated in front while saving ground, held on with good courage in the final drive. JACK FLY was interfered with by the loose horse rounding the lower turn. MY WO stumbled and unseated her rider when the start came and interfered with most of the field, only CROWNING GLORY and GRAND MARIE escaping trouble.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:33. Off 5:35. Winner, F. Cantey's ch. g. (5), by Gallant Fox—Peroration. Trained by P. Liggett. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:40 1-5, 1:53 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REBUTTAL, $5.20, $3.60, $3.20; DON COSSACK, $5.40, $4.20; CHECK SIGNAL, $6.00.

REBUTTAL, going forwardly while saving ground, moved to the front with a rush between the leaders entering the stretch and opened up a winning lead, but had to be briskly ridden to maintain his lead. DON COSSACK, on the inside and displaying good speed, raced CHANCING into defeat, continued gamely when placed to punishment and was closing again at the end. CHECK SIGNAL, slow to get going, moved up steadily on the outside after leaving the backstretch, but came inside in the last three-sixteenths mile. ONCAVE, cutting the corner turning into the stretch, finished stoutly.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Hialeah Park, March 3.

Dear Al:

As you will notice if you are one of the faithful who gives my selections the once over, I have named Stagehand to take it on the chin tomorrow. Despite the fact that the Maxwell Howard star equaled the track record in that recent outing and gave War Admiral a fever, I'm going to take Sir Damion and Pasteurized, an entry, to get home in front of the pack for the 50 grand. And just to be contrary, I'm going to name Whichcee as the winner in the battle for the $100,000 in the Santa Anita Handicap. I look for Specify and Kayak II to follow the Taylor star to the wire on the West Coast. Too bad that War Admiral and Seabiscuit will be out of action. The big money is still there for the two races but the absence of the leading men, in both cases, has served to take some of the shine off the turf's biggest day of the winter season. I'm not the only one who is glad that the Hialeah meeting closes with one more program. It has been tough sledding hereabouts, particularly for those who have piled in the dough on the favorites. Of course, there would be no racing if choices scored every time, but the public has come to expect a certain percentage to get home in front. Here there have been upsets galore and, while betting has been good, it would have been much better had the favorites clicked more often. It looks as if Whitey Abel has given up on Honey Cloud, the horse that starred hereabouts last fall. Honey Cloud is not in the entries for the Santa Anita Handicap, having shown poor form in most of his trials. I still believe that Abel knocked Honey Cloud out when he worked him over the ice at Bowie last fall. Somebody suggested that Clocker Mike may have gone to the Kentucky breeding farm to get Aneroid's selections for the $100,000 race.

BILL.

First race—Espinaca seems the best suited of the claiming field in the day's opener. If Quintero can give this one a good ride we will cash. U Demon favors the long route and is reported fit. Woodwaac has plenty of speed and will be out there as far as he goes.

Second race—Stoney Brush promises to do a lot of running in this rather open affair and I'm going to string along. Chalmac, with Snider up, should be prominent. Predestined is a better horse than generally rated and could improve suddenly.

Third race—Bogertin, a recent winner, will have Meade in the saddle and the combination should click. Pandorama gets in this with only 102 pounds and is dangerous. Busby gets a good figure and could make a money appearance.

Fourth race—Seed, despite an assignment of 116 pounds, deserves the call in this field. This is another mount for Meade. Trina has a bit of class that should serve in good stead in this field. Early Settler's weight of 122 pounds is against him.

Fifth race—Great Albert showed fine speed in that recent victory. Breaks from the outside in this and I expect another set of brackets. Halcyon Boy and Exarch have demonstrated their racing ability and should be keen contenders.

Sixth race—I have given this race careful thought and have come to the conclusion that the Field-Stewart entry of Sir Damion and Pasteurized can turn bcak Stagehand at these weights. Stagehand picks up weight off that last smashing effort but will be meeting a pair of horses as sharp as he is in this mile and a quarter. Warlaine may surprise by getting into the money circle.

Seventh race—Teddy Weed seems better suited here than in the feature and probably will take this if he goes postward. The same holds true for Xavier. Eagle Pass is said to be fit and likes the route.

Eighth race—Erada, a winner at the meeting, will have Easiest Way and Diavid to handle in the day's finale over the marathon route.

The Brighter Side...

By Damon Runyon

In our treatise on the pathological aspects of the horse player recently, we overlooked a brand new type produced by the modern mechanics of the game. This is the photo-finish type.

RUNYON

At most big tracks nowadays, they have an apparatus that takes pictures of the close finishes. In the old days this was just a matter of human eyesight, with a little guesswork thrown in. They had three different judges to call the horses in the order in which they finished, for the official payoff, one man being assigned to each position.

That is, one man would watch out only for the first horse, or the winner, as it dashed under the wire, another man would peg the second, or place horse, and a third man would keep his eye on the third. It was agreed that the possibility of error on the tight heats was always present under this system, but take them day in and day out, those placing judges did pretty well.

Starts Argument

Indeed, we are the photo-finish type that starts an argument in favor of the old system every time the camera noses us out on a close one. This makes us one of the more common of the photo-finish type. The apparatus used to take the pictures of the finish of a horse race is lightning fast and is accounted practically infallible by nearly everyone but our photo-finish type when we lose one.

We think it is swell when we win a decision per the photo-finish. Then you can hear us remarking that it is amazing what the human mind can think of and that the photo-finish is the greatest step forward that racing has made in generations, but when the picture shows the other horse out-nodding the one we bet on, it is a different story.

Suspect Skullduggery

Our type is then willing to suspect skullduggery in the manipulation of the camera or total blindness on the part of the fellows up there in the judges' stand who examine the picture and decide what's what. We are ready to believe that they heard we bet two slugs on the race and deliberately defrauding us of our dough.

Of course we are just one phase of the photo-finish type. There is the fellow who goes around telling everyone while waiting on the development of the negative that he is dead sure No. 6 got it. He bet on No. 4 which was involved in the tight finish with No. 6, but the reason he calls No. 6 on top is not that he really believes it, but because he is trying to build up resistance to disappointment.

Not Easily Detected

This type is quite common, but it is not as easily detracted as our own. The type develops a certain nonchalance that conceals the burning yearning in his bosom that he is wrong when he says he thinks No. 6 was the winner. He even presents reasons for his pretended belief. He says No. 6 was on the inside and therefore not visible to the naked eye as it passed the wire, but that the photo will show it, all right.

When No. 4 is finally flashed on the board, this type manages to stifle a scream of exultation that is struggling within him for relief and remarks in a surprised tone:

"Well, now isn't that strange? It shows you how you can be deceived by the angle from which you are watching races."

Seeking Encouragement

Then there is the type that goes hustling about asking everybody what they think about it. This type never appears to have an opinion of his own and there appears to be no reason for his hurried general canvass. We suppose he is just looking for a little advance encouragement of his own case.

Still another type is the one that always wants to bet money on his own eyesight against the camera. He eye sees No. 6's whiskers in front at the finish, and during the wait for the official announcement he tears around offering to lay all kinds of prices that he is right. You will observe a regular bourse down on the lawn of a track near the finish line during the wait.

Often Lucky

Of course, this type really has no better eyesight than the other observers, but he is often lucky in calling these finishes just the way the camera sees them. Nowadays, this type frequently stands off a loss on a race by winning a bet on the photo-finish. Then, of course, we also have the praying type, who is the fellow who just sits still, a little pale around the gills, and prays his number will come up.

At some tracks where they have the photo-finish system, they put up the actual picture, greatly enlarged, under the stand after the race, so the doubting Thomases can see it for themselves, and our type just loves those pictures. We can always console ourselves by saying it should at least have been a dead heat. That is when they called our horse the loser. Who is going to bother about pictures if they had the winner?

104 Entries In Basketball Classic Here

Dapper Dans Battle Ft. Hunt Monday in First Night Feature; Other Games Booked

With a record entry list of 104 teams, the greatest array of basketball talent ever assembled in one competition hereabouts, members of the court committee made final plans last night for the grand opening of the District A. A. U. championship tournament, sponsored by The Washington Post, on Monday night at the Eastern High gymnasium, the city's newest and best cage center.

Those in charge worked swiftly, completing the individual entries, making the drawings and scheduling the program for Monday and Wednesday night. With the exceptions of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which was forced to forego the tournament because of examinations in the next two weeks, and the Georgetown Girls, who were ineligible because they numbered instructors among their players, virtually every team of importance in Washington and vicinity is competing.

G. W. Team Banned

The basketball committee found it necessary to refuse the entry of one team, composed of varsity players from George Washington University. It was felt that their appearance in the tournament was not for the best interest of the play. The squad included both men who graduated in February, who have since played with another team and men who still have to face Georgetown University in a scheduled game.

A final checkup on the entries reveals the following line-ups: Unlimited class, 26 teams; 145-pound class, 17 teams; 135-pound class, 12 teams; 120-pound class, 15 teams; 105-pound class, 14 teams; 90-pound class, girls class, 9 teams.

Fort Hunt to Play

A four-game program will mark the opening show on Monday night with the battle of the United Typewriter Dapper Dans and the Fort Hunt CCC unlimited clubs appearing to be the feature. The Dapper Dans have been prominent in the Heurich League, while Fort Hunt downed the National CCC champions this season. In another unlimited game, General Accounting Office and Interior Department will do or die. The card opens with a clash of the Stewart Photographers, defending champs in the 135-pound class, and the Jewish Community Center.

Post Staff Photos.

Above, Curtis Cordell, of the local Y. M. C. A., is shown crossing the finish line of the 50-yard back-stroke event just ahead in front of Ross Vinger, Hagerstown Y. M. C. A., in their dual swimming meet in the "Y" pool last night. The winner's time was 34.8 seconds. Below, John Bender, D. C., Y. M. C. A. (right), throws his arms around Hagerstown's Forrest Hoover, with whom he swam a dead heat in the 50-yard free-style race. Both boys finished in the time of 26.7 seconds. The Washington "Y" won the meet, 37½ to 35½

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

Miami Beach, Fla., March 3.—I certainly didn't come all the way down here to find out whatever possessed Michael Strauss Jacobs to arrange a fantastic fight between Jos Louis and Tony Galento, but finding Uncle Mike reclining peacefully in front of his cabana, idly watching the waves lap the sands of the Roney Plaza beach, there seemed to be no harm in asking.

VIDMER.

"Well, everybody's calling everybody else a bum," Michael grinned, "I figured I wouldn't let 'em call me a bum."

That man does make the most astonishing answers. I thought this one over for a few minutes, repeated it to myself, tried in backwards, and finally had to ask the real ruler of the ring what the hell he meant by that.

"I know it sounds like a ridiculous match," he elucidated, "but a lot of people were howling for it. The N. B. A. said Galento was the No. 1 challenger. They New Jersey fans claimed he was being sidetracked from a championship fight because he was too good. The public got the idea that he might kill Louis, and even some of the sport writers were saying that Galento was the only guy around who might give Louis a real battle. They were all howling for the match, and as soon as I made it they started howling louder that it was crazy."

Self-Defense

Mike paused and looked at the green waves following each other up the shore and vanishing on the spray of white foam on the sands.

"Pretty soon somebody would have started calling me a bum for not making the match," he added completing the explanation of his opening reply.

From there he went on.

"Look," he said in defense of his own position, "I'm a promoter, see? That's my business to give the public what it wants in the way of fights, even if I wouldn't go around the corner to see the same thing myself. Out in California they think this Jack Roper is pretty good. They want to see him fight Louis. So I made the match for them. If they'll pay to see it I'll put it on.

"A lot of people want to see Tony Galento fight Joe. So I made that match too. This fellow Louis is a big attraction. They want to see him fight often. Of course they would rather see him fight somebody who was tough and had a chance to lick him, and if anybody will tell me who that is, I'll make the match tomorrow."

There seemed more than poetry in what he was saying. I ran over the list of heavyweights whose heads are sticking over the horizon at the moment and asked myself a question: What fighter around today would have the best chance with Louis?

Vanishing Contenders

Max Baer? Maybe. He can hit, or at least he could hit. But he has been practically idle for a couple of years. He's been up at the top once and has been knocked off. He already has felt the fury of Louis' fists. No I don't think Baer would have any chance at

Bethesda Bows To American Jayvees, 38-37

Approaching the end of its cage schedule, Bethesda-Chevy Chase quintet tasted a bitter defeat yesterday on the American University court when the junior varsity delegation of that school came from behind to take a 38-37 victory.

The loss occurred after Bethesda had battled out of an 18-7 deficit at half-time and held a 37-34 lead with a scant minute left. Two quick J. V. baskets spelled victory for American.

Dick Barnsley, of Bethesda, was mainly responsible for his team's rapid climb back into the game in the second half.

Shaw University Beats Bisons, 42-32

Raleigh, N. C., March 3.—Howard University, of Washington, D. C., lost to Shaw University, 42-32, in basketball here tonight.

Playing sluggishly in the second half, the Bisons allowed Shaw to overcome a deficit and win in the final minutes of play on baskets by Marable and Brock.

Parker was Howard's outstanding scorer, with 10 points, but Shaw's Brock scored 16 for the game's honors.

Y.M.C.A. Beats Hagerstown Tankmen, 37½-35½

The Washington Y. M. C. A. swimming team built up a huge early lead to defeat the Hagerstown Y. M. C. A., 37½ to 35½, in a dual meet yesterday in the local pool.

One of those swimming rarities—a dead heat—occurred in the 50-yard free-style event between Washington's J. Bender and Forrest Hoover, of Hagerstown.

Army Medical Center Wins, 36-34

Carlisle, Pa., March 3.—Rallying in the final minutes the strong Army Medical Center basketball team nosed out the Medicos of Carlisle Barracks here tonight to chalk up a 36-to-34 triumph for the thirty-eighth win of the season. The game here was the first of a two-game series between the two Army Medical quintets.

The Carlisle Medicos held a substantial lead at the end of the first half with Lamonica and Hoffer setting a fast pace, but after playing on even terms Elliott found the basket in the final frame and in the last minute of the tiff snagged the winning points.

Old Dominion Medical Five Beats Y, 37-30

Medical College of Virginia, which meets American University cagemen today on the Eagle floor, began its local invasion yesterday by stopping Y. M. C. A. basketers, 37-30, on the Central Branch "Y" court.

Though gamely pushing their Virginia rivals throughout the game, Y. M. C. A.'s forces were off in their shooting and were unable to get within winning range in the final minutes. At halftime, Medical led, 16-10.

Madden, guard of the local five, turned in five field goals for the best individual point performance of the Y. M. C. A., but his effort was shadowed by Stoneburner, of the winners. The latter recorded one more field goal and a foul toss for 13 points. Vacarelli and Deddrick were also active in the shooting department for Medical, scoring 8 and 9 points, respectively.

D.C. Friends Five Bows to Baltimore

Baltimore Friends School took the measure of the local Friends basketball team yesterday on the Wisconsin avenue court, 26-24, after leading throughout most of the game. The Baltimore five held a 9-5 lead after one half and managed to tally enough to hold a 2-point margin at the end.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

We're telling Senator Borah that 6,000 planes aren't such a much. We'd need another thousand to make a B flying picture in Hollywood.

Germany has 12,000 planes; Russia has that many and the rest of the nations are stringing along. We were in England last summer where the flying fields are so close together you've got to have wings on your shoulders to take a walk.

Planes are like boxing gloves. It all depends on who's in 'em.

Army Boxers Face Terps At Coliseum

Maryland Underdog in Match Which Will Decide Eastern Champ

The college boxing championship of the East will be decided tonight at Ritchie Coliseum, where the University of Maryland's pillow-pushers Southern Conference champions—play host to West Point's undefeated sharpshooters in a match scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Maryland, which returned from Columbia, S. C., last week with its second conference crown, will step into the duelling pit in the role of underdog, in as much as it will forfeit in the heavyweight class, but the Terps have no idea of surrendering without a fight. Coach Heine Miller confidently believes his southpaws will hit too hard and too often for the Cadets, and will topple Army for the first time this season.

The Old Liners will present three individual champions tonight in the persons of Ben Alperstein, lightweight; Frank Cronin, junior middleweight, and Newton Cox, middleweight. It will be the final collegiate appearance of Alperstein and Cronin, who are scheduled to graduate in June, but Cox, a junior, will be back for another year of the sport. Alperstein also is a national champion, having won the featherweight crown in 1937, successfully defending it last year. All three are scheduled to go to the nationals again this year.

Of the three, Cronin's success this year was the most surprising, for the good-natured Irishman hadn't had a glove on until he became a candidate for the team this year. An orthodox fighter, he assumed a southpaw stance for ringwork and, consequently, carries a devastating punch in either glove. Cronin has his work cut out for him tonight, however, for his prospective opponent, Dick Negley, is undefeated in five bouts.

Sabin and Bowden Clash in Finals

New York, March 3 (AP).—Frank Bowden, veteran New York board court specialist, beat Chauncey D. Steele, jr., another former Columbia University star, 6—1, 5—7, 6—2, 7—5, today to reach the final round of men's singles in the national indoor tennis championships for the third straight year.

Bowden tomorrow will face top-seeded Wayne Sabin, Davis Cup candidate from Portland, Ore., in the final.

Commissioners Beat Atchison-Keller, 32-29

"Wee Willie" Fellner's field goal in the last few seconds of play last night gave the Commissioners a 30-to-29 victory over Atchison-Keller in a Southeast Community Center Basketball League contest. Merchant, with five double pointers, also starred for the winners. Wilson Earman, from Falls Church, league-leading scorer, tallied 9 points.

Play Is Extended

Hoping to wind up its schedule before the C. C. Department's basketball tournament on March 18, the Roosevelt Community Center will operate two additional nights this week, tonight and tomorrow night.

Remon Re-elected President Of Cup Regatta Association

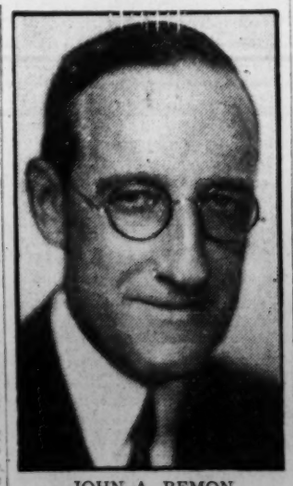
Sextion, Fleming Also Returned to Office; '39 Plans Under Way

Encumbent executive officers of the President's Cup Regatta Association received an unanimous vote of confidence yesterday as they were re-elected at the group's annual meeting at the Willard Hotel.

Showing their gratitude for the competent manner in which the officers handled the President's Cup Regatta last summer, members renamed John A. Remon, president; R. Lyman Sexton, vice president, and Robert V. Fleming, secretary-treasurer.

Corinthian Yacht Club selected Edward C. Baltz and Dr. G. Bache Gill for positions on the board of directors. Thomas E. Lodge and Col. R. S. Thomas were designated to the board by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Immediately after the meeting the board of directors convened to organize for the year and to formulate and consider plans for the 1939 President's Cup Regatta. At the board meeting, H. P. Somerville was elected executive secretary of the association and member of the board, and William C. Shelton and L. Gordon Leech were electde to their body by the directors, completing the board of directors for 1939.



JOHN A. REMON

The board accepted with regret the resignation of one of its last year's members, Admiral H. G. Hamlet, who has left the city. Various members paid him tribute for his work in behalf of the association for the past five years.

Hoyas Choice To Beat Pitt, Win Cage Title

Ripley to Start Same Line-up That Beat Penn State

By Jack Munhall.

Georgetown University's courtmen will be 5-3 favorites to skin Pitt's Panther at Tech gym tonight and add the Eastern Basketball Conference championship to an undefeated grid season and Johnny Burke's intercollegiate golf title for completion of one of the most successful sports year in the school's long and brilliant athletic history.

This contest, scheduled for 8:30 o'clock, features a four-game collegiate basketball card for the day. American University ends a gratifying season by playing host to Virginia Medical College at 8:15, while Catholic University finishes its campaign at Baltimore University and George Washington travels to New York for a crack at powerful St. John's of Brooklyn.

A Georgetown victory over Pitt's improved Panthers would climax one of the most hectic conference races in years. At present, with not more than two games remaining for each team, three have a mathematical chance to tie Georgetown for the crown and force a playoff. Penn State, beaten by the Hoyas Wednesday. Carnegie Tech and Temple are tied for second with four triumphs and four losses, a game and a half behind Georgetown.

Deciding Factor

Satisfied with his team's top-flight performance against strong Penn State, Coach Ripley tonight will rely on the same line-up with Ed Kurtyka and Capt. Joe Murphy, at forwards; big Francis (Reds) Daly, the former Tech star who has filled in so capably for Johnny McGowan, at center and Irving Rizzi and Johnny Schmitt, at guards.

Pitt will counter with a team composed entirely of sophomores, featuring Eddie Stroloski and Larry Paffrath, its sensational scoring twins. Paffrath and Stroloski, who have rolled up 151 and 141 points respectively this season, will be flanked by Sammy Milanovich at center and George Kocheran and Mel Port, guards.

Frosh Quint in Action

A preliminary between Georgetown's freshmen and Bolling Field, a formidable sandlot five, will precede the game, starting at 7 p. m.

George Washington's Colonials will be underdogs in their game with St. John's, rated second only to Long Island in the metropolitan New York area. Boasting 15 victories in 17 games, including Colorado, Northwestern, Army, Manhattan and Fordham, St. John's is bidding strongly for a berth in the national intercollegiate tournament which has been promised it for triumphs over G. W. and St. Francis, next week's foe.

Three Colonial players will be returning to the scene of their high school days. George Garber, sharpshooting forward, Reds Auerbach, G. W.'s "find" of the season, and Sid Silkowitz all are products of N. Y. high schools and will be facing in St. John's some of their former rivals.

This game promises to be another thriller in a series which has developed into one of George Washington's closest, most colorful rivalries. Though six of their previous meetings have been decided by 3 points or less, and while the Colonials have won the last two years, St. John's holds a 4-3 edge in all games played.

Strong G. U. Squad In I. C. 4-A Meet

Georgetown's mile relay team which last week broke a record in the nonconference division of the Southern Conference championships and a freshman medley quartet which helped the school win the yearling title in the same meet are entered in the I. C. 4-A games at New York tonight.

The varsity team, victorious in five meets this season, is composed of John Motzenbecker, Al Frey, Vinnie Braun and Mort Alnwick. Alnwick also is entered in the 60-yard dash.

The freshman quartet includes Lyden, Tucknett, Williams and Carnevale. In addition, Lyden will compete in the half-mile run, Williams in the 220 dash, and Carnevale in the mile.

G. U. Will Start Baseball Monday

Coach Joe Judge will issue the first call for Georgetown University varsity baseball candidates on Monday in the Ryan gym.

Though the former Nationals' star lost several valuable players by graduation, he exepects another high-grade team. From last year's nine which won 12 and lost 4, Judge will especially miss Pitcher Mike Petroskey and First Baseman Harry Bassin. The return of regulars Capt. Bill Reynolds, Johnny Schmitt, the basketball star; Stan Blaszek, Joe Moran and Joe Mellendeck, plus other letter winners is expected to offset that loss.

Because reserve material is not plentiful, Judge plans to watch with interest several promising players coming up from the Freshman team.

St. John's, Gonzaga Clash

Two Catholic Rivals Meet Third Time

'Rubber' Game Gets Under at 3 O'Clock At Tech Gym; 5,000 Expected at Contest

Whether Gonzaga's Purple basketers were improved that much or carrying a horseshoe when they smote down St. John's Prep in their last meeting will be definitely decided today when the third and "rubber" match between the Catholic clubs takes place at Tech gymnasium at 3 p. m.

No less than 5,000 spectators jammed the Tech auditorium for the previous encounters, and a like number is expected to attend this afternoon's clash.

As in both the other games, St. John's will be favored because of its record of 14 victories in 17 starts It has not taken part in actual competition since the second meeting with Gonzaga more than a week ago, but the time has been spent profitably in shooting drills and scrimmages.

Gonzaga's latest start hardly hoists the hopes of supporters, the Purple having caved in before Anacostia High's midget five to lose decisively Thursday night. Coach Orrell Mitchell, pointing for the man-to-man defense of his perennial opponent, took the zone defense of Anacostia a little too lightly, so that effort can be thrown out.

The initial match this season was a topheavy St. John's victory, but last Thursday Gonzaga reversed itself and bit off a 1-point victory. Considering the bitter rivalry between the teams, today's fray can go either way.

all. . . Lou Nova? He's pretty young. Not in years, of course, for he's a week or so older than Louis, but young in experience. He might be better later on. Right now he wouldn't stand a chance. . . Schmeling? Not after that last beating he took from Louis. That was enough to answer the question conclusively. . . Then who? Jacobs must have been going through the same mental gymnastics, for he answered the question himself.

"You know there's one thing about Galento. He's tough," he murmured. "He's never been knocked down. A lot of things might happen when he's in the ring. Suppose Louis broke a hand on his thick head? Suppose he did land one of those wild lefts of his? Those are the things the people will be thinking about when they go to see the fight. Say, this is funny; everybody laughed when I made the match but I got over $1,000 worth of personal orders for tickets before the end of the day. Maybe they don't think it's going to be good, but that's one fight they don't want to miss."

Clemson, conqueror of top-seeded Wake Forest last night, started slowly against Davidson and trailed throughout the first half until a pair of free throws tied the count at 24-all at the midway mark.

Coming back after the rest period, Clemson opened an all-court scoring attack that netted 10 points before Davidson could make a point. That rally put the game on ice for Clemson, as Davidson was unable to threaten the lead thereafter.

ware, Randolph-Macon, Washington College and Wake Forest.

The high and prep schools entered from the District include Eastern, Roosevelt, Central, Tech, Anacostia, Wilson, St. John's and Gonzaga. They will compete against invaders from Washington-Lee, Sherwood, Hyattsville, Bel Air, Episcopal and St. Thomas More.

Episcopal, ever a standout on the boards, is a strong favorite to capture the team championship.

Three outstanding Eastern clubs, Penn, Washington Track and Field and Maryland Fifth Regiment Armory, will vie in the collegiate section.

Ten champions, crowned in the Southern Conference meet last week, will be on hand, including Maryland's Jim Kehoe and Navy's captain, Barney Oldfield, both of whom set 880 records in the Southern Conference championships, Kehoe in the conference division and Oldfield in the nonconference.

Mason Chromister, of Maryland

The 880 also will throw together such other stars as Mason Chronister, of Maryland, Capt. Hal Harvey, of Washington and Lee, and Capt. McChesney Goodall, of Virginia. The field for this event will be completed by C. U.'s Johnny Corbett and Villanova's Tom McCabe.

Pitt Coaching Shakeup Hinted as Fox Quits

Jock Sutherland Reported Thinking Of Quitting Staff

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 3.—Once-powerful Pitt has lost another member of its coaching staff and the question heard 'round the campus today was: "Who's next?"

Alex Fox, one of the smallest and one of the best of many good guards who played football at Pitt, is the fourth member of Coach John Bain Sutherland's teaching staff to leave the university since the close of the 1938 campaign.

Rumors immediately got into the wind that the next to leave might be Sutherland himself, but there was no one who professed to know anything definite about the situation. Sutherland repeatedly denied similar reports, but expressed discouragement over next season's prospects.

The Sun-Telegraph said there was an unconfirmed report that Sutherland "received and is considering an offer to take over the head coaching post at Mississippi State College." To which Sutherland replied: "There's hardly anything to that."

Whatever happens, any prospect that existed at Pitt for a traditionally strong eleven next season seemed to be dimming.

Before him, End Coach Eddie Schultz departed; then Josh Williams, backfield mentor, and Mike Milligan, freshman coach, both of whom took positions with the University of Florida.

So far Sutherland has failed to set a definite date for the opening of spring practice. Some sources said that might be the lack of eligible players, although a check-up disclosed 47 gridders on the eligible list.

More than a score of prospects are ineligible because of classroom difficulties. Among them are five gridiron 'varsity holdovers.' Larry Peace, of Bradford, the best fullback prospect, and Quarterback Billy Goldberg, sophomore brother of the famed Marshall Goldberg, both are ineligible for spring practice.

Who will fill the assistant coaching vacancies remains to be decided. Only Frank Souchak, one-time star Pitt end—the successor of Schultz—has been appointed. Don Hensley, center coach; Mike Nicksic, backfield coach, and John Michelosen, coach of the quarterbacks, remain from last fall's staff.

JOCK SUTHERLAND

Spokane Five Here; May Play Tonight

Players of the Athletic Round Table Club, of Spokane, Wash., yesterday reported here for their three-game intersectional basketball series scheduled for Heurich gymnasium tonight, tomorrow afternoon and Monday night.

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock the Pacific Coast stars will be featured against either Federal Bureau of Investigation or Delaware & Hudson, it is reported.

Apprised that they had been ruled ineligible to compete against registered A. A. U clubs here due to their recent participation in the American Basketball Corporation's Tournament in Atlanta, Ga., Capt. Len Yandle said:

"No objection whatsoever was voiced on the Pacific Coast when we announced our intention of entering the American Basketball Corporation's competition in Atlanta and we were totally unprepared for the action that has been taken here. We have appeared in 15 States and this is the first time our eligibility has ever been questioned."

President Joe Aronoff, of the District Amateur Athletic Union, late last night had dispatched two telegrams which are expected to gain the local body's sanction for the three-game intersectional basketball series.

In the event the games are approved by the District A. A. U. United Typewriter-Dapper Dan clubmen are to oppose the Pacific Coast stars at Heurich Gymnasium tonight at 8:30 o'clock; Federal Bureau of Investigation will be met tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Delaware and Hudson Monday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Eastern High Will Compete In 1 Tourney

Both the post-season cage tournaments in which it has long been a powerful threat will be passed up this year by Eastern High, public school champion, it was revealed yesterday by Principal Charles Hart, of the Lincoln Park school.

The White Tide's post-season activity out of town will be limited to the Duke University Tournament, Hart said, the decision having been reached several days ago.

For the past four years Eastern has taken part in the Glen Falls, N. Y., tournament, winning twice and each time providing other schoolboy fives with some of their stiffest opposition. Another tourney in which Eastern has been a regular entry is that at Washington and Lee University, in Lexington, Va. This also will be passed up.

It will be the first year for the Duke U. scrap in Durham, N. C. Eastern's invitation was considered a singular honor by school heads in that only the best clubs in each State are selected to participate. Representatives from eight Southern States will perform in the two-day tourney, beginning on March 17.

At the same time that Eastern announced the decision to pass by its former stomping grounds, St. John's Prep, city titlist last year, received and accepted a bid to the Washington and Lee affair. This one begins this coming Wednesday and lasts through Friday. The Johnnies won only their initial game last year. Another big meet from which the Johnnies have received overtures is the Eastern Catholic to be staged in Newport, R. I., preceding the National Catholic in Chicago later on.

Council Nominates 51 Sports Heroes

Christy Walsh, the sports editor of the New York World's Fair, announces that exactly 51 prominent athletic figures have been nominated by the World's Fair Sports Council as deserving the Golden Laurel, symbolic of the outstanding person in sport . . . In the lead are Johnny Vander Meer, Davey O'Brien and Don Budge . . . followed by Ralph Guldahl, Cunningham, Lash, Joe McCarthy, Joe Louis, Joe Burke (rowing), Sid Luckman, Georgia Coleman, Katharine Rawls Thompson, Howard Jones, Jimmy Foxx, and of all people, Wrong-Way Corrigan . . . Connie Mack, by the way, will be one of the instructors at the fair's court of sport, and each person who attends a sports lecture will be given a card . . . If he or she gets the full set of lecture cards, a diploma will be presented—probably entitling the owner to applaud at ball games . . . Babe Ruth's $80,000 a year contract will be among the many sports curiosities on display at the fair . . . Eleanor Holm in a zebra swim suit, would draw better.

Uncle Samivel's income tax men are nosing through the check stubs of one of the greatest athletes of them all, and will soon announce the sad news . . . wonder if Sam Riddle had War Admiral's eventual value as a stud horse in mind when he yanked him out of the Widener Cup race? . . . The son of Man o' War would not have been the favorite, for the first time since he won the Kentucky Derby in May of 1937.

Prep School Soccer Title To St. Alban's

Landon's 2-1 Victory Over Georgetown Prep Gives Saints Crown

Landon School's 2-1 victory over Georgetown Prep yesterday at Bethesda gave the championship of the Private School Soccer League to St. Alban's, Georgtown having been the only team with a chance to equal St. Alban's record.

Georgetown had the assistance of the wind in first quarter but failed to score, holding the ball too long when in front of the Landon goal. On changing goals, Landon scored early, per Johnson, who returned a clearance by Becker into an empty goal. Near the interval Becker saved a penalty kick.

Against the wind at the start of the second half, Landon again held off the visitors, and then scored a second goal from a melee in front of Becker. From the center, good passing by Georgetown forwards resulted in Tobin scoring after beating the backs, but in spite of desperate efforts by Georgetown to equalize in the closing minutes, Landon preserved its lead.

It was the most thrilling game early per Johnson, who returned played of the season.

Schoolboy Hockey Clash Here Tonight

In what shapes up as the best hockey match offered Washington fans thus far, Gilman School and Forest Park High School, Maryland's two smartest schoolboy puck-chasing aggregations, will match wits and shots tonight at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace. The opening face-off is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Gilman, State champion this year, enters the fray a slight choice over its smooth-functioning rival, but will have to maintain a blistering pace to outscore the foe. Forest Park finished second in the championship grind this season, after nosing out Gilman last year for the coveted honor.

Tonight's match will feature a duel between Don Loeschke, Forest Park's crack goalie, and Charley Plitt, Gilman's sensational center and high scorer of the schoolboy circuit. Plitt, who scored 38 goals and assists to capture top honors, will have able assistance from George Westerlind and Ty Campbell, who finished second and third, respectively, in puck-pocketing.

Two Skeet Clubs In 2-Day Match

Pin Round-up

Country Club Golf League

Fred Moore, of Kenwood No. 1, turned in a 133 game, and Charley Barnard, Beaver Dam No. 1, registered 354 for high set. Team game honors went to Indian Spring No. 1 with 582, and Beaver Dam No. 1 took the set prize with 1,633. Beaver Dam, incidentally, gained on Manor Nos. 1 and 2, first and second in the league, respectively, whose sets last night were postponed.

Navy Yard League

Jilson Fitzwater, of F. and A. No. 1, tied the third high game of the season with a 159 effort. George Grimes, of Gun Shop, turned in the best set—380. Sight No. 1 registered a 600 game, and Torpedo Tube No. 1 took set laurels with 1,733. C and R. took all three from Breach Mechanism, in the night's biggest upset.

Silver Spring Independent League

A record individual game in the league was rolled by "Pop" Dickinson as Godfrey's Service Station took the odd game from Phi Lambda. Dickinson topped 170 pins. The third game was won by Tastee Diners, Mrs. Kay's and Wise Brothers, over Southern Oxygen, Picklick and Sherer's, respectively. Jack White's 369 set paced Sanford's to a three-game sweep over Indian Spring Service Station.

Real Estate League

Jim Walker's 157 game was the highest game rolled at Chevy Chase Alley, as was his set of 408. District Title took both team set and game, 1,783 and 617.

Tomorrow he will be running that additional eighth of a mile, and that's the furlong he likes best. True, he will be carrying top weight of 126 pounds, three more than he toted in the McLennan, but his famous trainer, Earle Sande, is positive that won't bother him. President Jibes At Sen. Glass In Money Attack

Charleston, S. C., March 3 (AP).—Opposition by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, to continuation of the Administration's broad monetary powers brought a response from President Roosevelt today that reminded observers of the recent Roosevelt-Glass clash over the Virginia judge appointment.

In that controversy the Chief Executive asserted the custom of individual Senators turning back Presidential nominations by declaring them "personally objectionable" but not on grounds of fitness was tantamount to assuming a constitutional power vested in the President.

When asked to comment on Glass' opposition to extending the monetary powers, the President today smiled and replied he had better follow the Constitution which he said provided that no member of the Senate shall be questioned for any remark made in the Senate.

He would not elaborate.

Meeting of 3,000 Gives Bund Rally Tolerant Reply

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, March 3.—More than 3,000 New Yorkers of varied racial and religious stocks crowded Carnegie Hall tonight to give this city's tolerant answer to the Madison Square Garden rally held on February 20 by the German-American bund.

The meeting, sponsored by the Council Against Intolerance in America, and presided over by George Gordan Battle, brought messages of support from Gov. Lehman and District Attorney Dewey.

The speakers included Representative Bruce Barton, Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti and several citizens of prominence in private affairs. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia received an ovation when he arrived.

Steamer Reported Aground Off China

Manila (Saturday), March 4 (AP).—The Naval Radio Station at Cavite received a message today from a station at Peking, China, saying it had picked up an SOS from the steamer Gemlock.

The Gemlock, the radio station said, reported she was aground on rocks and that members of the crew were taking to lifeboats. She gave her position as latitude 38.56, longitude 121.07, which would place her in the northern end of the Yellow Sea.

The Gemlock is not listed in Lloyd's register.

Attorney Denies Conspiracy Charge Involving Manton

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, March 3.—George M. Spector, insurance broker, pleaded not guilty in Federal District Court today to the indictment charging him and Martin T. Manton, resigned senior judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals, with conspiracy to defraud the Government. Judge John C. Knox held him in $17,500 bail.

Manton, a patient at St. Vincent's Hospital, where he underwent a glandular operation today, will not be arraigned until his recovery. Hospital authorities said he had "gone through the operation very nicely."

Business Rise Now Beginning Survey Finds

Pause Giving Way to Mild Upturn, Dun & Bradsteet Say

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 3.—The past week brought signs that the pause in business activity was giving way to a mild upturn, said Dun & Bradstreet today in their weekly trade review.

"Business sentiment was more optimistic on the whole," the summary commented, "and both producers and wholesalers found that this better feeling was quickly translated into orders.

"Retail trade perked up under the impetus of a widening demand for automobiles and spring apparel. As March opened comparisons with the same period of last year revealed a better balance in inventories, a slightly smaller volume of sales.

"As buying of women's apparel began to expand most department and specialty stores were able to show larger sales totals than in the preceding week. Volume for all stores in the country was estimated 2 to 3 per cent higher than in the previous week but 1 to 4 per cent lower than last year.

Wholesale Markets

"Still extremely sensitive to every flurry in retail trade, wholesale markets felt almost immediately the improvement in consumer buying.

"Orders for immediate delivery were larger, but a moderate increase in future orders attracted most attention among sellers.

"Wholesalers of apparel, accessories and house furnishings reported a favorable volume of sales during the week; grocery volume slipped back somewhat, however, and tended to weaken the average comparison with 1938.

"The estimated margin of gain over last year narrowed to 4 to 12 per cent; a week ago it was put at 8 to 14 per cent."

Smith, Barney & Co. Issue Statement

Smith, Barney & Co., members of the New York and other Stock Exchanges, with a branch office here, issued the following statement yesterday:

"The Securities and Exchange Commission has instituted a proceeding naming Junius A. Richards, a partner in this firm, and charging that he had reason to believe that in sales made through him as a broker on the New York Curb Exchange for a foreign client of 4800 shares of Simplicity Patterns Co., Inc., there was a violation of the provisions of the Securities and Exchange act relating to manipulation.

"Neither Smith, Barney & Co. nor any of its partners owns, or, during the period in question, has owned directly or indirectly, any shares of Simplicity Patterns Co. Inc., nor during that period has any such stock been held, purchased or sold by the firm or any partner for any other client. Neither the firm nor any of its partners has ever had any options of any kind on the stock of this company.

"Mr. Richards will file his answer to the Securities and Exchange Commission's citation within a day or two."

Cont. American Life Sets Business Records

Continental American Life Insurance Co. of Wilmington, Del., said yesterday that its new business for 1938 was greater than for any previous year in its history, according to Charles I. Haycraft, manager of the local office in the Southern Building.

Final figures show that new life insurance issued and paid for during 1938 amounted to 20 per cent more than the 1937 figure, and 3 per cent more than the highest year since the company was founded 31 years ago.

New high records were established for the year for applied-for business, issued business, paid-for business, and account of new premiums paid. In December business alone, the company was 68 per cent ahead of December, 1937.

Cotton Futures Up With Buying From Overseas

New York, March 3 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 3 to 5 points higher today as foreign interests bought May and July contracts and trade price-fixing firmed up old crop positions. From time to time during the session there were short-lived flurries of southern selling and local profit-taking, but buyers quickly absorbed offerings.

May was particularly strong, climbing to 8.31 the highest since January 4 last. March registered a 5-point gain. Only 12 delivery notices were issued against the spot contract, and they were quickly absorbed.

Cottonseed Oil

New seasonal highs in the September and October cottonseed oil options were marked up today in the wake of higher prices for finished oil products and better levels in lard. Dominating the trade was persistent buying through houses with Southern and Western wire connections. Sales totaled 234 lots; March, 7.21; May, 7.30; July, 7.40; September, 7.48; October, 7.48. (†Bid). Crude oil sold in the Southeast and Valley at 6¼ cents while Texas was quoted 5¾ cents bid.

Bowery Bank Cuts Mortgage Loan Rate

New York, March 3 (AP).—Henry Bruere, president of Bowery Savings Bank, announced today reduction of interest rate from the locally prevailing maximum of 5 per cent to 4¼ per cent on selected first mortgage loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

The bank will also help facilitate refinancing at rates of "not less than 4¼ per cent" interest for mortgagors who now have uninsured mortgages on one to four-family homes, provided refinancing is possible under the terms of the FHA act, he said. The bank is prepared to invest $10,000,000 during 1939 to encourage the building and purchase of new homes, he said.

Wheat Prices Hold Firm In Dull Day

Government Increases Pacific Flour Subsidy 10 Cents a Barrel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 3.—Wheat prices wavered within a narrow range of only ⅜ cent today, but closed a shade higher, reflecting strength in foreign grain markets and in securities in the East as well as indications of slightly improved international demand.

Trading was dull most of the session, with purchases credited to shippers, millers and seaboard houses absorbing quiet selling based on forecast of further moisture in the winter wheat belt. Just before the close the Government announced an increase of 10 cents a barrel in the export flour subsidy on shipments from the Pacific Coast to China and Hongkong.

Most of the underlying market support, traders said, apparently came from the domestic commercial trade with buying in connection with the movement and processing of wheat and sale of flour bread enough to absorb what small selling appears.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ higher compared with yesterday, May and July, 69@68⅞. Corn was unchanged to ⅛ up; May, 14⅜; July, 50⅝. Oats unchanged to ⅛ higher. Rye, ⅛ up. Lard, 12 to 15 higher.

Better Domestic Outlook and New Pope's Influence as a Peacemaker Spur Prices To Active Advance With Many New Highs

New York, March 3.—Intensification of the campaign to eliminate reckless Government spending—an enhancement of the domestic outlook, and election of a new Pope, whose influence is expected to be a powerful one in attaining long-sought international peace, acted as stimulants to security markets today.

Almost 10 per cent of stocks included in transactions on the leading exchange were at new highs for 1939 or longer; closing big board prices were at the best levels since January 10 with merchandising and power groups at new tops; bonds marched ahead in all divisions with only three of the Treasury issues failing to establish peak quotations; fluctuations in foreign exchange rates were noticably narrower, interpreted as indicating some relaxation in European tension.

The Stock Exchange enjoyed the rare treat—since January 1 at least—of a million-share day. Turnover in the first hour totaled 280,000 shares. The pace slowed down until 2 o'clock when additional support developed on the long side and, to the accompaniment of a volume of 275,000 shares in the last hour, final quotations were close to the best of the day in virtually all departments.

Steels, Motors, Coppers

Steels, motors, coppers and the Blue-Chip Manufacturing descriptions did particularly well. Bethlehem added 1¾ points following overnight publication of its annual report and appearance of estimates that steel production will continue to gain moderately through March and April. Steel common did almost as well.

Motors attracted purchasers on announcement of a small increase in assemblies accompanied by comment that the low point of first quarter output by the industry has been passed. Chrysler was among the active leaders of the day with a rise of 2⅜ points.

Caterpillar Tractor and International Harvester hit a new 1939 tops with gains of more than a point each. Deere & Co., also at a new high, and Case, with a gain of a point, contributed to the general strength of the farm implement division. American Telephone continued its excursions into new high ground and others establishing new peaks for the year included General Tire & Rubber, Homestake Mining, Greyhound, Kelsey Hayes B, National Dairy, Philip Morris, International Business Machines and U. S. Rubber preferred.

U. S. Rubber

The latter's report, announced this morning, reflects consolidation and absorption of subsidiaries for the first time and discloses a clearer picture of the financial strength of the company and its progress under the Davis regime. Philip Morris benefited from publication of unofficial estimates that volume and possibly profits are running at record levels. International Harvester, while suffering from the business letdown last year, is in the news with aggressive improvement and expansion plans.

Union Pacific sold up a point exdividend, Johns-Manville firmed a point, although the overnight statement of Lewis H. Brown, president, in connection with the annual report, emphasized the increasing difficulties of corporations in making profits due to higher taxes, etc. Louisville & Nashville, Union Carbide, U. S. Gypsum, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Atchison, Anaconia, Western Electric and a number of others were a point or more up at closing time.

Of the 806 listed stocks included in sales for the day, 80 were at new highs, many for two years, and only 9 new lows were recorded. The composite of the 100 key stocks closed with an advance of 0.53 point, the last quotation of 106.98 comparing with the day's high of 107.08.

Bonds Continue Advance

Listed bonds continued their advance today, with dozens of speculative issues pushing into new high ground for the year, while a number of high-grade investment bonds attained best levels in history. The buying was persistent in all departments, and holders were reluctant to sell. In this situation gains ranged from small fractions in best-grade bonds to 3 and 4 points in active speculative issues. The turnover was $8,370,000.

Long and intermediate maturities of Treasury bonds moved up from 1/32 to 18/32 point, and as they were already at top figures meant that all but three issues moved into fresh high territory. The guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home corporations were equally good. Telephone debentures were quiet, but best rated power and light, railroad and industrial bonds showed small gains.

Among speculative corporate liens railroad issues easily were favorites. Many secondary liens advanced 1 to 2 points and a few were marked up even more effectively. Borderline and default rail bonds likewise improved. Local traction bonds did well, with Interborough and Manhattan Railway issues in better request than B. M. T. 4½s. Holding company and convertible bonds attained higher levels, and such special groups as the communications issues, international telephone and amusement bonds also advanced.

In the foreign division Latin-American dollar bonds were in demand, Brazilians outstripping others because of the current debt settlement talks in Washington. European default bonds also reflected some inquiry. The Italian, Japanese and Polish groups were firm. Highest rated foreigns of Australian, Canadian and Scandinavian origin held to former levels.

Conditions

An extensive area of low pressure is centered over Iceland, Reykjavik, 28.97 inches. A trough extends from this center southeastward across the provinces of Quebec, the lakes region, and thence northwestward to the Pacific Northwest, with centers at Valentine, Nebr., 29.64 inches, and Miscoula, Mont., 29.86 inches. The pressure is generally low over the southern and central Rocky Mountain region and western Texas, Wink, Tex., 29.56 inches, and Las Vegas, Nev., 29.56 inches. Pressure is also low over Alaska, 29.60 inches at Nome. The Atlantic seaboard region is covered by a slowly moving and extensive high-pressure area with central pressure 30.60 inches at Atlantic City. Another center of high pressure is located over the province of Alberta, McMurray, 30.42 inches. Precipitation has occurred over the middle and northern sections west of the Rocky Mountains and light snow is now falling over the Dakotas and Montana. Another rain area is developing over Louisiana and eastern Texas. Temperatures have risen over the southern Plains and West Gulf States and generally east of the Mississippi River, while falling temperatures prevail from the upper lake region and the middle Rocky Mountain States westward to the Pacific. The weather is becoming much colder from Alberta and Montana eastward across the Dakotas and western Ontario.

Bids and Proposals

Procurement Division, Public Buildings Branch, Washington, D. C., February 23, 1939—Sealed proposals in duplicate will be publicly opened in this office at 1 p. m., MARCH 31, 1939, for the construction (except elevator) of High Voltage Laboratory at the National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C. Upon application, two sets of drawings and specifications will be supplied free to each general contractor interested in submitting a proposal. The above drawings and specifications MUST be returned to this office. Contractors requiring additional sets may obtain them by purchase from this office at a cost of $10 per set, which will not be returned. Checks offered as payment for drawings and specifications must be made payable to the order of the Treasurer, U. S. Drawings and specifications will not be furnished to contractors who have consistently failed to submit proposals. One set upon request, and when considered in the interests of the Government, will be furnished, in the discretion of the assistant director, to builders' exchanges, chambers of commerce or other organizations who will guarantee to make them available for any sub-contractor or material firm interested, and to quantity surveyors, but this privilege will be withdrawn if the sets are not returned after they have accomplished their purpose. W. E. REYNOLDS, Assistant Director of Procurement, Public Buildings Branch. 28.2.4

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

BY oblique action—whether calculated on or not—the Office of Education, Interior Department, has arrived at some important data on America's potential airmen in the event of war.

That the office was looking for any material bearing on national defense would probably be forthwith denied. The survey of potential airmen in the high schools and colleges was made, in the official version, to see whether education is keeping pace with progress in the field of aviation. It is not keeping pace, says the office. And this conclusion has no doubt been considered by national defense experts as well as the authorities on vocational training.

The statistics shape up like this: Only 130 high schools and 109 colleges and universities have aviation courses; in these 43,000 students are enrolled; although more than 1,000 schools have some equipment for aviation activity, only 200 use airplane engines for study purposes and less than 100 actually have airplanes. Eight hundred students hold CAA licenses for flying; approximately 2,500 college students are enrolled in aviation clubs.

"The fact that so many young people are interested in aviation, an interest built up by airplane contests, newspaper accounts of aviation's accomplishments, magazine articles, motion pictures, air travel and other developments in this field, clearly indicates to educators that here is a problem which they must solve," says the office.

There is a chance that before the national defense problem is over the Government will solve it for the educators. Hitler led the way in that field.

AMONG problems recently discussed by the new Council of Personnel Administration were recommendations by the Civil Service Commission designed to establish a uniform and competitive promotion procedure throughout the entire service; the establishment of a standard of budget requirements for the newly created divisions of personnel supervision and management in the agencies and departments, and means by which non-member agencies with a comprehensive personnel program and regularly constituted directors of personnel may participate in the council's deliberations. The council is still some ways from definite and final decisions on any matters . . . The personnel of the council's executive committee, is E. R. Ballinger, Treasury, representative of the 10 executive departments; G. Henderson Sweet, Veterans' Administration, representative of the 13 independent establishments and agencies; Virgil L. Almond, representative of the Budget Bureau, and Ismar Baruch, representative, Civil Service Commission.

WANTED of the Senate Appropriations Committee: The inclusion on the staff of the Library of Congress of a full-time classifier to be appointed by the librarian under acceptance by the Civil Service Commission. There is a need for general reclassification in the library where, amazingly, the salary level is $85,000 below the level of other agencies in Washington. The Civil Service Commission does not have the personnel necessary to perform this work at the library but, withal, it recognizes the need for reclassification there.

NOTES: The Agriculture Chorus steps out again tonight with "A Nightmare After the Opera," this time professionally at the Willard Hotel ballroom. It begins at 8 o'clock . . . The apportionment—States in excess: Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Colorado, Missouri, Washington, Kansas, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Vermont, Montana, Rhode Island, Iowa, Nebraska, Virginia, Maryland and the District . . . February retirements from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing: George W. Dove, plate printer, 47 years' service; Charles Doughty, custodian of lockers, 31 years'; Mrs. Lucy E. McDonald, examiner, 23 years'; Roy J. Mickey, machinists' helper, 41 years'; George A. Turner, distributor, 21 years'; Robert E. Wiley, checker and tableman, 21 years'; Mrs. Sarah E. Manning, examiner, 20 years'; Mrs. Naomi G. Johnson, examiner, 18 years', and James V. Hurd, 24 years' service.

Bob Burns Says—

"Most men is love slackers that ought to be hit over the head with a baseball bat!" That's what a famous woman doctor has to say about us males. Accordin' to her, the "Great American Lover" is a myth. He don't exist. Now, I hope this lady didn't get disappointed in love herself. If she did, she's probably lookin' at life through a blue-colored microscope. An' that would make us men look like pretty poor specimens.

But if we're gonna git hit over the head with baseball bats every time we don't make love the way a woman thinks we should, it's gonna be pretty tough on us. Personally, I think that's carryin' the great American game of baseball too far. Jes' imagine steppin' up to home plate an' gettin' ready to pitch your wife a kiss an' havin' her take a swing at your offerin'! She may make a home run but she's got you runnin' in the opposite direction. Baseball bats leave a more lastin' impression than chinaware. Especially when they're used on the head of the house. Have a heart, ladies; we may not be great American lovers, but you kin get a lot further with us by givin' us our bases on "bawls." There ain't a man livin' who can stand seein' a woman in tears! An' when this happens, there's allus a good chance of callin' the game on account of rain.

"Private Lives" Reveals Low-Down on Hitler, This Sunday

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

For those who love the game of contract, any off-shoot of it, such as midget bridge, five-suit bridge, solitaire bridge or the game described below, is pale and insipid by comparison, even distasteful. But at the risk of offending the purists we report Mrs. Ruby E. Raddatz's development of the game, as it may prove interesting to some.

The game is called "duchess bridge," and it contains the one intriguing feature of five-suit bridge. the "kitty" card, which adds an exciting variety to hand patterns.

In "duchess bridge" the joker is placed face up in the middle of the table before each hand is dealt. It ranks higher than the ace of any suit and can be counted as one honor in valuing the hand of any player naming a new suit, but it is not counted as an honor in scoring.

There is no change in the bidding. In playing, the player at declarer's left leads as in ordinary bridge then dummy spreads his hand, face up, on the table. Declarer puts the joker in either his own hand or the dummy, discarding from that hand, face up, any card he does not want.

In no trump it can be used as the highest card in any suit, only after all the cards in that suit have been played from the hand in which it has been placed.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable
WEST DEALER

	♠ Q 10 7 5 3 ♡ K 2 ◇ None ♣ J 10 9 8 4 2
♠ None ♡ A 9 4 ◇ A K 10 8 6 4 ♣ K Q 7 3	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ A J 8 6 2 ♡ None ◇ Q 9 7 5 3 2 ♣ A 6
	♠ K 9 4 ♡ Q J 10 8 7 6 5 3 ◇ J ♣ 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2 ◇	3 ♣	4 ♣	4 ♡
5 ◇	Pass	7 ◇	Pass
Pass	7 ♡	Pass	Pass
Dbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♣.

Even without a "kitty," the cards can run wild. The hand in today's box is a freak. North and South made a profitable save at seven hearts, against their opponents' bid of seven diamonds. They lost a mere 700 points instead of the 2,300 points they would have lost had East and West been allowed to play the hand.

B. H. Davies, expert, who watched the hand at a club game, analyzes the bidding like this:

"When the opponents are vulnerable, they always stand the better chance of securing rubber ultimately, since the chances of a game to either side are even at each deal and the vulnerable side is a game in hand.

"Therefore, a heavy sacrifice against a small slam contract by the vulnerable pair is not attractive The small slam may conceivably be defeated by straight defense; if cast-iron, its bidders take, for example, a 700 penalty from a sacrifice bid instead of 1,500 or 1,600 points for small slam and rubber; but if they eventually secure game, they will take another 600 or 800 points with the rubber and the sacrifice has shown no substantial economy, if any.

"The grand slam bonus is probably too low. It is scaled at 1,000 (non-vulnerable) and 1,500 (vulnerable) to protect a pair of Yarboroughs against a heavy loss through a mere freak of fortune. But considering the extreme skill required to perceive, bid and (possibly) make a grand slam, such defense as this recorded sacrifice is perhaps too easy.

"In framing these 700 points sacrifices the mathematical odds in favor of the vulnerable pair ultimately securing the rubber should be modified by consideration of personnel. The books assume that we are always pitted against two master players. In actual fact, many of our opponents cannot bid or make in play any game contract which is not cast-iron; and vulnerable opponents of this inferior caliber do not make all the games which are there to be called and made."

Discretion of Bobby Coon

Who wise discretion doth possess
—Old Mother Nature.

Did or did not Bobby Coon hear a faint sound from that dark bulk high above him? He knew it was a nest although in the moonlight against the sky it was no more than a black mass. With ears cocked, Bobby Coon listened intently. He didn't hear that sound again. Perhaps he had only imagined it. Could there possibly be young birds in that nest? He scratched an ear thoughtfully.

"It couldn't be. Too early," he decided. He couldn't think of any one who would have young as early as this in the spring. Why, it was early for eggs, let alone young. Even Redtail the Hawk would hardly be likely to have eggs yet, and the Redtails were among the first birds to set up housekeeping. Then he remembered something. He stopped scratching that ear. "Owls," said he, under his breath. "I've heard that Hooty, biggest of the family around here, has eggs before winter is over, and I know that Longear, his smaller cousin, nests about now, I found a nest once with eggs in it, and it was about as early as this. Anyway, the trees were bare."

He looked up at the nest speculatively. He was very, very hungry. Eggs would be wonderful. Young birds would be even better. Was there anybody at home? He could not tell from just looking up. One of the owners of that nest might be sitting on it. To climb to that nest would be no great trouble. You know, Bobby is very much at home in trees. But a fight with Hooty or Mrs. Hooty—perhaps both—up in a tree was something to think of—and without pleasure.

Bobby walked to the foot of the tree and stood up on his hind feet. He reached up with his hands and scratched on the trunk. If any one was at home they would be sure to hear that scratching and think some one was climbing the tree. If they did that, they would investigate. They would try to find out who was climbing that tree. No one so much as poked a head over the edge of that nest to look down. Bobby dug his claws in and scrambled a little way up, and he made considerable noise doing it. Still no signs of any one at home.

There Bobby stopped and considered. Should he keep on going up and look into that nest? If he did and it should prove to be the nest of the Hootys, and they should find him there, it would be just too bad for him. Yes, sir, it would be just too bad. Not that Bobby Coon is not a good fighter. He is. He is one of the best. He hasn't a cowardly hair on him. His courage is of the finest. He will face an enemy twice his size without showing a particle of fear, and, in the fight that follows, usually wins. But to fight effectively, he needs to be on the ground.

So Bobby considered whether he should keep on, taking the chance that he would not be seen at the nest, or wait and make sure whose nest it was. Wisdom, born of long experience, counseled him to be discreet and wait. Reluctantly he climbed down. He went under the branches of a hemlock tree. There, where he could see but himself be unseen, he prepared to wait. He didn't have to wait long. In fact, he didn't have to wait at all. Hardly had he made himself comfortable when Mrs. Hoooty arrived at the nest. She had brought food. What it was, Bobby Coon couldn't see, but he knew it was food, and right away he knew, too, that there were young in that nest, for Mrs. Hooty at once began feeding them—or one, anyway.

Hooty arrived. He had brought a Mouse. There was considerable fussing up there at that nest. Then the two left together to hunt for more food. A few minutes later Bobby left. He might succeed in getting a dinner up there, and he might be caught there. Discretion whispered that it was better to go hungry a while longer than to be battered and torn. He quietly slipped away, thankful that he was unseen.

Benes Asserts Dictatorships Are Ebbing

Regimes Have Passed Culmination, Reaction Approaches, He Says

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 3.—Dr. Eduard Benes, former president of Czecho-Slovakia, said today only power politics sustain the European authoritarian regimes and the failures of the dictatorships were leading to a reaction.

"Politically, morally, economically and socially these regimes have passed today their culmination point," he said in an address to the Union League Club.

Sees Reaction Approaching

"The only section of their policy which continues to give them new force and power," he added, "is their successes in international policy and in general European and world power-policy."

Dr. Benes, who is a visiting professor at the University of Chicago, said the postwar period provided democracy with a great opportunity to flower and that it marked "a great progress in civilization."

He viewed the subsequent reaction to democracy in Europe as a natural development in political evolution and opined that now the dictatorships' "mistakes, failures and inefficacy provide inevitably new reaction."

Conflict in the Far East and in Ethiopia, the occupation of Austria, the Spanish civil war and the German-Czecho-Slovak incidents of last fall brought European democratic regimes almost to their lowest decline, he said.

"Here and there, there may be another democratic collapse, but on the whole, the period of new reaction of democracy against the authoritarian regimes in Europe does now approach," he continued.

Stephen Porter Inducted as Fire Chief; Battalion Leader Weaver Becomes Deputy

Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter pledged he would follow the footsteps of his "comrade and predecessor" at induction ceremonies yesterday in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The new chief, scarred from many battles with fires, is a veteran of 27 years with the Fire Department.

Paying tribute to Chief Charles E. Schrom, who died Monday, Commissioner Hazen brought tears to the eyes of many, as well as to his own, as he spoke in memory of his close friend.

He charged Porter to "always continue the fine work that has been the reputation of our Fire Department."

Battalion Chief Benjamin W. Weaver was made a deputy chief engineer to succeed John Carrington, who died recently while serving as acting chief during Schrom's illness.

The new chief is 51, and has a son in the Fire Department. He was first cited for bravery in line of duty when he rescued a baby from a fire in 1918.

Appointed to the service as a private on October 15, 1911, he was made a chief's aide in 1921, promoted to sergeant in 1925, to lieutenant in 1928, to captain in 1931 and battalion chief in 1932. Preceding his appointment as chief, Porter was drillmaster at the fire school.

He was awarded the blue ribbon decoration in 1923 for his rescue work in the Knickerbocker Theater disaster. He lives with his wife and four children at 1149 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Deputy Chief Weaver, 56, was assigned as a private on October 16, 1900. He was made a sergeant in 1902, lieutenant in 1905, captain in 1916, acting battalion chief in 1917 and battalion chief in 1927.

D. C. Woman Sponsor At Tanker Launching

Two high-speed tankers, second and third in a series of 12 being built by Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and the Maritime Commission, will be launched today. The Maritime Commission is paying 28 per cent of the cost to meet expense of the fleet's national defense features.

Mrs. Howard L. Vickery, of Washington, will sponsor the Markay at Kearny, N. J., and Mrs. Charles Kurz of Philadelphia, will christen the Seakay at Chester, Pa.

Conference Hears Ex-Missionary

The Rev. Vincent A. Gowen, former missionary to the Philippines, spoke yesterday at the Conference of the Northern Convocation of the Washington Archiocese at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase, Md.

"The native Igorots," he said, "are a primitive people suddenly forced to cross 3,000 years of history in one generation. Christianity is helping them choose the best of the West and yet preserves the best of their own culture.

Thomas E. Robertson, secretary of the convocation, announced that 26 churches and chapels were represented. The sessions yesterday concluded a two-day conference. The delegates met Thursday at the Pinkney Memorial Church, Hyattsville.

Mahlon Peck Honored

Mahlon F. Peck, of 1710 M street northwest, has received the master of arts degree at the University of Buffalo, it was announced yesterday.
